● THE UNJUST SOCIETY ●

'They Built Slums To Help Our People'

This is the final article in a a three-part condensation of Indian author Harold Cardinal's controversial new book, The Unjust Society.

By HAROLD CARDINAL

The former minister of Indian affairs, Arthur Laing, may well be regarded as the most notoriously artful minister in the history of Canadian confederation for his efficient use of statistics to paper over the inadequacies of his department.

For example, supposedly to meet the housing crisis which for decades had been plaguing Indians in Canada, he dramatically announced a $112 million program over a five-year period.

After suitable fanfare and a well-publicized start, the time span was expanded quietly, without any publicity at all, so that the annual spending scarcely exceeded that of previous years.

The impression carefully given to the Canadian people was that something important was happening to meet the housing needs of the Indians.

The whole program was wasted. The housing needs of the Indians are greater than ever today and even those houses built for $112 million during the Laing program proved virtually useless to the people occupying them.

●

They were never better than marginal slum dwellings and often proved worse — ill-conceived architecturally, unsound engineeringly and located disastrously. Nor was anything further done to meet the rapidly expanding needs for Indian housing.

Mr. Laing's ignorance of the Indians in Canada in the mid-sixties was exceeded only by his arrogance. He had his foot in his mouth so often he surely must have learned to love shoe leather.

His idea of a thoughtful solution was to tell Indians to get out and pull themselves up by their bootstraps. He never bothered to make sure they had bootstraps.

His greatest contribution to the Indian situation came about because his silly doctrinal statements helped bring Indians from one coast to the other closer together.

After the election of Pierre Elliott Trudeau as leader of the Liberal party, then as Prime Minister of Canada, a new program of government-native consultation was drawn up. These plans called for the minister to travel extensively to meet with Indians in every part of the country.

●

Indian leaders shuddered at the thought of a dialogue with Mr. Laing. Fortunately for all the Indians, the new prime minister called a June election, and the consultation meetings were delayed.

Following the Liberal victory at the polls, Mr. Laing was given another portfolio and in his place two young members of Parliament assumed responsibility. Jean Chretien became the minister of Indian affairs and northern development, and Robert Andras, minister without portfolio responsible for the development of new objectives.

Indian leaders, briefly hopeful that Mr. Trudeau's Just Society might include native peoples, were ready to work with the new ministers. In a courageous speech in September 1968 in Toronto, Mr. Andras vowed that political leadership would supersede bureaucratic leadership.

●

Unhappily for the Indians, the Andras promise was never fulfilled. Mr. Andras lost his round with the mandarins in Ottawa, and the Indians lost with him. The much-promised dialogue that was to develop through the so-called consultation program proved to be, in the end, a fiasco that wasted the time of the Indian leaders.

The dialogue meetings began on schedule with the two novice ministers hitting the consultation trail like John Wayne and Gary Cooper to discover which path the Indians wanted to follow. For both Chretien and Andras this was their first real exposure to Indian peoples.

For them, it turned out to be the fork in the trail. Andras, not being tied down to a department, was able to get closer to the Indian people.

Volunteer Army Saves Coho Spawn

By PAT DUFOUR

A conservation catastrophe was averted Friday at Goldstream when a small army of volunteers answered an SOS from the fisheries department.

For weeks chum and coho salmon have been making their usual spawning run up the stream.

Most of them have laid their eggs — and most of them, as expected, have died. This is natural.

What wasn't natural was that November has been abnormally dry and the stream, usually swollen from rains, was drying out.

Fisheries inspector Lloyd Gudewill explained, "The beds had dried so much that thousands of eggs were exposed. If these weren't protected by water before the frosts came they would be killed."

AN EMERGENCY

He rushed to get volunteers to build dams that would hold the waters and give the eggs their chance to survive.

The response was overwhelming.

Within two hours the banks of Goldstream were flanked with people, armed with shovels and the will to save a part of their natural heritage.

Among them were members of fish and game groups, the Amalgamated Conservation Society, the Pacific Trollers' Association, housewives and teen-agers who rallied to a radio appeal.

Gudewill then called John Erb, civil defence co-ordinator. "I needed 500 bags — and in a hurry."

Before an hour had passed, Erb had supplied the bags, with the help of the provincial department of highways.

By late afternoon Gudewill heaved a sigh of relief. The job was done and thousands of future salmon had been saved.

He emphasized that no blame for the emergency should be laid on the fact that water from the watershed had to be cut off.

"It's an act of God, no one could have prevented it. When we needed help in the summer, Ron Upward (the water commissioner) did everything he could."

One teen-ager, asked why she spent the day filling sandbags and sloshing through water, was slightly hesitant.

"Gee, I'm not too sure. I don't even fish. But it's important to a lot of people. I guess that's what really counts."

UP TO EVERYONE

Howard English, 6470 Pat Bay Highway, had no doubts.

"When any of our natural resources are threatened it's up to everyone to do something about it if he can."

Surveying his one-day army, Gudewill said:

"They're all wonderful people. I've never seen anything like it. This was the worst situation I've seen in the 23-odd years I've been with the department."

TEAR GAS REPORTED POTENTIALLY LETHAL

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — A new international scientific report cast doubt Friday on the validity of President Nixon's decision to exempt tear gas from his ban on the use of chemical and biological weapons in warfare.

According to the report by a group of 18 consultants to the World Health Organization, no sharp distinction can be drawn between lethal and incapacitating agents, and prolonged exposure to mere harassing agents could be lethal.

Nixon's Nov. 25 announcement of the general plan, while praised on most counts, was criticized at the United Nations for its failure to include tear gas.

DISTRICT VOTING

Turnout Heavy

If the flow of voters to the polls this morning is any indicator, Victoria area residents are turning out in record numbers today to elect municipal representatives and decide the fate of Sunday sports and movies.

Three hours after the polls opened in Victoria more than twice as many people had cast ballots as during the first three hours of 1968 voting.

With a four-man race for mayor 2,626 people had been to the polls. In 1968 with no mayoralty contest, there were 1,046 voters out in the first three hours.

It's the same story in Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

To 11 a.m. in Oak Bay 1,030 people had cast ballots compared to 501 voters in 1968.

The vote total in Oak Bay is running about 100 ahead of the 1967 total, the last year in which there was a mayoralty campaign.

Up to 10 a.m. in Esquimalt there were 235 votes cast, compared to 164 votes in 1967, the last year in which there was a mayoralty contest.

While Saanich vote totals were not available a deputy returning officer reported indications are that despite the lack of a mayoralty race in that municipality, the turnout at the polls will be high. Polls in all municipalities are open until 8 p.m.

Bennett to Push Guaranteed Income

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett goes to the constitutional conference in Ottawa Monday to prove he means business in his drive for a guaranteed annual income.

In a statement of the province's conference proposals released here Friday, Bennett:

- Called for a national royal commission on a guaranteed income;
- Modified a demand for a complete return of direct tax fields to the provinces from Ottawa by suggesting Ottawa stay in the field "to the extent necessary to finance a nationally administered guaranteed income plan."
- Suggested a postponement of constitutional discussions on distribution of powers in the fields of income security and social services until a royal commission study is carried out.

He also indicated B.C. should consent to give Ottawa the specific power it needs to contribute to a guaranteed annual income plan if Ottawa would commit itself to implementing such a plan in the event it is found to be feasible by a royal commission.

In other major points, Bennett requested special low-cost capital be made available by Ottawa to B.C. to help meet the needs created by the migration of an unusually large number of people from other provinces to B.C.

OPPOSES OTHERS

And he placed B.C. in opposition to other provinces, including Ontario, which have demanded the "fiscal equivalent" for any federal-provincial programs into which they choose not to enter.

"British Columbia considers 'opting out' with the fiscal equivalent is contrary to the concept of co-operative federalism and if carried to the limit, would ultimately destroy the federal system," Bennett said in the statement which he read to reporters.

Bennett called for a royal commission to undertake a study "with a view to the establishment of a comprehensive program for the rehabilitation and human betterment of needy Canadians by means of a guaranteed annual income to replace equalization payments and present welfare programs presently administered by all levels of government."

He said the money spent and the bureaucracy developed to administer a multiplicity of welfare programs is "staggering to contemplate."

He said "a whole new concept" is needed to assist human betterment, avoid duplication of services and provide uniformity of services across the country.

"Such a program would act as a catalyst to the initiative

SANTA'S BAG FILLING FOR ASIA'S CHILDREN

The inner meaning of Christmas—the spirit of sharing and goodwill to all—is embodied in the Children of Asia Fund.

From Salt Spring Island to Victoria, from elderly ladies to schoolchildren, contributions are adding to the bank account that feeds and clothes unfortunate youngsters in war and disaster-torn Asian countries.

Infiltration Rate Rises in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Defence Secretary David Packard said Friday that North Vietnamese infiltration has increased in South Vietnam "rather substantially," but "progress in Vietnamization is such that our withdrawal is going to continue."

He said at the same time that "U.S. commanders are concerned about possible North Vietnamese thrusts into South Vietnam."

Packard, who recently made an on-the-spot check of the Vietnam situation, refused to discuss either numbers or timetables in connection with further U.S. troop withdrawals as South Vietnamese government troops take over more of the fighting.

SOLDIERS TOLD TO BE KIND

SAIGON (Reuters) — American officers are re-emphasizing to their men the necessity for proper treatment and care of civilians and other non-combatants in South Vietnam, a United States military spokesman said today.

The spokesman did not specifically link the re-indoctrination of American troops with the recent reports of the alleged My Lai massacre of South Vietnamese peasants by U.S. infantry in northern Quang Ngai province last year.

He said under questioning that all American servicemen coming to Vietnam will spend their first week in the country receiving instructions on the care and treatment of civilians and classes on South Vietnamese customs and traditions.

Last Liquor Hearing Here After New Year

VANCOUVER (CP) — Royal commissioners investigating British Columbia's liquor laws hope to present their full report and recommendations to the government in time for the Jan. 22 sitting of the provincial legislature, Commissioner Ed Lawson said in an interview Friday. The three commissioners will hold one more public hearing in Victoria on Jan. 5.

Between the archbishop's martini recipe and the scientist's charts it was an interesting afternoon at the final Vancouver liquor commission hearings Thursday.

Out of it came some useful intelligence for the drinker. Examples:

Drink your whisky straight — dilution gets you drunk faster.

Fat men can't handle their alcohol any better than thin men.

Don't bother drinking olive oil before going off on a toot. Not only is that coating-the-stomach theory a myth, but it will get you drunk faster.

Drinking milk can help, however.

The kindly hostess who insists you stay an hour after your last drink may be just preparing you to fall into the arms of the police sniff squad.

Carbonated or fruit-based mixers are better than water — if you have to mix at all.

These hints emerged from the testimony of Dr. Clifford Chappel, president of the Bio-Research Laboratories Ltd. His testimony was in the aid of beer — he was appearing at part of the presentation of the Brewers Association of Canada.

The point of Dr. Chappel's testimony, complete with charts, references to learned journals and scientific jargon, was to show that beer is better than other beverages and should continue to be favored by lower taxes.

The three-man commission, which ended its current round of hearings Thursday, was skeptical about some of the claims for beer made by Dr. Chappel. Hearings resume Jan. 5.

. . . BENNETT SEEKS GUARANTEED PAY

of low income Canadians . . . to go on to develop their skills and improve their lot and that of their families by their own efforts," he said.

GRANTS FAILED

Equalization payments from the federal government "to certain provincial governments" have largely failed to ensure a minimum level of economic well-being Bennett said.

The brief continues the province's insistence that equalization be distributed in the form of payments to people rather than to governments.

Bennett said the federal government should not entirely vacate the direct fields of income and corporation taxes and succession or estate taxes, as previously demanded. Bennett argues these are historically provincial fields.

Ottawa should stay in the field to the extent necessary to finance a national guaranteed income plan, Bennett said.

He gave no indication what portion of those taxes Ottawa might require to finance a plan.

But he said a substantial part of the federal cost burden would be removed because Ottawa would be giving up payments to persons and governments "such as family and youth allowances, old age security, guaranteed income supplement plans, Canada Assistance Plan, equilization payments to provincial governments and medicare payments.

"In their place would be established a guaranteed annual income for all Canadians.

"The effect would be a substantial decrease in federal government revenue but it would be offset by a substantial decrease in federal government spending responsibilities," he said.

Until Ottawa gets out of direct taxation, Bennett said, it would have the right to continue implementing shared-cost programs in "the national interest, which, strictly speaking, come under exclusive provincial jurisdiction."

NATIONAL CONSENSUS

But there must be "a national consensus" in favor a program before it is implemented; adequate safeguards to ensure that Ottawa doesn't leave the provinces holding the burden once the program is started; and no fiscal equivalent should be paid to provinces who decide to opt out.

Bennett can expect opposition to this view from Ontario, which protested strongly the refusal of Ottawa to let it have the equivalent of federal taxes collected there for the medicare plan while Ontario, was not a member.

Bennett said the proposals to be presented to the conference next week are not intended to reiterate B.C.'s general position set out last year, when he called for the division of Canada into five regions.

He made no reference to his boundary proposals Friday.

The brief reviews the argument that income taxes, corporation and estate taxes belong to the provinces but were occupied by the federal government as a result of the pressures created by the first and second world wars.

In a realistic vein it accepts that so long as Ottawa occupies the fields it should have the constitutional powers to make conditional grants to the provinces for important programs such as medicare and hospitalization.

The brief recognizes that "if we are to have a strong and united country then we must bring those materially less fortunate Canadians up to at least a minimum level of economic well being."

MORE BENEFIT

More people in depressed areas would benefit from a guaranteed income plan than would be the case in prosperous areas, he said, but he stressed that Ottawa depends for much of its revenue on the maintenance of economic activity in the high growth areas such as B.C.

He said B.C. as the highest growth area has "unique problems" caused by the influx of people who create a higher unemployment rate.

"British Columbia requests the federal government make low-cost capital available for job creating projects in housing, water, sewage, pollution, school and hospital facilities."

Bennett said he is going to Ottawa in the spirit of co-operative federalism and in the confidence that Canda's best years lie ahead.

Salt Spring Drive Aids Christmas Fund

Two women, in their 80s, have raised $75 for the Children of Asia Christmas Fund, through their ragpicking efforts on Salt Spring Island.

A class at Gibbins Road Annex Primary School in Duncan has been raising and selling gerbils (Mongolian desert mice) to provide milk and barley for starving children in Korea and India.

A member of the Esquimalt Women's Institute has manufactured a half-ton of soap to be distributed to poverty-stricken families half a world away.

These are only a few examples of ways in which concerned people respond each year to the appeal for funds of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

The USC has conducted the Children of Asia campaign annually in Victoria for the last 17 years.

A small amount goes a long way to alleviate suffering.

Five independent schools in the Shawnigan Lake-Duncan area plan to raise $800 through car washes, dances and concerts.

The money will be used to operate a Calcutta medical dispensary to be taken over by the USC from the Salvation Army.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, USC executive director, explained that the dispensary is designed for the worst malnutrition cases in the city's slums.

Each week a doctor will see 25 of these children, pavement-dwellers who have never known a full stomach or a real home.

Schools involved include Cliffside Preparatory School, Shawnigan Boys' School, Strathcona Lodge School, all of Shawnigan Lake; Brentwood College in Mill Bay, and Queen Margaret School in Duncan.

Dr. Hitschmanova said the very young and the very old are the most concerned Canadians.

"Perhaps they are most sensitive because they stand at the threshold or the very end of life. Perhaps they take more time to imagine how perpetual hunger and illness must hurt."

Whatever the reason, it is the old with a portion of their small pension or the young with their carefully nurtured pennies who make up a great percentage of the USC fund total each year.

This year the USC is attempting to raise $1.3 million in money and gifts for more than 100 projects in eight countries.

While the total now stands at $1 million, Dr. Hitschmanova is not at all certain the goal will be reached.

"The farmers who have always been most generous do not have the liquid cash this year," she said.

Still the gifts of money, clothing and quilts are trickling in.

In Victoria cash contributions to the campaign can be sent to the Times office, 2631 Douglas, or beginning Monday can be deposited with the Yates-Douglas branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Late-Night Sniper Remanded After Entering Guilty Plea

A 22-year-old city man pleaded guilty in court Friday to discharging a firearm in a manner dangerous to other persons and was remanded to Dec. 12 for sentence.

Stephen Curila, 547 Niagara, was arrested early Friday with a companion after an incident involving a shot being fired at a man getting out of his car.

Court was told the accused with his companion had been in a downtown lounge Thursday night when the accused was involved in a fight with a third person.

FOLLOWED CAR

Later, while driving on Douglas, Curila thought he recognized the person he was fighting with in a car ahead of his and followed this car to 385 Burnside West.

Curila intimidated his companion into firing a shot from a .303 Lee Enfield rifle in his car in the direction of the followed driver as he was getting out of his car, court tas told.

The shooting occurred at 1:45 a.m. Friday and the two were apprehended by police shortly after.

When police approached the parked car, the accused threw a rifle from the backseat into the bushes.

A Sooke man was charged with discharging a firearm in a manner endangering other persons and was remanded to Dec. 10 for election of trial.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

It is once again time for stomach ulcers. Those who suffer from duodenal ulcers have probably been having a better time of it during the warm weather months. During the past five or six weeks, however, doctors have once again noted an increase in the number of patients who complain of a pain in the stomach.

Ulcers act up in peculiar ways, especially during the change of seasons. If you were suffering from stomach ulcers last spring it may be that you had complete relief from suffering when summer arrived. And all summer long and well into autumn you may have been moved to hope that you would never suffer from duodenal ulcers again. Then came winter and the pain.

Medical researchers and doctors don't know the reasons why, but they are well aware that change of seasons triggers the suffering. Pretty soon winter will be here in full blast and many ulcers will quiet down until spring, when they will flare up again.

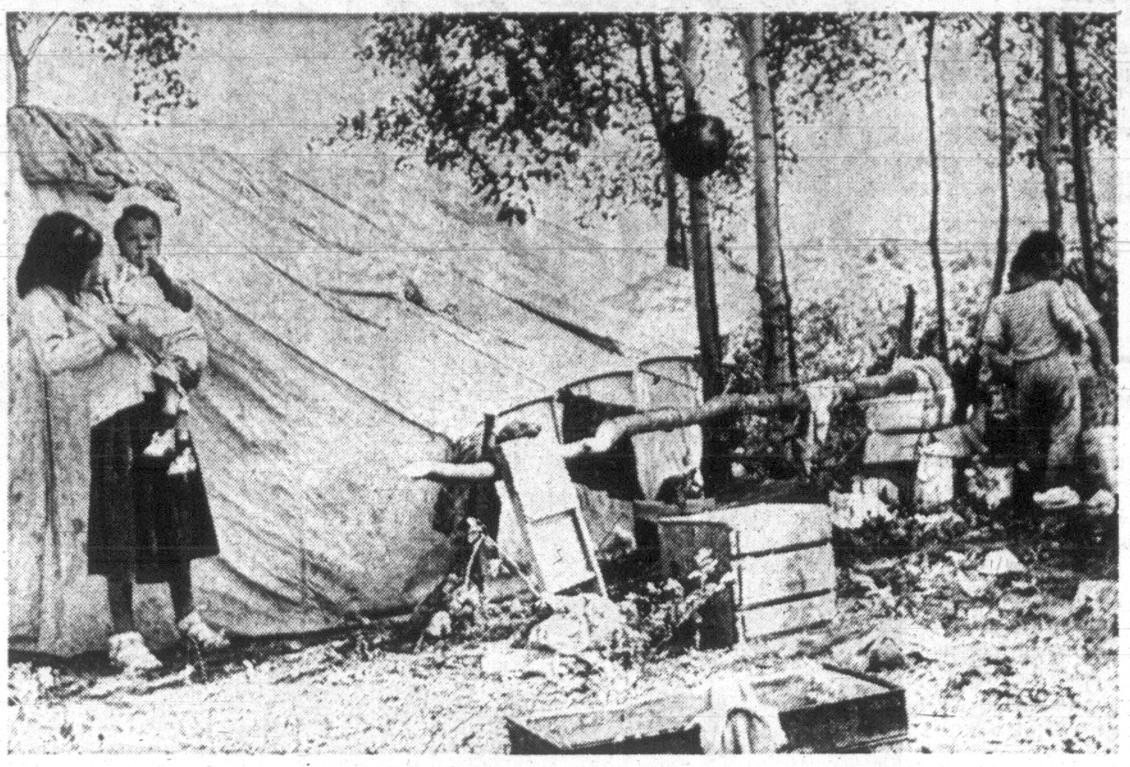
'Slums Built For Indians'



INDIAN HOUSING . . . some have to live in a tent

Indians everylwhere made it obvious that they were interested in treaty rights, aboriginal rights and settlement of land claims first and foremost.

Chretien, perhaps because of his administrative responsibilities or perhaps because of his total dependence upon the faith in the mandarins of the Department of Indian Affairs, was taken in by the bureaucrats and received little real exposure to the Indians.

Indian leaders and their people had held real hope for a time that the consultation meetings would signify an about-face in treatment from the government and that a true dialogue could be started with the political leaders of the country.

However, before too much time passed, Indians could see it was the same old story. Everywhere the bureaucrats were succeeding in blocking any genuine dialogue.

The government had announced in the House of Commons, with a great air of righteousness, that it was embarking on a policy of consultation with the Indians and that there would be no changes in relation to the Indians until the consultation meetings were concluded.

Suddenly, in September 1968, the minister of Indian Affairs reversed his course and made a surprise announcement that he was reorganizing his department.

Even Mr. Andras was caught off base, for he, like Chretien, had solemnly pledged not once, not twice, but again and again that any changes which took place in the department would come about only through and after consultation with the Indian people.

The announced reorganization surprised and discouraged many Indian leaders. Not only did they feel that faith had once again been broken, but they suspected that the changes were in line with changes the government was planning in the Indian Act.

To the dismayed Indians a mockery was made of the consultation meetings which already had started. These meetings were supposed to be preliminary sessions at which the Indian people and the government would discuss possible changes to come.

●

Suddenly, changes affecting all Indians were imposed. In retrospect, it is clear that the reorganization of the department implemented in September 1968 was directly related to the aims set out in the federal white paper of June 1969.

The inescapable conclusion is that the formulation of that policy came long before any results could be expected from the phony consultation meetings. The meetings thus stand exposed as the purest hypocrisy.

In the course of their preparation for the consultation meetings, the leaders of the Indian Association of Alberta recognized that they would need the expert guidance of resource people in many areas of Indian life, in the legal field, in education, in economic and social development, in community planning, in nearly every aspect of life.

Both Alberta and Manitoba Indian organizations sought such top level counsel. Both organizations realized that financial assistance was necessary to pay for high-quality guidance.

Both organizations made requests to the federal government for money for such consultants. Both explained the need and the reasoning behind the need.

●

Indian affairs departmental officials maintained that such consultants were not necessary since the meetings were to be of a preliminary nature. The attitude of Mr. Robert Battle, an assistant deputy minister, was typically astonishing.

To our specific request for legal counsel, he offered first a typical bureaucratic answer — no money was available since none had been budgeted for such a purpose.

To this he added blandly that lawyers were not needed anyhow, since the consultation meetings did not pertain to any legal matters.

If Mr. Battle did not consider the Indian Act a legal matter, I would like to know what his definition of law is.

In any case, if the poor fellow is not aware that the Indian Act is a legal document, I find it difficult to understand how he ever managed to become an assistant deputy minister in the Department of Indian Affairs.

The Indian organizations got the same bureaucratic runaround from the deputy minister, John A. MacDonald.

Consequently, the Indian people were forced to go into the consultation meetings without proper resources with which to make their case.

They entered the meetings with repeated assurances from the ministers that the first round was a preliminary get-together mainly designed to enable them to get acquainted with the ministers from Ottawa and to enter into exploratory discussions.

●

It was understood by the Indian people that a national meeting would be convened, where the preliminary results of the regional meetings could be assessed, and after that, a second round of dialogues would get into the gut problems.

In December 1968 regional consultation meetings were held in Edmonton and in Winnipeg.

The national consultation meetings which followed were convened in Ottawa in April of 1969.

●

Once again federal bureaucrats showed unmistakably what little importance they really attached to our meetings. They had the gall to arbitrarily set the delegate number from each of the provinces without bothering to ask the respective leaders for their opinions as to a proper representational formula.

The truth was obvious. They didn't care what we thought.

At the five-day conference, our leaders across Canada agreed that the Indians of Canada would not discuss the administrative framework as set out in the Indian Act until the question of Indian rights in general had been settled satisfactorily.

●

Indian leaders unanimously agreed that a general declaration of intent containing the principles and spirit of the treaties and aboriginal rights would have to be adopted before any move by the federal government in the direction of new Indian legislation could be considered.

Consequently, no discussion took place at that conference about changes in the Indian Act. The entire Indian assembly once more made it clear to the government: "Settle our rights, then talk legislation."

In spite of our repeated and documented efforts to make our position clear to the government, in the early summer of 1969 the minister proudly produced his infamous white paper, proposing entirely unacceptable plans for future government-Indian relations, plans that amount to total assimilation of the Indian, plans that spell cultural genocide.

●

We could only assume, and it later was confirmed, that the author of the Just Society, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau himself, approved of this travesty of justice.

If it is not now clear to the honorable minister, Mr. Chretien, and to his deputy minister, Mr. MacDonald, that we will not talk with the government until the question of our rights is settled, then only God knows how to communicate with them, and if He does know how, surely He would have told them by now that they had not understood us.

DOCTORS AID NORTHERNERS

WINNIPEG (CP) — A plan by 30 doctors to provide free medical help for a Caribbean island has been revamped to instead assist northern Manitoba residents.

Under the program developed by doctors at Grace Hospital, two physicians leave Monday for the first of week-long tours of northern nursing stations.

They are to be followed on a rotating basis by the 28 others with the federal government paying professional fees at $106 a day.

Dr. Norman McCreath, Grace medical director, said in an interview the doctors have decided to pool the fees which might be used to carry out their original idea to provide service to the island of Santa Lucia.

"There had been so much talk about the medical needs in the north of our own country that the doctors started rethinking and our planning turned north instead of south," he said.

Even at $1849,* it's not cheap.

There's no question that we could make it cheap.

And make ourselves quite a bundle by charging the same price.

It would be easy.

We could cut the number of inspectors we use to inspect every part of every car from over 8,000 to say, under 4,000.

That done, we'd get rid of the 560 inspectors we employ to inspect our inspectors.

We could save a heap of money by scrimping here and there on the construction of our body. (Right now, it's the most expensively made in the small car world.)

We'd cut the amount and quality of paint we use in half. (From over 12 pounds to 6. From 4 thick coats to 2 watery ones.)

Probably we'd close down a big section of our destruction test laboratory. (A multi-million dollar house of horrors, where parts are subjected to endless torture tests.)

While we were at it, we'd definitely relax the standards we set for our suppliers. Instead of inhumanly rejecting entire shipments of 10,000 parts or more the way we do now, because a few parts aren't exactly (and we mean exactly) perfect.

In fact, if we really went the whole route, we could possibly (and this is just an educated guess) turn out a small car not much different than anybody else's small car.

And the thought has crossed our minds. But somewhere along the line it was rejected.

Ottawa Speaks for Canada

RECENT EVENTS IN QUEBEC — highlighted by very ill-advised interference from the government of France — have drawn attention to a problem of Canadian Confederation. That is the desire of some provinces to play a direct role in contacts with nations abroad — in other words, to share with the federal government the power of sovereignty in foreign relations.

Various arguments have been advanced to support the contention that provincial governments have, or should have, the power to enter into agreements with sovereign foreign states, particularly in regard to fields which, on the domestic level, come within the constitutional jurisdiction of the provinces. The unacceptable meddling of President de Gaulle, and to some extent his successor, President Pompidou, has added acrimony to this question in Canada. It was no doubt to clarify the whole issue in respect to Quebec and all the provinces that Mr. Jean-Pierre Goyer, the parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Sharp, recently detailed the Canadian position to Parliament.

Mr. Goyer made it plain that both in constitutional and international law, the central government is the only one with competence in foreign affairs, and this is as true of nations with federal constitutions as it is of those, such as Britain or France, which enjoy a single-level governmental system. Mr. Goyer rejected what he called "pseudo-legal arguments" which try to assert a right of the provincial governments in foreign affairs, and showed that, far from there being a claimed loosening of custom in this respect, the world's nations are reaffirming "the principle that in a federal country only the government of that country can interpret its constitution to foreign lands."

External sovereignty of the provinces would result in chaos, Mr. Goyer said. It would mean in effect that the real interpretation of our constitution would rest with foreign governments through their relations with the provinces. Canada could present no unified face to the other countries; we would eventually lose effective standing or influence in international affairs.

As one example, Mr. Goyer suggested that sovereign provinces could claim the right to send their separate delegates to United Nations bodies, destroying the balance of membership and inviting other lands to claim equal plurality. India, for instance, might constitute itself so as to send a hundred or more representatives to UNESCO — obviously not a viable situation.

But the provinces are not ruled out of all participation in Canada's dealing with other nations. Indeed, the federal government has already taken steps in this direction, by ensuring that Quebec should have spokesmen on delegations to international conferences on education, for instance.

In prior consultation on policy, in selection of provincial members to serve on Canadian delegations, in seeking a full expression of opinion at home in order that a valid Canadian consensus may be presented abroad — in such procedures the national government has sought to give the provinces a voice without infringing the full and exclusive power of the federal administration to speak for Canada.

Mr. Goyer's address, delivered last week, was a clear and reasoned elucidation of Ottawa's position. It should be the definitive word on this subject, and find approval with all Canadians who do not wish their national voice and presence to be fragmented by parochial interests.

Red Light for Green Algae

FIRST READING OF MR. DAVID Anderson's private member's bill calling for reduction in the phosphate content of detergents, as one approach to limiting this form of pollution, does not, of course, indicate that it will be finally passed in its present form by the Commons. It does, on the other hand, show the concern of members with this problem and reflects widespread opinion in Canada.

The Esquimalt-Saanich member expressed discontent with the efforts made by manufacturers to reduce this pollutant and with what he terms their unwillingness to provide detailed information on the amount of phosphates in their products.

The industry, on the other hand, says it is intensively looking for substitute materials and has undertaken a broad-scale research program to determine whether phosphates can be, or need be, replaced in these products. Without phosphates or adequate substitutes in modern detergents the manufacturers say, many of the up-to-date washing machines, dish washers and cleaning processes would not work efficiently.

They suggest that even if phosphates were removed from detergents, the substance would enter water and stimulate algae growth from other sources. Their proposed solution is fuller development of sewage treatment plants.

The argument is one of the targets at which Mr. Anderson has aimed his bill. He says that if phosphorus compounds were eliminated from detergents, treatment costs for phosphate removal at municipal treatment plants would be reduced by one-half.

His bill, at this stage, represents a rallying of support by those who heard his argument in the Commons. The industry, noting this advance, may well be expected to intensify its research for a substitute which could save the municipal taxpayer some expense as well as contribute to a better environment.

Foreign Aid and Revolution

THERE HAS BEEN A GREAT deal of over-reaction to External Affairs Minister Sharp's recent remarks at Harrison Hot Springs about revolution. Speaking to a panel on foreign policy, Mr. Sharp said "Canada would preserve as much independence as possible" in world affairs while regarding its foreign policy as an extension of domestic policy.

As an example, he said, concern about poverty would be part of a common policy which is expressed in different ways at home and abroad. Clarifying his remarks for a Conservative MP in Ottawa, Mr. Sharp said, "I think we should give aid even though revolution should result." Nothing could be plainer. Canada's views on repressive regimes are well chronicled in United Nations debate. We are working against the Rhodesian regime by supporting economic sanctions imposed on that country. Our attempts to fly food into Biafra might, from some Nigerian points of view, be construed as tacit support for Biafran demands.

Mr. Sharp does not intend to embark on a program of clandestine aid to insurrectionists or to move into the gun-running business. But our foreign aid might conceivably help a nation to the point where the people became sufficiently educated and prosperous to start thinking of their political situation as well as their next meal. In such a case, revolution might be an outcome of Canada's assistance program. But such a prospect should not be used as a reason for doing nothing to help needy people.

Northwest Passage

With the voyage of the 'Manhattan' news reports stressed the need for more and bigger ice-breakers and the very probable pollution by oil escaping hulls, wracked and ruptured in the ice-dozing process. It is obvious that both these could be avoided by cutting a navigable channel through the passage ice.

Ice can be melted, floes diverted or dispersed, heavy ice under-cut — all accomplished by current from below. Machines to create the currents would not seem too difficult to design and power or to place in position for a job to be done. A sufficient number of machines could open the channel(s).

Traversing the miles of the passage would make the task seem large. Though 'elephantine' it is not to be done for peanuts — and the costs would need to be studied. The cash outlay may not be prohibitive and the benefits to follow, particularly ready navigation, would warrant the outlay.

From the Canadian point of view, citizens might well insist that all interested parties — governments, oil companies, shippers or others should look to engineering navigable passages —'in' and 'out' if needed. Once accomplished it would cancel the numerous proposed pipelines and eliminate the bull-headed bull-dozing.— C.W.H.

The Soap Opera to Outdo All Soap Operas

Western

THE plaintive public statements currently issuing from leading detergent manufacturers may be taken as advance notice that the greatest soap opera of the century is about to be enacted before our wondering eyes. As a tear jerker the production currently being planned, according to the Toronto-Globe and Mail, by a committee of leading industrialists, should outdo anything we have heard on the radio over endless years or watched on the electronic marvels in our living rooms.

This forecast may be offered with some confidence for at least two reasons.

The first is that great tragedy demands heroic, larger than life figures. It will be readily agreed that companies such as Lever Brothers, Procter and Gamble and Colgate-Palmolive are not corner merchants.

The incentive to effort is the looming threat to a market which now, by DBS calculations, absorbs some 220 million pounds of granular synthetic detergents annually.

In fact, there may be more at stake than trade with an estimated value of $100 million.

Sweden banned DDT and within a matter of weeks similar action was taken here.

If the commission is not up to its task of making the world safe for granular synthetics, we may shortly be witnesses of the twilight of the detergent kings.

It may be some small consolation at this hour that a kindly government with the support of a kindly Parliament, made it possible some years ago for industry to deduct the costs of lobbying as legitimate business expenses.

The second reason for anticipating a particularly heart-rending performance also derives from the nature of tragedy. Any great dramatic work depends heavily on emotional sign-posts.

We must become aware, and at an early stage, that doom beckons remorselessly from the final act. The first false steps having been taken, neither human effort nor human ingenuity can avert the shambles to come.

In the present case, the soap companies have been well ahead of the spectators in reading the grim writing on the wall. Thus Mr. A. J. Ray, president of Lever Brothers Ltd., has stated publicly:

"The detergent industry does admit to the phosphate content of its products being a contributory factor to pollutions."

What else could it do?

Mr. Ray also said, "We see nothing on the horizon to replace current detergents."

Phosphate Effects

This is remarkable. Night after night, year after year, the industry has been telling us of its vast efforts of research making possible the development of secret ingredients, a few drops of which blended with ordinary detergents can make our clothes whiter than white.

But the effect of phosphates in nourishing algae has also been known for some time and yet, with all the wonder-working by the captive chemists, a substitute for phosphates is not even on the horizon.

A gloomy prospect. The industry stands at armageddon and prepares to battle for detergents. But with what will it battle? How can it seek a reprieve from government and the injured public when it sees no prospects and can make no promises? Why, if this is the best it can offer, should it be permitted to unload another 220,000,000 pounds of detergents into our rivers and streams in 1970?

The committee, according to reports on the financial pages, hopes to blunt criticism by launching an information program "aimed at telling the facts about detergents and pollution." It will argue that it is being blamed unfairly and that there are other factors, notably industrial wastes, which are contributing even more to the desecration and destruction of our streams.

Even if true, this does not appear a very promising approach. One might by analogy argue that the criminal code should ignore armed robbery since it is not as bad as murder.

It is understandable, nevertheless, that the detergent manufacturers do feel a sense of injury. If another industry dumps cyanide or sulphuric acid into a stream, it is quite possible—unless someone squeals—that the matter will go unobserved. But the laundry stuff that sets a housewife gushing for a small consideration before the television cameras, pours down the sewers and reappears as a filthy foam across the face of the waters.

Once in the rivers detergents advertise themselves.

What facts can the committee produce which will have a greater impact upon the aroused public than the facts which are self-evident?

Dispassionate consideration may suggest to the committee that the theme of the whiter wash offers less hope in these unhappy circumstances than that of blue ruin.

This is the usual argument of Ottawa lobbies and over the years it has been remarkably effective as shown by the experience of such experts on ruin as the textile and electronics manufacturers.

The problem on this reading of the situation, is to convince the government that effective anti-pollution action would spread unemployment, deprivation and desolation across our blighted land.

It seems reasonably clear, however, that governments are in no position to offer more than sympathetic cluckings to the detergent manufacturers.

For the actions already taken notably Mr. Green's new water bill and the tougher attitude of the OWRC in Ontario, result directly from a revolution in public attitudes towards pollution problems.

While there has been some criticism of the federal bill, all of it is the effect that the measure fails, in one respect or another, to go far enough.

Pollution Continues

Moreover, the position of the manufacturers is bound to get worse for the obvious reason that, whatever the merits of Mr. Green's bill, pollution is certain to get worse before it gets better. This is unavoidable because the new system can be brought into operation only over time and with the involvement of many governments and meanwhile pollution continues unabated.

In these circumstances, with prospects never so bleak, the committee ought to be capable of a super-detergent opera surpassing in poignancy anything known to the affluent society of granular synthetic or to the earlier, primitive society of soap.

The members might, among other possibilities, consider the story of Damocles.

He was accused of flattery—which seems not inappropriate although it is not to be compared with pollution. For this he was forced to sit at a banquet beneath a sword suspended by a hair.

In one sense, however, he was fortunate. He was spared the spectacle of infuriated citizens hacking at the hair.

HARVARD, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

By JAMES RESTON

Should a University Take Part or Remain Independent?

Reston

ONE of the most interesting paradoxes in America today is that Harvard University, the oldest institution of higher learning in the United States, in its 333rd year, is now engaged in a serious debate about what a university should be, and whether it is measuring up. Like the Roman Catholic Church and other ancient institutions, it is asking—still in private rather than in public—whether its past assumptions about authority, faculty, admissions, courses of study, are really relevant to the problems of the 1970's.

The contrast between its outward appearance and its inner mood is startling. A visitor coming up out of the subway into Harvard Square these days cannot escape the feeling that he has either stumbled into an 18th century masquerade ball or a modern pageant of fun and fantasy.

Strange Mixture

It is full of life and movement and gaiety: a parade of Walter Mitty figures: bearded and biblical, a strange mixture of characters out of Broadway and off the old frontier, but one wonders what is behind these magnificent facades—behind the beards, the elaborately plain makeup of the girls, and the dignified fronts of the old buildings that look so secure. What are they all proclaiming—or hiding?

About the only thing that can be said is that most of them are searching, and this comes clear in conversations with thoughtful men and women in the faculty, in the administration, and in the student body. They are trying to reduce all the confusing diversity of their private and professional lives to some kind of identity and purpose that makes sense. And this responsibility falls first on the administration and the faculty of the university.

Should Harvard—or any other university—be an intellectual sanctuary, apart from the political and social revolution of the age, or should it be a laboratory for experimentation with these political and social revolutions; or even an engine of the revolution? This is what is being discussed privately in the big clapboard houses of faculty members around Harvard Yard, but not really in the distant and formal meetings between the administrators and the faculty.

The issue was defined by Walter Lippmann, a distinguished Harvard graduate, 33 years ago, on the occasion of the 300th anniversary of the founding of the university.

"If the universities are to do their work," he said on that occasion, "they must be independent, and they must be disinterested ... they are places to which men can turn for judgments which are unbiased by partisanship and special interest. Obviously, the moment the universities fall under political control, or under the control of private interests, or the moment they themselves take a hand in politics and the leadership of government, their value as independent and disinterested sources of judgment is impaired ..."

This is part of the argument that is going on at Harvard today. Another part is the argument of the militant and even many moderate students: that a university is the keeper of our ideals and morals, and should not be "disinterested" but activist in bringing the nation's ideals and actions together.

More Troubled

It is interesting to come back to Harvard at the end of the 60's and listen to this debate. At the beginning of the 60's, Harvard was excited by the prospect of John Kennedy, a Harvard man, in the White House. It seemed then that the man of action, surrounded by the men of thought from his own university, would achieve for John Kennedy what Princeton and the New Jersey politicians had not achieved for Woodrow Wilson.

But Harvard's men at the end of the 60's seem more troubled and less sure about personal, political, and academic purpose than they did at the beginning. They are not even clear about how they should debate and resolve their problems, but they are struggling with them privately, and how they come out is bound to influence American university and political life in the coming decade.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

At the foot of the trail to the surge pond at Thetis Lake Park several Indian plum shrubs are breaking into leaf already. There are many hawthorne bushes here, both the native and others introduced from England. Stop and examine the buds on the end of the twigs and note the difference.

It can be fascinating to try to identify the different shrubs by their winter buds. Each one will be distinctive in the way it clasps or stands out from the twig.

As you walk up the trail you will see many of the spring gold plants. These can be determined by their carrot-like, finely-cut leaves. Some of them have already formed the flower bud. This plant is one of our earliest blooming in spring.

Look closely at some of the mossy banks. How many plants can you find? The Blue-eyed Mary with its bluish tinge is there, as well as the small miners' lettuce and field chickweed.

The field chickweed is still in bloom, its tiny star shaped flower hiding among the green leaves.

Walk out onto the open rock faces. There you will find a few grass-like leaves of the satin flower that are just appearing above ground.

Here one can find many kinds of mosses. Some of them have spore capsules like bird bills on their hair-like stalks.

Mingled with them are many of the branch-like lichens as well as those with the red tips and those that are cup-like.

The profusion of these plants and their luxurious growth in spite of very little rain this fall is astonishing. Perhaps the heavy mist and the warmish days with some sunshine, are big factors.

When you get up to the surge pond note how low the water is, measured by the moss growth on the rocks and dam. This little pond has no stream to feed it and gets its water from the run-off.

Around the edges of the pond you will find many small willows that have taken root just under water.

The bottom is thick with the flowerless plant called water moss. This is a good place to find many of the little water snails. On an old piece of a branch you will find their jelly-like clusters of eggs.

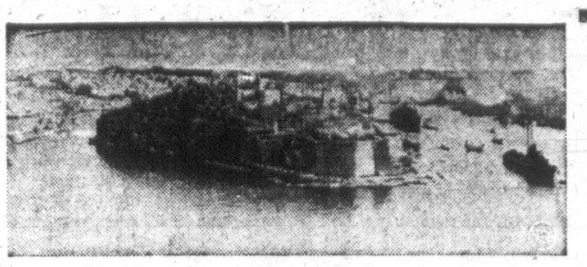
You may also find the delicate shells of the fresh-water mussels. They are very shallow and have a beautiful coloring on the inside. They should be handled with care as they are very brittle.

On pieces of wood perhaps you will see a green blob that is one of the fresh water sponges. Deeper in the water, on the rocks, there will be one that is a dull brown. Both of these are colonies of living animals.

On your way, take a look at Thetis Lake itself. Note how low the water is.

Unless we get some very heavy rains during the winter we are going to have an acute water shortage next summer.

Evangelists Storm Malta



Malta's Grand Harbor

By LINO SPITERI

VALLETTA, Malta — For almost 2,000 years, after being converted to Christianity by St. Paul when he was shipwrecked on the island in 60 AD, Malta has been a bastion of Catholicism.

But now a group of American evangelists has begun a serious challenge to the complete dominance of the Church of Rome on this tiny Mediterranean island.

Under Roman rule, infant Christianity was threatened here, as in other places. Magnificently preserved catacombs where the frightened Christians used to gather to hide and pray still exist.

During 300 years of Arab rule, the island's religion again remained intact. In the Middle Ages Malta was the pride of the Roman popes. In 1530 Charles V of Spain granted the island to the religious order of the Knights of St. John, who had been driven out of Rhodes by the forces of Islam.

The deep, passionate faith of the islanders became legendary after the four-month siege of Malta in 1565 by Suleiman the Magnificent and his vast army of Turks in one of the religious-economic Mediterranean wars of the Middle Ages.

The 16th-century Reformation cyclone passed Malta by completely. And the deep-founded religious beliefs of the Maltese people even led them to rise against the might of Napoleon's army—and defeat it — when the French tampered with the property of the Catholic church on the island.

English Customs

During the years of British rule (1800-1964) Malta took on many English customs. A number of locals also joined English freemasonry, though this was condemned by the Roman church. But though Protestant churches, including an Anglican cathedral in Valletta, were opened for the English community, the island remained a strong centre of Catholicism with no less than three churches to the square mile and a priest for every 300 of the population.

Then came the evangelists. Where St. Paul came on a fragile ship, accidentally blown ashore, the American missionaries arrive by jet plane. They stay in first-class hotels, preach in hired halls and follow up with correspondence courses.

Shook Off Snake

More significantly, while St. Paul was greeted with deep suspicion by the simple Maltese of the time, and was only accepted after he had shaken off a poisonous snake which bit him, the evangelists include university students among their disciples, get plenty of free publicity in the local press and have yet to hear an angry voice telling them to get out.

Their achievement is remarkable in Maltese terms. Some 1,000 persons—out of an adult population of 240,000—are taking correspondence courses to learn more about the gospel hall religion.

A considerable number have already been converted; how many, the evangelists are reluctant to say. They fear that if they flaunt their success their task will be made harder in future. Few of the Maltese who have renounced their faith are prepared to say so openly as yet.

The influence of the Catholic church is not what it used to be. But in the villages, to admit apostasy can still lead to social ostracism, if not worse. Nevertheless, a girl renounced Catholicism recently to marry a fellow evangelist.

Many reasons can be put forward for the evangelists' remarkable progress. For many years religion in Malta has been based more on tradition than on conviction.

The rigid prohibitions of the Catholic church have been causing disaffection and resentment for a long time. In addition, with much emphasis being put on tourism, old standards of morality have declined and some people say the island is falling into decadence.

No Damns Allowed

So the American evangelists, led by an American businessman and represented on the island by a man who reproaches those who as much as say "damn," continue to make inroads.

The Maltese Catholic hierarchy is being accused more and more of complacency. A leading university professor recently pointed out that, while the evangelists were prepared to travel thousands of miles across the world to preach their faith and carry out their "pacific penetration," the Catholic hierarchy still had not decided to open a chapel in the island's new university.

THE GALLUP POLL

Inflation Main Problem Facing Government Today

The biggest task facing Ottawa, say most Canadians, is to stop inflation, and clear up the economic difficulties facing the nation. Public concern for establishing national unity is in second place, followed closely by the need for improving the unemployment situation.

This concern for government action against inflation, which this time last year was the No. 1 problem as well, arises from the fact that 83% of the people label inflation as a dangerous thing, and another big majority (71%) think the government should be doing more to prevent it.

Belief that Canadian unity is the top-ranking problem has increased from 11% last fall to today's level of 18%. Coming up into the spotlight for the first time are complaints from the farming areas about wheat surpluses, and low incomes generally.

★

As one of its regular checks on how the average man and woman view government responsibilities, Gallup Poll interviewers repeated a question which has been asked many times over the past decades:

"What do you think is the greatest single problem facing the federal government in Ottawa today?"

A factual assessment of the degrees of importance voters give to the nation's problems is summarized below:

Main government problems today:

The economy; the need to halt inflation; methods to reduce taxation	29%
Canadian unity; improving relationships between the provinces; handling Quebec; bilingualism	18
Reducing unemployment; cutting down on strikes and on labor unrest	11
Farmer unrest; price of wheat; selling wheat; low farm incomes	5
Housing problems	4
Educating youth more effectively	3

The Fault Lies Not In The Teaching, But in Us

By ART STOTT

Stott

When we came away from George Clutesi's lecture the other evening, we had a better appreciation of the ethical mold of West Coast Indian culture. The distinguished artist and writer had given us some of the teachings of his father. They were impressive. A man, his father told him, seeing another passing on the trail beside his house, should call him in and share his food with the wayfarer. If he were so poor that he had no food in the house, he should share the warmth of his fire. Could we say here, today, asked Mr. Clutesi, that such open generosity and consideration were generally honored?

The lecturer told us of other teachings he received from his father, emphasizing the spirit of brotherhood and affection.

In the question period which followed, a member of the audience, after paying tribute to the high principles involved in the older generation's teachings, asked if there had been no wars among Indians before the coming of the Europeans.

The reply was not an answer. Mr. Clutesi said that all nations had histories of wars, particularly Western nations.

★ ★ ★

Most peoples who have acceptable religions or ethical philosophies, also have enlightened teachings embodying the golden rule. Almost identical to the story of the wayfarer told by Mr. Clutesi is a familiar quotation which goes "I was an hungered and you gave me meat. I was thirsty and you gave me drink. I was a stranger and you took me in."

In his excellent book "World Religions and the Hope for Peace," David Rhys Williams has emphasized the similarities in concepts held by different peoples aspiring to a better, more humane, relationship between men, wherever they may be.

We all have the teachings, in one form or another. The fault lies not in them, to distort Shakespeare's words, but in ourselves. I am my brother's keeper up to the point that it becomes inconvenient. I am a pacifist as long as no one is belligerent toward me and I can get most of my own way. I am generous until generosity deprives me of something. I am open-minded as long as people agree with me. And so on and on. Unfortunately, my name is legion.

In my lifetime I have known a few — very few — professing Christians who tried with heart and mind to live the teachings ascribed to Christ. I have also known a very few atheists and agnostics of high moral purpose who made conscientious efforts to live up to a lofty ethical code. They shared a common limitation. Their actions supporting the best of motives were restricted to their own concepts of what was right. But they tried, and they made sacrifices in the trying.

In the course of his talk this week, George Clutesi addressed himself particularly to a number of Indian young people in the gathering, telling them of his hopes for them and what they could do for their people. Here, again, he seemed to be walking a path walked by non-Indians of his own generation. He outlined for them the principles of the good life — the good life expressed in non-material terms. He gave them the teachings.

Among young Indians, as among non-Indian young people, there were doubtless those who were prepared to ignore what he said, to consider anything traceable to a source predating their birth as irrelevant to the society which they have narrowed in importance to people under 30. And among them could have been idealists whose outlook has not been dulled by experience or by recognition of the reality that perfection is not usually forthcoming from an imperfect world.

It seems to me that George Clutesi was sound and performing a service when he held up the higher ideals of an earlier Indian generation. It seems to me, also, that many of the young people in rebellion are justified in their rejection of the way the ideals, not only Mr. Clutesi's but others, have been dishonored.

★ ★ ★

But it is a tragedy of our confused times that too many of the youngsters are mistakenly in revolt against teachings that are valuable because they associate them with non-practice by adults. The baby's thrown out with the used bath water when the young people turn a blind eye to the concepts that, so frequently ignored, have still made it possible for man to live with man—and will have to be followed more closely if man is still to be able to live with man. There's little wrong with the ethical teachings.

Beauty Swells in Beholder's Eye

THE MEDICAL POST

One of the more peculiar sociological quirks that afflicts mankind is the varying degree of attention paid by different countries and civilizations to different regions of the body.

What is a supremely attractive feature to the French is anathema to the Hottentot and vice versa. Let us develop this theme a little further.

In the Kalahari Desert the ultimate in beauty is a rectangular rump with a superior surface parallel to the ground and of the dimensions and color of a moderate-sized mahogany cocktail table.

Closer to home, in Greece and Turkey the deep-set undulating umbilicus finds favor. Provided the belly dancer can not only wink with her navel at her admiring audience but also shed a discreet tear of perspiration from the same site, then she has reached the uppermost rungs of the professional ladder.

Across the Aegean a different set of standards apply. The exquisitely tight and so resplendently revealing trousers of the young Roman with their concupiscent and contoured codpiece is matched only by Signora's provocative and sideling rump struggling to ease itself through its seams.

Even so, the modern-day Italian prefers his female somewhat less bulky than did his Florentine ancestors of the Renaissance.

The great masters of that day and age invariably painted the female recumbent and possessed of such a surfeit of flesh that it inevitably cascaded over the edges of the couch to remain suspended in a state of quivering and tremulous voluptuousness halfway to the floor.

Nowadays the spaghetti-stuffing signora can usually delay the advent of contours such as these until she is almost 30.

Even the French, without a doubt the most civilized race, had a period when they worshipped at the Shrine of Surplus Flesh, but perhaps this was a reaction to the puritanism and deprivation of the French Revolution.

With exquisite good taste, masculine Gallic temperament, ignoring Le Grand Charles, now prefers a pair of long, lascivious and languorous thighs.

Cross the Channel and the supreme philistine reigns; John Bull's stolid, bovine and indeed almost neuter temperament, remains impervious to the blandishments of the body.

▣

Yet he has been known to admire a large handlebar moustache and should he come from the right social class, there have been occasions when he has not only eyed with pleasure but even prodded the flank and withers of some young filly (the equine variety of course).

Finally, let us take a brief look at this sweet land of liberty where the predominant religion is mammaetheism (bosom worship)—not to be confused with the slightly lesser faith of momtheism (mum worship).

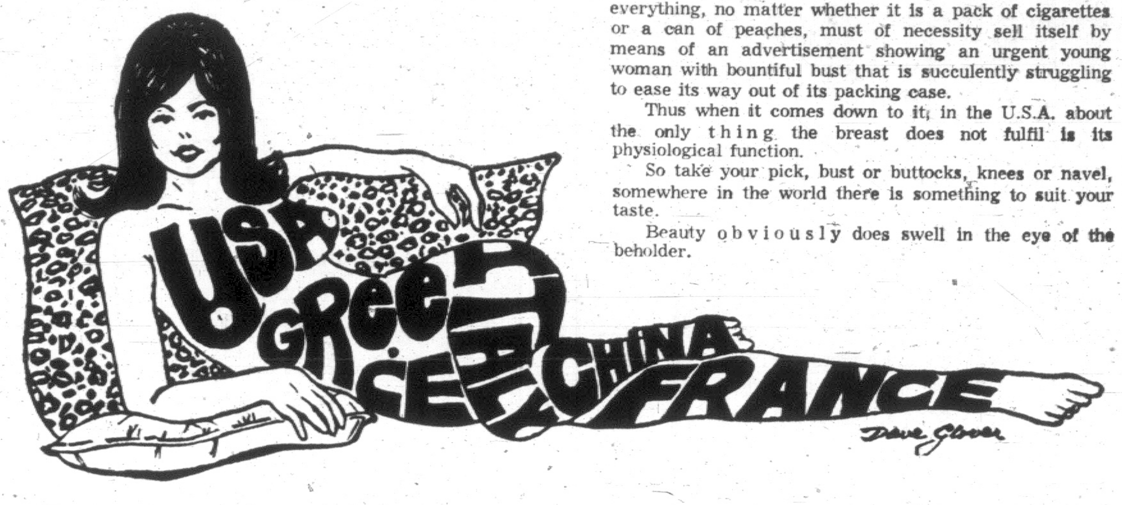
Financial empires nowadays are built on the bosom — not always too firm a foundation.

Slick magazines achieve circulation and success by skilfully displaying this commodity to their readers; everything, no matter whether it is a pack of cigarettes or a can of peaches, must of necessity sell itself by means of an advertisement showing an urgent young woman with bountiful bust that is succulently struggling to ease its way out of its packing case.

Thus when it comes down to it, in the U.S.A. about the only thing the breast does not fulfil is its physiological function.

So take your pick, bust or buttocks, knees or navel, somewhere in the world there is something to suit your taste.

Beauty obviously does swell in the eye of the beholder.



External Affairs Woos the Academics

By MURRAY GOLDBLATT

OTTAWA — These are the dog days in the external affairs department.

The department wants to be understood. It wants to be liked. It even wants to communicate. But it feels a cold chill instead.

Department policies and purposes are under attack in the academic community. Some of its prerogatives are pre-empted by missions dispatched from the Prime Minister's office.

●

Acting on orders from the top, the department has closed some offices abroad and it will reduce staff in others, cut back on capital expenditures, trim cultural and information programs.

The Task Force on government information says Canada's information abroad, co-ordinated by external affairs, "has long been stumbling through a stunning sort of chaos," although it adds that the mess stems from lack of structure, lack of general policy and lack of funds.

The external affairs department is aware that it no longer has the kind of comfortable relationship it once had with university faculties. The old boy network established during the Second World War and the immediate postwar period has disappeared.

To deal with the situation, the department created an academic relations section two years ago and canvassed the opinions of about 300 university faculty members in history, political science, international law, economics, sociology and anthropology.

The first result was a series of three seminars earlier this year on Canada's relations with Europe, Latin America and the United Nations. Organized by the department and the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, they gave academics a chance to cross-examine department officials and test their own theories.

Four more such seminars are planned by next spring with a broader representation from non-governmental organizations as well as from the universities.

●

According to one department spokesman, there is a danger in too much push from government in organizing such sessions.

"We get caught in a cross-fire — the university people either say you civil servants are ignoring us or else they turn around and complain they don't want our locked-in systems, our security, those government tentacles."

Another complaint which department sources are not so quick to acknowledge is the ultra-caution exercised by external affairs spokesmen.

The sessions are closed-door affairs, but department representatives are not at home in the cut and thrust of debate. They state the government line and then retire into a shell. The value of such sessions is diminished.

This fall the department tried another method of establishing closer links with the academics. It assigned two senior officers to serve as foreign service visitors at Canadian universities.

Three or four more foreign service visitors will be appointed next year.

The department has invited seven academics to lecture to groups in external affairs during the school year and it is sending out speakers to university groups. External affairs hopes to establish an advisory panel from the academic world to counsel the department.

Perhap most important, the department plans to develop arrangements for locating some academics in external affairs for one- or two-year stints. This has been done on a short-term contract basis during summers.

In the United States, this kind of flow is common on a much broader basis and beneficial for both sides. Canada's external affairs department needs this kind of transfusion too.

It won't end the department's communication troubles, but it will enlist some badly needed allies outside the isolated Ottawa fortress.

Investors Still In Waiting Mood

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets dropped steadily this week, wiping out gains of the previous week.

Since the federal government's white paper on tax reform was released four weeks ago, markets have been acting like a bouncing ball—up, down, up and now down again.

Sharp losses were recorded Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and, although markets showed some strength Thursday and Friday with early rallies that eventually ran out of steam, they closed lower in those sessions.

However, this week Canadian markets seemed to forget about the white paper's proposals as they followed American markets downhill.

Trading volume remained light.

Observers said investors still seemed to be waiting on the sidelines until they are sure lows have been touched and until they think markets may start bottoming out.

One Toronto technician said Canadian markets lately have been forming a consolidation pattern while American markets dropped below their supposed support levels.

Bond Trading Light

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Canadian bond market closed virtually unchanged Friday following a week of light trading.

Four new issues were introduced this week, including two by the federal government totalling $150,000,000.

The government bonds were 1-year 8-per-cent Dec. 15, 1970, issues selling at $99.90 to yield 8.11 per cent and 1 year 9½ month 8-per-cent Oct. 1, 1971, issues selling at $99.75 to yield 8.14 per cent.

The issues sold quickly and by mid-week were trading at 10 cents higher.

Laurentide Financial Corp. introduced a number of collateral trust notes totalling $5,000,000. They were 9¾-per-cent Dec. 15, 1972, issues and are selling at $98.50 to yield 10.35 per cent.

The last was introduced by Pacific Centres. They were 9¾-per-cent Jan. 1, 1995, issues selling at $98.50 to yield 9.92 per cent.

Both were described by dealers as selling on a steady pace.

The market has showed no sign of improvement during the last three consecutive weeks and dealers anticipate it will glide through the remainder of the year without any major change in either direction.

The McLeod Young, Wier and Co. Ltd. 40-bond yield average was a record 9.17 per cent Nov. 28 compared with 8.91 at Oct. 31 this year and 7.91 at Nov. 29, 1968.

Further Drop Predicted

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned in a chilling performance this week, with a deep, broad loss that twice pushed the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials to its lowest point in almost three years.

The first plunge came at mid-week when the Dow—a thermometer measuring the health of blue-chip stocks—dropped below 800.

The market continued to be dragged down by mounting evidence that the United States government would continue its tight-money policies, year-end tax loss selling and the prediction by a prominent economist that corporate profits would drop 15 to 20 per cent in 1970.

Record high yields in the bond market also had lured investors away from stocks.

There was a modest rally Thursday, but it was followed Friday by a drop in the Dow to 793.03, its lowest point since Jan. 4, 1967, and a fall of 19.27 points in the week. In the last 18 sessions it has dropped more than 70 points.

HITS NEW LOW

The broader-based Associated Press 60-stock average also fell twice in the week to three-year lows. It ended Friday at 272.6, a loss of 7.9 for the week.

The New York Stock Exchange index of 1,200 common stocks lost 1.29 to 51.20 and Standard and Poor's 500-stock index dropped 2.08 to 91.73 on the week.

Some analysts predicted a further drop Monday.

The week's setback was far-reaching. Of the 1,753 individual issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, 1,357 dropped and only 284 gained.

There were 478 new lows for the year and 17 new highs.

Trading volume was 55,600,000 shares, compared with 41,700,000 the previous week.

The five most-active stocks on the New York Exchange were: Gulf Oil, on a turnover of 541,500 shares, off 1¾ at 28½; American Telephone, off 1⅜ at 50⅝; Texaco, off 1¼ at 8⅞; International Telephone, off 2 at 56; and AMK Corp., off 2¾ at 25¼.

New Pressure on Banks

OTTAWA (CP) — The continuing monetary pinch sent investment dealers to the Bank of Canada this week for cash loans and exerted renewed pressure on the reserves and liquid assets of chartered banks.

Weekly financial statistics issued by the central bank show dealers had cash advances as of Wednesday on security of $17,704,000 worth of government treasury bills and $6,074,000 worth of other debt paper.

The ratio of liquid assets to total major assets in the banks dropped to an all-time low of 26.16 per cent last week. Previous low was 26.2 per cent Oct. 8.

Call loans to investment dealers and brokers increased by $34,000,000 but day loans declined by $40,000,000.

Part of the pressure is explained also by an increase in general loans issued by the banks. The total reached a record hig of $14,995,000,000 as of Nov. 26, an increase of $159,000,000 in a week and well above the previous high of $14,946,000,000 outstanding Oct 1.

Money supply, expressed as currency outside banks and demand deposits in the banks, narrowed by $238,000,000 to $8,828,000,000 in the week to Nov. 26. Money by the broader definition, including all bank deposits by the public, also contracted by $272,000,000 to $27,438,000,000.

The average rate on day loans this week eased slightly to 7.7 per cent from the record 7.85 per cent a week earlier. But yields on six-month treasury bills hit a new high of 7.87 per cent, three-month bills brushed the Oct. 1 record of 7.78 at 7.77 Thursday and the average on long-term Canada bonds pushed to 8.2 per cent, another all-time high.

Holdings of Canada Savings Bonds dropped by $78,000,000 to $6,777,000,000 with the annual November buying spree out of the way, but remained $331,000,000 up on the same date a year earlier.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Walker-Gooderham

Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd. has reported net earnings of $47.29 million or $2.78 a share for the year ended Aug. 31, compared with $44.26 million or $2.57 in 1968.

Net sales for the fiscal year totalled $690.4 million compared with $634.2 million in 1968.

Capital expenditures during the year totalled $31 million compared with $19 million in 1968.

Chemcell

Chemcell Ltd. has signed an agreement outlined last month to invest more than $10 million over five years in oil and natural gas properties, with Bralorne Oil and Gas Ltd. of Calgary, acting as manager.

The agreement also entitles the Montreal-based chemical company to invest a further $5 million to $6 million in Bralorne treasury shares, "sufficient to give it a controlling interest by the end of 1974."

Terra Nova

One of the Key Industries group, Terra Nova Development Ltd., has signed an agreement with Burnaby to dispose of all its waste over the next five years.

The firm will use material in a land fill project to create industrial sites at Fraser Mills.

At a fee of $3 per ton, Terra Nova will take away 130-150 tons of waste per day. The fee will increase at intervals through the life of the contract to June 1974.

Golden West

Golden West Resources Ltd. is taking part in drilling of a gas well near Shunda Lake, Alta., estimated to cost $1.25 million.

The farmount from Imperial Oil Enterprises Ltd. is being operated by Spooner Mines and Oils Ltd., of Calgary, and Golden West has a 20 per cent interest, said managing director John Godfrey.

Wajax

Wajax Ltd. nine months report shows net earnings of 95 cents a share, or $526,670 on revenue of $19 million.

There was no comparison with earlier performance because of a change in accounting procedures and shares outstanding.

The earnings outlook remains generally favorable, with final quarter earnings expected to be in line with the year's performance, even though construction strikes have had some effect, the company said.

Silver Standard

Development aimed at producing 10 million to 20 million tons of nickel and copper ore on its E and L Nickel property near the Iskut River in northern B.C., is planned by Silver Standard Mines for 1970.

Proving of such an ore body would support a 2,500-3,000 tons per day mill, reports president Alex Ritchie.

Silver Standard may do the work alone, or by agreement with another Canadian mining company, Ritchie said.

Diamond drilling from the 5,300 foot portal will be the first phase of development at the property, which lies 20 miles south of Stikine Copper Ltd., with 289 claims in the Stikine River area.

Japanese Ceremony Marks Mill Opening

NANAIMO (CP) — A 1,200-year-old Japanese ceremony Friday marked the opening of a $3,000,000 sawmill, a joint Japanese—Canadian business venture.

The ceremony at this Vancouver Island city was one of "purification" and was conducted by Shinto pastors while 200 guests at the new operations of CIPA Lumber Co. Ltd. looked on.

The three Shinto pastors prayed for purification of the participants in the ceremony and thanked the Parent God for the mill and its success.

The mill will produce 60,000,000 board feet of lumber a year, mainly for export to Japan.

CIPA is 80 per cent owned by C. Itoh and Co. Ltd. of Japan, a trading company with $4,500,000,000 in sales last year, and 20 per cent by Pacific Logging Co. of Victoria, a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Investments of the CPR family.

B.C. Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston commended C. Itoh and Pacific Logging for getting together on the project.

He said that when the provincial cabinet visited Japan in 1965 it made it clear to the Japanese that if they wanted to be involved in production of B.C. forest products it would have to be in lumber manufacturing and not in log export.

Hirhite Yamasaki of Tokyo, president of CIPA and a director of C. Itoh, said his company's 80 per cent ownership represented the largest equity holding by a Japanese company in Canadian manufacturing operations.

Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd.

The Board of Directors of Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. today declared a dividend of One Dollar and Forty-three and three quarters cents (1.43-¾c) per share on the outstanding 5-¾% Cumulative Redeemable Preferred Shares of the Company, payable on the 16th day of December, 1969 to shareholders of record at the close of business on the 9th day of December, 1969 being a payment in arrears of a dividend on such shares at the rate of 5-¾% per annum for the quarterly period ended the 2nd day of April, 1968.

Canada Policy Lauded By Brokerage Head

MONTREAL (CP) — James E. Thomson, chairman of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc., has praised Canada's efforts to curb inflation.

The determination of Prime Minister Trudeau's government "to curb inflation is heartening to one who, over the years, has watched his own government apply the brakes unevenly and belatedly," he said.

WEEKEND'S TOP SHOWS

Tonight

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is at 9:30 on Channel 12. It's the 1954 drama, The Barefoot Contessa, with Humphrey Bogart and Ava Gardner. Excellently produced, it's worth watching.

HOCKEY. 5, Channels 2 and 6. The Pittsburgh Penguins and the Maple Leafs face-off at Toronto. Bill Hewitt calls the play-by-play action and Bob Goldham is the commentator.

FAMILY AFFAIR. 9:30, Channel 6. Number One Boy is the episode. French, the impeccable manservant in the family, faces some stiff competition when Ng Ho, Bill's efficient and ambitious servant from Hong Kong, moves into the Davis domecile—lock, stock —and chopsticks. It's an amusing episode.

WIDE WORLD OF SPORTS. 5, Channel 4. Live from Las Vegas, the event of this 90-minute sports show is the heavyweight fight between former world champion Sonny Liston and third-ranked Leotis Martin, in a 12-round bout. Preceding the Liston-Martin fight will be a 6-round fight between former Olympic heavyweight champion George Foreman and Bob Hazelton.

JACKIE GLEASON. 7, Channel 8, 7:30, Channels 7, 12. The Honeymooners need a bit of rest, for a change, and they're expecting to get it in Sun Valley. Now, all their fans know that quiet and the Honeymooners simply don't go together, but tonight their trouble is doubled. Ralph Kramden seems to have a look-alike who's in the habit of passing bad checks, and not only is Ralph arrested upon his arrival, but his double arrives on the scene too. Tune in for the improbable mixups and complications and have fun with the team of Gleason, Gleason and Carney.

SPECIAL. 8:30, Channel 7, 12. "Ann-Margret: From Hollywood With Love." Backed up by pros Dean Martin and Lucille Ball, Ann-Margret branches out in comedy routines besides singing and dancing in her customary sexy style, and she holds her own. There's a lengthy opening with Ann risking her life on the Los Angeles freeways and on Sunset Boulevard and then kidding the Hollywood success story in a gaudy segment about the little country girl who makes good in a movie-game setting, but her most successful moments come with Dean Martin. The two of them sing country music, romp in a field on location, and obviously enjoy themselves playing a Hollywood movie couple in a broad slapstick skit.

SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES. 9, Channel 5. "The Hallelujah Trail." (1965). (Repeat). A star-studded cast headed by Burt Lancaster and Lee Remick, and a lavish, sprawling production help to overcome the shortcomings of this western adventure. Cavalry officer Lancaster is assigned to protect a valuable liquor shipment destined for Denver which attracts a band of funny, thirsty Indians and a mobile chapter of a ladies' temperance league. This sets the stage for a series of broadly played drinking bouts, unsuccessful Indian attacks, unexpected romantic complications, and general mayhem.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE. 9:30, Channel 4. This is the Anthony Newley hour and then some. To begin with, all the songs are Newleys, and he takes over for hits like "What Kind of Fool Am I?", "Once in a Lifetime," "Gonna Build a Mountain." Surrounded by females for the evening, Newley duets with Welsh girl Lulu to "Typically English"; sings with fashion model Marissa Berenson; and clowns with "Laugh-In's" Jo Ann Worley. Backed by strong material and the author, actress Dyan Cannon makes her vocal debut and joins the girls in a tribute to the host.

MANNIX. 10, Channel 7. A good effort. Like all the others, this private eye series tries an episode about blindness. After a killer's bullet creases his skull, Mannix develops psychosomatic blindness, and if you can accept the premise, the show succeeds. As the sole surviving witness, Mannix must learn to get about in his office before the murderer strikes again. With the help of secretary Peggy and an ex-Marine, our hero learns quickly and awaits the climactic moment. Mike Connors comes through nobly, and Gail Fisher continues to grow on audiences, thanks to fatter parts.

Sunday

MOVIE TO WATCH Sunday evening is on Channel 4 at 9 p.m. It's a 1965 British burlesque of 007-type spy adventures—The 2nd Best Secret Agent in the Whole Wide World, starring Tom Adams as the agent, whose chief ally is a revolver which turns into a machinegun and whose chief handicap is the total inability to shoot straight.

SPECIAL. 9, Channels 2 and 6. Boney Was a Warrior is a humorous look at the life of Napoleon Bonaparte. Lister Sinclair produced it, Chris Wiggins is the narrator and Bruno Gerussi plays Boney.

SPECIAL. 7, Channels 2 and 6. Hans Brinker is a musical version of the children's classic and it runs two hours, pre-empting Sullivan at 8.

SPECIAL. 7, Channel 7. "A Charlie Brown Christmas." (Repeat). Fifth time round for this often charming animated color cartoon with all the "Peanuts" comic strip kids. Sore at Christmas commercialism, hero Charlie Brown can't get into the Christmas mood, even after Lucy asks him to direct a pageant. "Peanuts" followers shouldn't object to the character voices, and they'll enjoy creator Schulz's poke at current holiday practices and the grand dialogue of the kids. The story sags a bit in the overlong pageant-directing segment, but Linus with his blanket is engaging, and so is Charlie Brown and scene-stealing Snoopy the dog, ice skating with glee in the opening scenes and dancing happily on Schroeder's little piano.

SPECIAL. 7:30, Channel 7. "Frosty the Snowman." Here's an animated version of a tune your youngsters will recognize immediately. Jimmy Durante handles the narration of the holiday tale about the snowman who comes to life. Jackie Vernon's voice is used for the delightful Frosty and the charm of the song combined with the gaiety of the animated figures adds up to a half hour of entertainment.

WALT DISNEY. 6, Channel 2, 7:30, Channel 5. "Inky, the Crow." A cute children's show about a crow with a paint fetish goes overboard at times, but that's to be expected. A 13-year-old girl finds a paint-covered bird, makes a pal of the clever troublemaker, and then is forced to let him loose when her parents become fed up. However, Inky and his owner carry on, and the child saves her pet in a heartwarming ending. Despite the fact that a lively black object is on the screen, the crow manages to charm you.

ED SULLIVAN. 8, Channel 7, 12. Interesting variety on view tonight as Richard Tucker sings "Il Pagliacco," the Fifth Dimension offer their hit "Wedding Bell Blues," Ferrante and Teicher play "Midnight Cowboy," and Sandler and Young perform. Other acts include dances by Ballet America, a comedy monologue from Ron Carey, and a comedy sketch with Imogene Coca and Bibi Osterwald.

THE BILL COSBY SHOW. 8:30, Channel 5. "A Word from Our Sponsor." Delightful episode. Chet is cast as a football coach in a breakfast food commercial. To prepare for new role as an actor, he takes a quick lesson from the school speech teacher who advises him to get into the character and pretend he is the box of cereal. The storyline holds up right through the filming of the actual commerical, and makes for one of the best shows yet from this series.

LESLIE UGGAMS SHOW. 9, Channel 7. Ruth Buzzi and Mike Connors are on board. Ruth and Leslie team up for "Everybody Likes to Have a Good Cry," and Ruth hams it up a little as a lonely girl flirting with an off-duty policeman called Connors. Mike sings a bit, and joins Dennis Allen in an astronaut sketch about a Mars landing. Stevie Wonder sings "For Once In My Life," Miss Uggams does three solos including "Those Were the Days," and the Sugar Hill gang turns to a holdup incident at the local pizza stand.

BONANZA. 9, Channel 5. "Dead Wrong." Good show. Michael Landon has written an amusing episode for brother Hoss. On his way to a strange town to cash a bank draft, Hoss is mistaken for an outlaw named Big Jack when the town's storyteller, who claims to know the notorious outlaw, points him out. The result is an extremely funny situation because, Hoss and Candy, feared by all, are treated with respect, while the real Big Jack plans to rob the bank. Arthur Hunnicutt is ideally cast as Salty, the boastful storyteller. Fans should love this one.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE 10, Channel 7, 12. Our clever agents are in the Middle East, staging a phony kidney transplant operation, their way of returning a rightful ruler to his throne. Jim Phelps plays a surgeon performing an emergency operation, a tricky piece of business with bodies being switched about, Paris is a double-crossing oil dealer wearing shades and fancy clothes, and guest Michel Carey appears as a sexy shill with a bird-like tone, acting as bait for the Eastern bad guy.

VICTIM OF RATINGS is pretty Leslie Uggams—one of the new program stars who didn't measure up. Leslie, who fell below the required rating level in the first three months of her regular weekly show, goes off the air in January.

Christmas Comes Early For Fans

LIVERMORE, Calif. (UPI) — Christmas came early for more than 200,000 youngsters expected to attend a free rock festival today starring Britain's Rolling Stones in barren country 40 miles east of San Francisco.

"It's a free concert, not for profit," said Rolling Stones spokesman John Jaymes. "It's a Christmas and Hanukkah gift from the Stones and other groups to American youth."

★ ★ ★

The eight-hour event at the 80-acre Altamont Speedway has been dubbed "Woodstock West" — in tribute to the musical happening last summer in New York when 300,000 ignored rain and mud for a concert. Michael Lang, 24, New York City, who produced the Woodstock event, also co-ordinated this one.

PERENNIAL STAR DORIS DAY

Lunch Bucket Lady Happy Girl

By CHARLES WITBECK

HOLLYWOOD — Doris Day is a sucker for dogs. She acquires canines like some actresses pick up jewelry — they just come out of the blue. A black part-schnauzer, part-poodle with soulful eyes and a pure poodle guarded Doris in her studio hideaway recently as she talked about the Monday night TV show, dogs, clothes, new cars and her old band days.

●

"I'm a lunch bucket lady," she says. "I fold at night. One reason I was happy making movies, we didn't have to work at night."

Those band days, touring with the Les Brown outfit, hardly jibed with the singer's idea of living. She didn't like to perform in front of crowds, and hated those late hours. Maybe it's her German blood. A night lady she isn't.

Doris had been awakened at 4:45 that morning by five assorted pups, sprawled over her bed, suddenly barking their heads off, and she wasn't upset.

Later, when it was time for work, she hopped into a limousine in her bathrobe, accompanied by four dogs including a collie, put her feet up, and looked out the dark glass window. The star feels a little guilty about that dark glass, but since she's in a bathrobe most mornings, it's a necessity.

Miss Day never drives a car any more, she toots about in a limousine as befits a movie actress. She owns a station wagon and attempted to take a spin not too long ago, but couldn't find the ignition. As for the new cars, phooey.

"They're dreadful," she says. "There's no room in the back to put your feet. Where do they go — out the window?"

At CBS Studio Centre where the Doris Day Show is filmed, the Day dogs have the run of the place. They even accompany their mistress to the projection room and look at show footage. If Doris looks bad they bark.

One made a fuss on the set when a strange man walked into the living room, and the actress asked the fellow to identify himself. He was a crew member who worked up high on a stage catwalk — slightly out of smelling and seeing range.

Miss Day takes great comfort in her cast and crew, composed of some who've been with her since early Warner Brothers picture days.

"I'm not gooey," she says, prefacing remarks on the staff, "but the crew is a part of me. They mother-hen me. They tell me the time since I hate wearing a watch, and they keep track of things like 'Did you have your vitamin 12 shot?'

●

"My green man brings me heather, Denver Pyle (Grandpa) checks my wardrobe, and my new boss, McClean Stevenson, is a find. Denver is my security. He helped a lot last year after my husband's death, and he'll come in, though not on call, just so I'll have someone to read lines to."

When the show changed format this fall to Doris Day, widow and secretary to a San Francisco magazine editor, it gave the actress a chance to dress up a little, and wear all those sports clothes she is so crazy about. Doris may not be a night owl, but she digs clothes, and wears many of her own outfits on the series, avoiding the more sophisticated cuts.

"I don't want to get too uptown this year, but I'm wearing what I like," she explains.

11 Die in Helicopter Downed by Hanoi Fire

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese troops shot down a United States helicopter near Dak To in the central highlands today, killing all 11 persons aboard.

Among the victims were a South Vietnamese full colonel—the commander of one of the special tactical zones in the central highlands—and his American adviser.

The other casualties included the four U.S. helicopter crew members, an American sergeant, two South Vietnamese majors and two South Vietnamese noncommissioned officers.

The helicopter went down in rugged hills about 285 miles northeast of Saigon and was destroyed, a South Vietnamese spokesman said.

In ground fighting, troops of the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division clashed twice with North Vietnamese soldiers along the Cambodian border, and South Vietnamese infantrymen fought a third battle just south of the demilitarized zone, military spokesmen reported today.

Combined forces troops said they killed 60 North Vietnamese soldiers in the three battles. Two Americans were reported killed and five wounded. No South Vietnamese casualties were reported.

City Shuts Shakespeare After Residents Protest

By AB KENT

The city has closed Shakespeare Street between North Dairy and Burton in accordance with an undertaking for rezoning land at Hillside shopping centre.

The section of the street, less than half a block, had permitted traffic to circumvent the busy Hillside-Shelbourne intersection, to which residents of Edgeware, Oakland and Burton streets had objected.

Action came Thursday with a notice from traffic engineer David Campbell, following a strong protest at Victoria Labour Council Wednesday night by delegate Murray Drew, a resident of Burton Street.

Drew said Dominion Construction, owner of the shopping centre, and city council had neglected promises to residents during consideration of the centre's second phase, now under construction.

He said parking area screening, landscaping, parking restriction and pedestrian convenience were to be provided by the builder and the city and that nothing was done or contemplated.

Hillside shopping centre property manager Richard Talbot today replied that Dominion Construction will live up to its commitments by erecting suitable screening, planting trees and shrubs and allowing pedestrian access through one of the malls enabling residents of the above streets to reach Hillside bus routes conveniently.

"We are going far beyond the specifications laid down by city council," said Talbot. For example, more landscaping than required will be planted along Edgeware and the city planner and residents will be invited to criticize the job in the event that additional work is desired, Talbot said.

Meanwhile, Talbot said he will meet Drew to outline the full planning, including drawings of building layout and landscaping of the parking areas. Any other inquiries by residents of the area are welcome, Talbot said, giving his telephone number, 384 7154.

The pedestrian access will run between Safeway's and a new Zeller's department store, which will be a leg of the main mall. Opening from it will be public washrooms and the property manager's office.

Access will be kept open during shopping hours only, to avoid risk of it becoming an air-conditioned haven for hang-abouts, Talbot said. City council agreed with this, and it was pointed out during the last rezoning hearing that to walk around the end of the building to reach Hillside will be only about 100 yards longer.

HOSPITAL GRANTS UP

B.C. hospitals will share an increase in revenue estimated at $300,000 as a result of a 33 per cent boost in their equipment allowances from the provincial government.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark announced Friday the equipment allowance of 30 cents per patient per day has been increased to 40 cents retroactive to Jan. 1, 1969, for acute care general hospitals.

The British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service administers the payments.

Lying to Police Ruled Obstruction Offence

Judge William Ostler ruled Friday that a person hindering the course of justice by making false statements to a police officer can be found guilty of obstructing the police officer.

The ruling resulted in Terrence P. Martin, 20, being found guilty of obstructing a police officer and fined $50 as a result of an incident at 790 Hillside Nov. 12.

The accused, court was told, answered the door of the Hillside residence where he was living and told police officers the man they were looking for was not there.

The police had been sent to serve three warrants on David Neil Stewart who lived at 790 Hillside.

SEARCH

Martin told the officers Stewart was not there and he had not seen him for several days but he agreed to the officers searching the residence.

The officers did not find Stewart but saw a rear window open and asked the accused if there was any way to get on to the roof.

Martin answered no and the police left the premises.

One officer hid in an alley outside the house and shortly afterward saw stewart coming down off the roof and arrested him as well as the accused.

Weeds, Bugs Big Polluters

EDMONTON (CP) — A crops expert says a scare campaign against use of the pesticide DDT has been overdone because the chemical is not the villain it is made out to be.

Dr. George Friesen of Toronto, a member of the weed committee of the Canadian Agricultural Chemicals Association, said in an interview the campaign "has not only been overdone but misinformation has been given out."

Dr. Friesen, for 14 years a crop science professor at the University of Manitoba and now research manager for Geigy (Canada) Ltd., said Thursday the "great pollutors" of the world are not pesticides but insects, weeds, and plant and animal diseases, and the most effective way to control them is with pesticides.

Sask. Session Feb. 12

REGINA (CP) — The 1970 session of the Saskatchewan Legislature will open Thursday, Feb. 12, Premier Ross Thatcher announced Friday after a cabinet meeting. He expects the session to be light from the viewpoint of legislation to be presented.

COLD IN ONTARIO and southern Quebec during December is forecast in the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau. Readings will be above normal in most of the Maritimes, southern parts of Alberta and Saskatchewan and coastal regions of British Columbia.

Precipitation will be heavy in some areas of the Maritimes, and the B.C. coast, and moderate in most other regions. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur.

Other normal temperatures (precipitation): New York 36 (3.4); New Orleans 55 (4.1); San Francisco 50 (4.1). (CP Newsmap).

Man Jailed For Pot Trafficking

A 22-year-old man who told court he knew he was to go back to jail but asked for leniency was sentenced to two years in prison for trafficking in marijuana.

Phillip Isaacson, 1419 Stanley, had been charged in August and was convicted last month.

"You are realistic enough to know this," Judge William Ostler said of Isaacson's acceptance of jail before sentence was passed.

Ostler pointed out that if the accused was determined to turn his back on trafficking there were provisions for remission of time and application for parole.

"Keep this in mind," Ostler added.

'This Ship Makes Love Not War'

By PAT DUFOUR

Channel fever hit the Maritime Command Pacific's newest ship, HMCS Provider, Friday night as she steamed toward Esquimalt.

It was worse than scurvy.

LS Harvey Parsons explained the attack when we went aboard the operational supply ship this morning to travel the last few miles into HMC Dockyard.

"I guess the expression comes from the Limeys and describes the restlessness you feel when you're almost home.

"Nobody in the ship wanted to sleep last night, but no one would admit. We'd keep saying we were going to hit the sack—then play another and another round of cards."

Parsons is one of the lucky ones in the 180-man ship's company, most of whom were sent from Victoria to Halifax to bring back the newest Esquimalt ship. He didn't go east until August.

Most went last January.

●

But the ship's coxswain, CPO Brian Hunt, has been away since Dec. 27.

Asked how his wife felt about looking after their home and three children for a year-long stretch, the chief said, "She's used to it."

The fever even hit the Provider's skipper, Capt. J. A. Fulton.

As she steamed past Duntze Head and saluted her new commander, Rear-Admiral H. A. Porter, a signalman flashed a message from shore.

The captain smiled as the flags told him his wife and two daughters were waiting on the jetty.

An excited throng of relatives waited impatiently as Provider slid her 550 feet alongside jetty A.

One seaman, scanning the sea of faces for a familiar one, whispered, "They're sure glad to see us," then added. "I wonder what the wives of men in other Esquimalt ships will think."

He was referring to the fact that Provider will be able to keep the Esquimalt ships at sea for a much longer period than before. Fulton estimates she can service all Esquimalt-based ships at sea for as long as 50 days.

●

This is no man-o-war — Provider has no armament.

As Lieut. George Jackson explained: "We make love — not war!"

He said Provider's crew, especially bosuns, engineers and supply hands, had to be the most efficient in the service.

Jackson described his ship as "a darned efficient workhorse" and cited a recent cruise to Britain and Denmark. Provider refuelled and supplied the aircraft carrier HMCS Bonadventure and eight destroyer-escorts in a non-stop stand that lasted from 8 one morning to 5 the next.

●

None of the ship's company seemed to feel they would rather be in a fighting ship.

One explained: "Serving in a fighting ship in peace time can be a pretty frustrating thing. You become overtrained and never get a chance to do you real thing.

"In our ship we're doing the real job we were built for, and it's a good one. She's modern but because of the small size of our crew and the magnitude of our job we all have to really know our business.

"You do more seamanship here than in any ship I've served in."

Gently now, Capt. J. A. Fulton eases Provider in.

Powerline in Park Hit by Recreationists

Spokesmen for local conservation groups indicated today they're strongly opposed to a provincial government decision to chop 7.4 acres off Goldstream Park to provide right-of-way for a B.C. Hydro power line.

"Surely to goodness they could have found an area outside the park," said Howard English, a director on the Victoria Fish and Game Society.

He said parkland near a metropolitan area is many times more valuable than wilderness land in remote parts of the Interior of B.C.

He expressed concern that the government could push through the order-in-council decision despite the fact Goldstream is a Class A park.

"As I understand it Class A means nothing can happen to it, period."

KIERNAN BLAMED

Bob Kennedy, society president, blamed Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

"Under the minister we've got now you've got a mining company dumping mine tailings into Buttle Lake, and that's a Class A park.

"If they can prove they can make a buck at it, they'll go ahead and do it."

The Fish and Game society will hold a general meeting Dec. 15 to discuss the matter, and the meeting will be open to the public.

NO SENSE

"There's no sense in having lots of electricity and lots of industry if there's no recreational area," Kennedy said.

Al Wright, active in the Fish and Game Society and the Amalagamated Conservation Society, criticized the reasoning behind the decision to give B.C. Hydro the land on the southeast corner of the park.

"They said it's not being used by the public, but everybody knows there are parks in the interior that aren't getting used — that doesn't mean we can use them for industrial purposes."

McPherson Best Building

McPherson Playhouse Friday was chosen as best building designed on the Island in the last five years by a panel of Vancouver architects.

An Architecture Institute of British Columbia design excellence award went to Victoria architect Alan Hodgson, 404 Henry.

In the judges' assessment McPherson Playhouse was called "a bold simple statement."

The architect "was uninhibited by the existing structure (the old playhouse) in his design."

Judges for the award, presented for the first time, were: Ray Toby, chairman of the Vancouver Design Panel; Wolfgang Gerson, head of the University of British Columbia school of architecture; and Vancouver architect Richard Archambault.

Uvic Prof Awarded $7,000

University of Victoria classics professor Herbert H. Huxley has received a $7,000 Canada Council fellowship to be applied during sabbatical leave.

Prof. Huxley said today if he obtains leave-of-absence from the university he plans to complete two books which have already been commissioned.

They are an anthology of translated medieval Latin lyric poetry and a translation of Phaedra by the Latin poet Seneca.

Prof. Huxley, now teaching his second year at Uvic, recently edited an anthology of Latin verse entitled Corolla Camenae — Garland of the Muse — which was published by the university and designed and printed by Morriss Printing Co. Ltd. of Victoria.

Leave fellowships totalling $1 million were granted to 135 university teachers in the social sciences and humanities.

CHIEF RAPS BAD PUBLICITY

'Entire Force Is Now Suspect'

Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson Friday termed "unfair" the publicity given three unidentified Saanich policemen, disciplined by the Saanich police commission and himself earlier in the week.

"We have 65 men here who are now all under suspicion by the public," he said.

★ ★ ★

He was referring to exposure given a statement by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis Wednesday stating one policeman had been demoted, another suspended for 10 days and a third reprimanded by Pearson for an incident at a party last month.

Pearson confirmed the disciplinary action but added the publicity it received was a "dirty shame."

He said the matter was an internal problem and the police officers in question had suffered enough "from the rap over the knuckles."

"Any other industrial inquiry would not have been treated the way this has."

The three were never publicly named but referred to as constables A, B, and C.

The commission demoted one of the officers for using a police cruiser while off duty to pick up friends and deliver them to a party he was attending.

★ ★ ★

The on-duty policeman who had driven the cruiser to the party was suspended 10 days by the commission.

A third policeman, off duty but at the party, was reprimanded by Pearson for not reporting the actions of the other two.

"People are asking which one are you, constable A, B, or C," the chief said, noting the impact on the department.

Saanich Earmarks $34,000 to Start Colquitz Project

A firm start has been made by Saanich council on improving Colquitz Creek.

Two reports have looked into possible improvements, and volunteers have cleared a small area.

Now, council is setting aside $34,000 to purchase strips of land along the neglected waterway, which runs 6.2 miles from Beaver Lake to Portage Inlet and drains an area of 12,500 acres—almost three times the size of the city of Victoria.

★ ★ ★

Saanich is purchasing the 34-acre Quick Farm, off Wilkinson Road, plus two smaller pieces of property. The money will come from sale of municipal properties under a bylaw expected to receive final approval later this month.

"It's a start in protecting the bank," said municipal comptroller-treasurer John Tribe. He added that the purchases are, to the best of his knowledge, the first along the creek.

The $34,000 to be spent includes a down payment of $23,500 on the Quick Farm which will cost a total of $93,000. The remaining $10,500 is for two smaller pieces of land in the same area.

An economic study by Reid, Crowther and Partners made public last summer recommended expenditure of $689,000 to buy land along the Colquitz for flood control and water conservation.

The study backed up one made earlier by municipal design engineer Frank Neate (Colquitz River: An Appraisal and Plan) which put the cost of land acquisition at $560,000 against $3 million for enclosing the neglected waterway.

The economic study, however, recommended against proceeding with the total Colquitz Open Space Plan, which involved a system of lakes and streams, and which Neate presented to a closed meeting of Saanich council in 1968.

★ ★ ★

Total cost of the open space plan was put at $5.78 million and $6.98 million for an alternate.

A council meeting earlier this year indicated support for the lesser Colquitz plan.

The specific purchase of land in the Quick's Bottom area was recommended by Neate in his 1967 plan.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHEN GREATER VICTORIA was smaller and her problems fewer, I regarded amalgamation as a dirty word. Each of our four municipalities were separate and distinct in function, and so they should remain.

Victoria was where we went to shop for anything that couldn't be bought at the nearest small store, and were told by too many merchants that they couldn't possibly deliver beyond the five-mile circle.

Saanich, then more rural than suburban and determined to remain so, looked wall-eyed at Victoria. The city wasn't going to creep over her borders, and had better not try!

★

Esquimalt was a small, snug navy preserve, and Oak Bay was Oak Bay.

This sectionalism was all very well until the outside world discovered us, and a population that has brought problems as well as benefits came surging in.

The old distinctions began to blur, the shopping sections mushroomed forth, and traffic multiplied. Along with all this, and as a result of it, division by municipality began to make less sense.

★

Necessity for concerted action on matters that no area could deal with alone was forced upon us. Hence the regional board, manned by representatives of the four urban-suburban municipalities and their neighbors.

But a regional board, though it has performed usefully at times, has never impressed me as anything more than a makeshift where Greater Victoria is concerned.

In a city of no more than medium size, each of four municipalities is free to bring in its own bylaws, and maintain its own set of local services. I think it's time we set about deciding whether it makes sense to ply four separate parish pumps.

I don't think it does any more. Increasingly, in fact, I see our present system of four-way local government as redundant, wasteful of time and tax money, and in terms of efficient operation, more than a little ridiculous.

A LETTER HERE FROM John C. Chapman of 2606 James Island Road, who feels that in a recent column, I not only convicted the United States without trial, but by implication, the U.S. Army officer charged with murder of Vietnamese civilians. This on evidence that could be prejudiced.

The letter continues thus:

★

"Can you really be sure that the United States soldiers in Vietnam would make a host of bitter and disillusioned veterans? Would this host be any larger percentage wise than those at home now who are disillusioned and bitter? You are right in your contention that never before have Americans in such numbers opposed themselves so strenuously to an official position. You fail to add the fact that except on two other occasions Americans have not had the opportunity. If you read history you will know that the opposition to the U.S. Civil War was just as loud and vociferous as present day crowds but there were not as many people. In the Korean conflict there was no war and people did protest but the Civil Rights movement had not reached the full tide of its fury at that time.

★

"And now with no declaration of war to make them traitors, and swelled with the victories of civil strife great numbers of Americans can openly oppose or pretend to oppose their government.

"And in all sincerity, where else but in a 'functioning democracy achieved at home' could a minority have such rights. Behind the Iron Curtain? In Red China? In Franco's Spain? Never!

"In two great wars, Canada picked up the torch of Liberty before America. Why damn them this time for being first?"

To all this, a brief answer. In the matter of a war she should never have embarked on, the United States stands self-convicted.

And, with all sympathy for a troubled but still-great country, if that was the torch of liberty the United States picked up in Vietnam, her definition of liberty needs changing.

We have added a second item to our Christmas shopping—a box of pulling-crackers bought on impulse—but there we stick and no doubt will until a startled glance at the calendar jolts us into action.

However, that fact isn't going to stop me from offering a suggestion to husbands:

Get a list of your wife's sizes, plus style and color preferences if you can, and file it in your pocket-book.

Sales ladies offer help to the extent that they're able, but such a list makes gift-hunting a lot easier.

MAJOR LEAGUE OWNERS DISCUSS REORGANIZATION

PLAYERS DEMAND SALARY HIKE, SHORTER SCHEDULE

No Bombs Expected This Time, But Sparks Might Fly

By DICK COUCH

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The major baseball leagues' annual winter meetings, highlighted by Charles (Chub) Feeney's election as National League president and kept afire by 11 player trades, ended a week-long run today with little prospect of matching last year's bombshell finish.

On the final day of the 1968 meetings in San Francisco, the club owners abruptly dismissed Gen. William D. Eckert as commissioner. The stunning development set the stage for Bowie Kuhn's elevation to power and opened the door for baseball's young turks to mount a revolutionary drive to reshape the structure of the game.

No such fireworks were expected today, but some sparks were expected to fly as the widely-differing club chieftains heard a report from the planning committee set up when Eckert was fired to explore the proposed restructure.

Kuhn, the former National League legal counsel who succeeded Eckert as commissioner pro-tem, since has gained the admiration of most of his colleagues and been rewarded with a seven-year contract. But the reorganization scheme, to include concentration of power in the commissioner's office at the expense of longtime league sovereignty, appears headed for a long stay on the drawing board.

Before Kuhn's selection as a compromise candidate, Feeney, a staunch advocate of retaining the separate identities of the two leagues, barely missed landing the top job in a power struggle drawn mainly along league lines.

The San Francisco Giants' vice-president, unanimous choice of the NL owners to succeed Warren Giles, who has retired after 18 years as league president, intends to move the league office from Cincinnati to San Francisco, where he makes his home. One of the prerequisites for restructuring is the location of both league offices and the commissioner's office under the same roof.

Moreover, Feeney is a member of the planning committee, and any negative response he might make to proposals for change likely would have the solid backing of NL owners.

While the brass geared for its last clash, the American League approved, with stipulations, the sale of Seattle Pilots to a 12-man group headed by Fred Danz and the wheeler-dealers Friday came up with three more trades and two straight sales of players.

New York Yankees, dealing for the second time in as many days, sent southpaw pitcher Al Downing and catcher-outfielder Frank Fernandez to Oakland Athletics, for first baseman-outfielder Danny Cater.

San Francisco swapped catcher Bob Barton, infielder Bob Etheridge and pitcher Ron Herbel to San Diego Padres for relief pitcher Frank Reberger. And in a five-man deal, biggest to date at the meetings in number of players involved, Washington Senators traded pitchers Barry Moore and Dennis Higgins to Cleveland Indians for second baseman Dave Nelson and pitchers Horacio Pina and Ron Law.

St. Louis Cardinals sold pitcher Jim (Mudcat) Grant to Oakland and purchased pitcher Bill Dillman from Baltimore Orioles.

The owners heard a report Friday on player negotiations from John Gaherin, their representative in the contract talks with the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Gaherin reported on 49 player demands submitted by the association, whose basic agreement expires Dec. 31. The players, asking for a shorter schedule, reforms in the reserve clause and higher minimum salaries, have threatened some form of action at the start of the season if the demands are not met.

Gaherin expressed confidence that a settlement can be reached, but the owners declined comment.

Now that Medicor has taken over what once was to be the Vancouver franchise in the National Hockey League, it is interesting to note the contents of a message that was received earlier by the U.S.-based organization from the National Hockey League.

It concerned the pre-announced plan of the NHL to assist the new expansion clubs in putting together a contending team.

It went something like this:

"As the proposed new owners and operators of the Vancouver Canucks, undoubtedly you will want to know what is meant by a contending team in the NHL and how we have determined you can go about the business of acquiring one.

"Because this is what you will need if you are going to get by Boston ... Montreal ... Toronto ... Detroit ... New York.

"You can see we have put you in with honored company, the old established clubs of the NHL, and to match up to this competition you will need the very best, the pick of the NHL, and here's how that will work, to your benefit, we trust.

"First, we are going to have an intra-league draft. You can forget that. You will not be involved. This is for the existing clubs only, and they will pick and choose from one another but, in such limited vein that they can lose only one player each. This should help shore up the weaker clubs, and won't really hurt the stronger ones. After all, they do deserve first chance because of seniority rights.

"Then it's your turn. The present clubs will make available to you and the other new club 18 players and two goalkeepers each. That's 40 players. To make this work fairly, however, we will have to limit what players you can have. So we have allowed the existing teams to protect 15 players and two goalkeepers. This will give you a choice of all the rest.

"How's that for openers?

●

"Now it's your pick, but before you do, you should be warned that once you select a player from a team, that team immediately can remove one of its players from its unprotected list, and protect him. It's the old one-for-one game. And futhermore, all any existing club can lose under this arrangement is three players and one goalkeeper. Because every time you select a player, up to three from a team, then that that team can use its protection rights to keep the others.

"Pretty neat, eh?

"We won't deny, either, that last time we had expansion we allowed the old clubs to protect only 11 players and one goalkeeper, but then there were six clubs to satisfy, not two, as is the case this time around. You can appreciate the reasoning, I trust.

"We realize you aren't going to get any Hulls or Beliveaus this way, but, after all, the old clubs must be protected. Yes, and we know what you are going to say.

"This means you will end up with the 16th, 18th and 20th rated players from the old clubs, unless you get the 17th, 19th, and 21st, which is possible,too.

●

"And oh, yes. On that draft business, you won't have a chance at first-year professionals or unsigned amateurs. They are exempt. Some of the older clubs got to them first. Yes, it does mean that they really have control of about 25 or 30 players, not 15, and these must be considered excellent prospects as well. But then we must be fair about this thing, as you can understand.

"But here's where you are going to get a real break. We've conceded the two new teams all draft choices from the WHL and AHL in the inter-league draft.

"That means, simply, that you can have your pick of the players who weren't good enough to make the NHL last year or this year. Naturally, we hope they will improve. And then of course you will always have the nucleus of the present Vancouver club to consider.

●

"Now, we have some more goodies, and here's where you can grab a couple of players for the future book.

"We are going to have an amateur draft in which all the teams will participate. It will be the first time in NHL history in which all of the world's 20-year olds will be available for selection.

"As a special bonus the two new teams will have the right of the first two picks.

However, in being granted that privilege, the new teams must agree to keep those first choices for at least three playing seasons.

"So don't make a mistake.

"Basically, that's the situation in regard to players. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to ask.

"If we can't get you any more players, we'll answer your questions.

"That's the least we can do for $6 million."

YOU CAN'T DROP THEM ALL!

Hardly looking like man holding hefty lead is Gay Brewer, who scowls as he watches putt slide past hole on 18th green during pro golf tournament at Miami. Gay's putting in Friday's second round produced more smiles than scowls. He had 11 one-putt greens and used only 25 putts as he fired six-under-par 66 to take four-stroke lead.

Old Putter and Bobby Brewed Magic for Gay

MIAMI (AP)—Gay Brewer had two things going for him in the $125,000 Danny Thomas-Diplomat Golf Classic—an ancient putter that found new life, and Bobby Nichols.

"I've played with him eight or nine times in our careers," said Nichols, Brewer's playing partner in the first two rounds, "and he's never shot higher than 67."

The magic remained in the second round Friday, with Brewer taking a six-under-par 66 for the 36-hole lead at 131, 13 under par on the 6,964-yard, par-72 Diplomat - Presidential golf course.

He held a four-stroke lead over Arnold Palmer and rookie Hal Underwood going into today's third round in this, the last stop of the year on the PGA tour.

Hugh Royer was another stroke back at 136.

Brewer, who hasn't scored a regular tour victory since his 1967 Masters triumph, was just one shot higher than the lowest opening 36 holes of the year, but had to scramble desperately to make it stand up.

He was in the water, in the woods, in the traps and, generally, in trouble. But the 10-year-old, mallet-headed putter came to the rescue time after time.

He had 11 one-putt greens and used only 25 putts for the round and only 52 for the tournament.

Bob Cox of Vancouver shot a 73 to go with an opening-round 70 while Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg was seven strokes back after 75s on both rounds and missed the 145 cutoff.

Vancouver Canucks shellacked Denver Spurs 7-3 to grab a share of first place in the Western Hockey League while the other penthouse tenant, Portland Buckaroos, tied San Diego 4-4 Friday night.

In the loop's other contest, 6,921 fans in Salt Lake City saw their Golden Eagles drop a 2-1 squeaker to the fourth-place Seattle Totems.

In Vancouver, 8,700 fans watched the Canucks erupt for four goals in the third period to turn the contest into a rout.

Andy Bathgate and Murray Hall counted twice for the winners while Ted Taylor, Paul Andrea and Germaine Gagnon added the others.

SPENCER GETS WINNER

Rookie Jean Losier and Brian Harper scored in the first and second periods to leave sixth-place Denver down 3-2 going into the third frame. Wilf Martin scored their other goal.

In San Diego, 11,484 fans saw Irv Spencer fire a 15-footer with 36 seconds left to give the third-place Gulls the tie.

RUSSIAN COACH . . . . . . BACK IN FOLD

Good Image Recovered

MOSCOW (AP) — The flamboyant coach of the world champion Soviet National hockey team, Anatoly Tarasov, has regained his position after a public scolding and now appears to control the team again.

Tarasov ran into trouble last spring after he held up a nationally-televised game in Moscow for more than 30 minutes in a dispute over a referee's call.

Soviet newspapers and sports officials criticized him publicly for delaying the game. He was "disciplined" and stripped of his elite "merited coach of the U.S.S.R." title.

Later, on June 3, an administrative organ to supervise the Soviet national hockey teams was set up and Tarasov was listed only as one of several coaches — without mention of his previous position as coach of the first national team.

This was seen as another public slap, and it appeared he had been permanently demoted from his job.

But Nov. 13 the annual appointment of coaches to the national teams was announced and Tarasov was named as "coach," under the figurehead "senior coach," Arkady Chernyshov, the same rank as last year.

Observers at the current international tournament in Moscow have noted that Tarasov controls the team, choosing substitutions and directing strategy.

His title as "merited coach" also was restored with no fanfare this autumn.

Kelowna coach Brian Roche enjoyed the Memorial Arena atmosphere the last time he brought his Buckaroos into Victoria, so you have to suspect he'll sound a reminder tonight.

The reminder may be important to the Bucks, especially after dropping a 4-2 B.C. Junior Hockey League verdict to Vancouver Centennials on Friday.

The loss dropped sixth-placed Kelowna three points behind Penticton Broncos, who improved their playoff hopes by shading New Westminster Royals 6-4.

On their last visit, the Bucks surprised Victoria Cougars 5-3 to touch off a five-game undefeated run. Friday's setback in Vancouver was Kelowna's third in four games.

MORRIS GONE

There have been other setbacks, as well. Duncan-reared Butch Morris, a bulwark on the Bucks' blueline, has left the club to join Brandon Wheat Kings of the Western Canada League.

Roche, obviously, is ready for a change in fortunes.

In Vancouver, second-period goals by newcomer Alex Dick and Bob Gaston broke a 2-2 deadlock to carry Centennials into a second-place tie with Kamloops Rockets. Larry Simon and Ken Love scored Vancouver's other goals.

Holdover Cliff McKay scored both Kelowna goals, including the game's first while the Buckaroos were playing short-handed. Ken Phillip assisted on both Kelowna goals to tie Victoria's Bruce Cowick in second place in the league's individual scoring race, two points behind Cougar centre Ted Plowe.

PLAY ROUGH

Tempers flared consistently in the final two periods and roughing pairings were sent to the penalty box on five occasions.

In Penticton, the Broncos came out with a four-goal spurt in the second period to slip by New Westminster.

Ernie Gare hit for three of the Broncos second-period goals and Ron Boyle got the other.

New Westminster made their mark in the first period, taking a 2-0 lead on goals by John McCracken and Mike Andruff.

Jim Dalzell and Bob Buchanan stirred things up for the Royals in the final period as they hit for two goals but Broncos' Fred Parent fired in a final pair.

Gail Lisogar Skate Winner

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gail Lisogar of Vancouver came up with 31.6 points Friday night to take first place in the juvenile girls' event in the British Columbia Coast figure skating championships.

Kathy Steele of West Vancouver was second with 31.1 points and Debra Lloyd of Vancouver was third on a 29.4-point effort.

In the juvenile boys' event, Kevin Busch of the host Arbutus Club took first place on 34.1 points while Geoff Groff of Kerrisdale was second and Peter Vizsolyi, also of Kerrisdale, was third.

The three-day championship continues today.

PUNCH IMLACH
. . . hard bargain

Buffalo Better To Heckle Staff

TORONTO (UPI) — A second Toronto sports columnist Friday reported that ex-Toronto Maple Leaf coach and general manager George "Punch" Imlach will coach the new Buffalo entry in the National Hockey League in the 1970-71 season.

Since he was fired by the Leafs at the end of last season, Imlach has been frequently mentioned as the likely mentor of the other new NHL franchise, Vancouver.

But, according to columnists Milt Dunnell of The Star and Dick Beddoes of The Globe and Mail, Imlach could end up with Buffalo.

Dunnell said in his Thursday column that Imlach was no longer favored for the Vancouver position because of the "hard bargain" he recently drove when he sold his share in the Vancouver franchise to the Minneapolis-based Medicor group, which owns a majority share in the Vancouver team.

★ ★ ★

Imlach was said to have controlled 1020 shares of the west coast franchise and finally accepted $250 per share. Dunnell said, "At least one other important shareholder scaled down his price in order to prevent Medicor from chucking the whole package" after Imlach made his deal. The result is that Imlach is not looked upon with great favor by the new Vancouver owners and is no favorite for the managing or coaching job in that city, according to Dunnell.

"There is a suggestion, within the lodge, that Imlach may wind up with Buffalo, where he would be in much better position to heckle his old boss, Stafford Smythe, who fired him so unceremoniously," Dunnell said.

Beddoes, after saying that things were a "trifle dull" since Imlach was fired by Smythe, quoted a "high-placed" source as saying that Imlach would be returning to the NHL next year, but not "necessarily as manager of the Vancouver franchise . . . but to run Buffalo."

Imlach who has an unlisted number here, could not be reached for comment on the reports that he will be going to Buffalo.

Slick Oregonians Roll Over Vikings

Warner Pacific College of Oregon showed speed and shooting accuracy Friday as they rolled to a 97-71 intercollege men's basketball exhibition victory over University of Victoria Vikings.

Teams complete their two-game series at the Uvic gym by meeting again tonight, starting at 8. Uvic's Jayvees and Vancouver CYO tangle in a preliminary at 6.

Every player on both teams hit the scoresheet in the pleasing game. Rick MacClean, with 17 in the second half, powered Warner Pacific with 23 points.

Teammates Daryl Stroschine, Ed Matheney, Jim Armstrong and Lloyd Suiter also hit double figures.

High-scoring Skip Cronck again led Vikings with 16 points, including 12 in the second half. Tom Hatcher added 13 points and Corky Jossul chipped in 11 for coach Bob Bell's Vikings.

WARNER PACIFIC (97) — Lloyd Suiter 10, Doug Lorenson 8, Jim Armstrong 13, Keith Houser 4, Rick Dunn 5, Ed Matheney 12, Rick MacClean 23, Vick Vanderveur 8, Daryl Stroschine 14.

VIKINGS (71) — Corky Jossul 11, Brian Brumwell 8, Tom Child 2, Skip Cronck 16, Barry Burch 4, Stan Piper 9, Ken Baker 2, Al Glover 2, Tom Hatcher 13, Mike Taaffe 4.

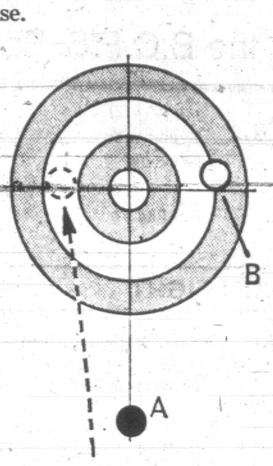
Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott

(Three-time World Champion)

This situation comes up all the time. It is the eighth end of a 10-end game. Whites are one up, with last rock, and this is the picture when the skip of the whites comes to throw his first stone. He can draw around "A" to the house, or draw to the side opposite "B" to split the house.



THE STRATEGY: At this stage of the game, you need to score, and you don't have to be greedy, so I would split the house. This is the easier shot and more important, you will likely have a routine shot for two with your last rock.

On the other hand, if you go behind "A" you must be letter perfect and not behind the tee line or even full into the four-foot ring as this would leave your opponent a chance to follow your shot and kill the end, or maybe even worse, steal a point.

★ ★ ★

TODAY'S TIP: When sweeping, you must face down the ice towards the skip and travel forward with the rock, not backwards.

This is the only method you can use if you are to become a good, effective sweeper, and a good judge of weight.

Travelling backwards, you cannot watch the direction, nor can you see rocks that are in play, tripping over a rock is extremely dangerous, and you cannot concentrate on your sweeping, if worrying about this possibility.

Moving in a forward direction while sweeping, you are able to watch the line of the rock, signals from the skip to sweep or stop sweeping, how close you are to getting past guards, and most important of all, how far it is to the house.

Swedish Shuttle Aces Appear Here Tuesday

It will be Sweden against Canada at the Racquet Club Tuesday evening as the Vancouver Island Badminton Association stages one of the biggest events on this season's shuttle calendar.

Currently on a Canadian tour, Swedish brothers Sture and Kurt Johnson will match strokes against a pair of former national singles champions from Vancouver, Bruce Rollick and Wayne Macdonnell.

Rounding out the evening's exhibition matches, which start at 8 p.m., will be a contest between two ex-Victorians—Judy Humber Rollick and Alison Daysmith Ridgeway—who have both won national, women's junior and singles crowns.

Three matches are scheduled for the male stars, with Sture Johnson facing Macdonnell and Kurt going against Rollick in singles before the Swedish pair tackles the Canadians in a doubles contest.

Both the tourists have represented their country several times in international matiches and Kurt held the Swedish singles title until he was dethroned by his younger brother, who still holds the crown.

Macdonnell is a six-time Canadian champion and Rollick captured the national open crown in 1968.

Vikettes Scamper Past Alberta Crew

EDMONTON — University of Victoria Vikettes turned on the heat in the opening stages and charged to a 38-25 triumph over University of Alberta Pandas here Friday in a Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association women's basketball league battle.

Vikettes, who were undefeated last season on their way to the league championship, scampered to a 22-14 lead in the first half and outscored the Pandas by five points in the second session as they chalked up their third win in five starts.

WITH NATIONAL TEAM

The Victorians, without the services of scoring ace Heather Witzel, who is playing with the Canadian national team in Cuba, and Gail Vaughan, who has dropped basketball to concentrate on studies, tackle the Pandas again tonight.

Rose Witzel (10 points) and Barb Tribe (7) were the point leaders for Vikettes while Marg Hawkley (10) paced the Pandas.

VIKETTES (38) — Jean Robertson 6, Rose Witzel 10, Lyn Carlson 2, Peggy Robinson 4, Barb Tribe 7, Dierdre Ogden, Lyn Hagglund 3, Laurie Sawden 2, Marcia McIntyre 4.

PANDAS (25) — Marg Hawkey 10, Lynda Phillips 5, Shirley Wouters 2, Jean Loree, Connie Sanders, Mandy Bailey 2, Sharon Worden 4, Jane Humen, Liz Anderstaam, Nancy Tolley 2.

Running Events At Beacon Hill

Sponsored by the Victoria Track and Field Association, the city age-class cross-country running championships will be staged Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

Races are scheduled in nine divisions, from peewee to open, and will commence at 1 p.m. from the Dallas Road starting point.

Constestants will pay an entry fee of 50 cents and may submit entries at the starting point at 12 noon.

Colwood Winners

Edith Noel (A division), Eileen Ewing (B) and Eva Howard (C) were winners in women's autumn eclectic competition at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Laperriere Draws Three-Game Sitout

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens, in a tight race for the National Hockey League's East Division lead, will have to do without defenceman Jacques Laperriere for a while.

The Rouyn, Que., native received a three-game suspension Friday night from league president Clarence Campbell for shoving referee Bill Friday and linesman Pat Shetler in a game here last Saturday night.

Laperriere, 28, will miss tonight's contest against Minnesota North Stars, Sunday's game in New York with the Rangers—East Division leaders—and next Wednesday's contest here with Toronto Maple Leafs.

LEAGUE GETS TOUGH

Earlier this season, as part of the league's get-tough policy, Campbell suspended centre Mike Walton of Toronto Maple Leafs and goaltender Gary Smith of Oakland Seals for three games each for shoving an official.

For the same offence in two separate exhibition games, he hit Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and Barclay Plager of St. Louis with $250 fines.

He also suspended Ted Green of Boston and Wayne Maki, then with St. Louis and now with Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League, for a stick-swinging duel in Ottawa Sept. 21 that almost cost Green his life.

Green received a fractured skull in the incident and is still recovering. Green and Maki were given match penalties, carrying automatic $300 fines.

Laperriere, who won the Calder Trophy as the NHL's top rookie in 1964 and the Norris Trophy as the league's top defenceman in 1966, picked up a minor penalty, a misconduct and a game misconduct last Saturday night at 17:31 of the third period in a game against Boston.

LOSES SALARY TOO

The misconduct and game misconduct penalties carry automatic fines of $25 and $50 respectively. In addition, Campbell ruled that Laperriere's salary for the three games he is suspended must be withheld by the Montreal club and submitted to the league.

While Laperriere was serving his time, Derek Sanderson scored a power-play goal that gave Boston a 2-2 tie.

Referee Bill Friday called the minor on Laperriere for high-sticking Boston's Jim Lorentz. He got the misconduct for chasing the referee and protesting the call too vigorously. The game misconduct came as the result of a "cross-checking" shove he dealt the referee.

Linesman Pat Shetler received the same treatment when he attempted to intervene on behalf of the senior official. Finally, Montreal captain Jean Beliveau put a stop to Laperriere's actions by wrapping his arms around him.

The Canadiens likely will use Paul Curtis from Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League in Laperriere's place.

Jarrett Salvages Draw for Oakland

OAKLAND (AP) — Left-winger Gary Jarrett scored at 1:25 of the third period to give Oakland Seals a 2-2 tie with Philadelphia Flyers in a National League game Friday night.

The tie was Philadelphia's 10th of the season and moved the Flyers to within a point of second-place Pittsburgh and Minnesota, who were idle.

The game ended in a hectic note as several of the Flyers challenged some of the 4,335 fans in the Oakland Coliseum.

BRAWL WITH FANS

The post-game stick swinging was the result of a fight which broke out between Jarrett and Flyers' Reggie Fleming shortly after Jarrett scored the tying goal. None of the fans was hit.

During a melee in front of the Oakland net Fleming smacked Jarrett in the right eye, giving him a five-stitch cut.

Carol Vadnais scored the other Oakland goal and Bill Sutherland and Joe Watson replied for the Flyers.

One Campbell Beats Another

It took a Campbell to handle Campbell River.

John Campbell's scoring heroics Friday powered Belmont Braves to a spine-tingling 43-41 exhibition victory over Campbell River in a senior boys' intercollegiate meeting at Belmont.

Campbell, the game's standout with 20 points, supplied the final edge by hitting for the winning basket with only three seconds remaining in the game.

Campbell River—Bob Glass 4, Peter Marcin 12, Rick Sharpe, Dennis Trout 7, Brian Laviolette 5, Ernie McLagen, Alfie Trembley 2, Doug Dyson 9, Jeff Lim 2, Mike Stewart. Total 41.

Belmont—Rick Sylvester 6, Kim Davies 5, Tom Dutton, Doug Cameron, Don Siebert 9, Ron Mills, Hugh Russell, Cliff Lequesne, Craig McGinnis 3, John Campbell 20. Total 43.

Zimmer Named Salt Lake Pilot

SALT LAEK CITY, Utah (AP) — Don Zimmer, 38-year-old former major league baseball infielder, will manage the Salt Lake Padres of the Pacific Coast Baseball League in 1970.

Zimmer, who played for five major league teams, managed the Padres' class "A" team at Key West, Fla., last summer, finishing with a 67-63 record.

BOWLER OF WEEK

A sparkling effort in second game helped Doug Mann step back into spotlight of Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Winner of weekly award two seasons ago, Doug returned to victory circle in the eighth week of current contest by topping men's fivepin division. Mann fired game of 358 between scores of 281 and 243 to wind up with 882 total in Men's Commercial League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Coulter's Goal Saves Butlers

The prize was big, and important: And Butler Brothers can thank Orv Coulter for an "even cut" of the cake in Friday's Vancouver Island Hockey League joust at Esquimalt's Sports Centre.

Coulter's power-play goal with 80 seconds left in the game salvaged a 4-4 draw with University of Victoria Vikings in a four-point game. The split kept Butlers and Vikings in a first-place deadlock.

Neil Standley scored a pair of goals and set up the third by Bert Coonfer as Chemainus Blues edged North American Stockers 3-2 in an exhibition game. Butch Dunstan and Ted Coviello scored for Stockers.

Rocks Beat Marshmallow Soup Group

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The Marshmallow Soup Group, brought by the Canadian government to perform at its pavilion, became the second-biggest attraction at the Pacific International Trade Fair here, outdone only by the American moon rock display.

The group, formed by Tom Cottini, drums, 22; Ron Smith, bass, 20; Wayne Sweet, guitar, 21; John Lemmon, organ, 21, and vocalist Jim Eaton, 18, performed daily four times in front of the Canadian pavilion, attracting many listeners, especially young girls.

The group is based at Kingston, Ont., and is running a nightclub in the old section of Quebec.

The Marshmallow Soup Group received several offers to perform on Peruvian TV and participated in two shows on one TV channel. They also appeared twice at Lima's new discotheque, the Unicorn Club.

Every time the Marshmallow Soup Group performed, the public gathered by the hundreds in front of the pavilion and usually young girls climbed on stage and danced with the vocalist, Jim Eaton.

"This is our first visit to South America," said Smith, "and really, we are enjoying it."

Smith said that he and the other members of the group had problems at first with the hot Peruvian meals. "But now we are getting accustomed to the spicy and hot local food."

He said: "Peruvian girls are indeed beautiful. Their eyes and skin make them look very healthy and they are strongly built."

You've always wanted to go to South America. Right?

You've probably seen the Sacre Coeur at night. Maybe you're bored with Monte Carlo. You've done all there is to do in Florida and Palm Springs.

Now you're ready for South America.

This year, come fly with CP Air and we'll take you to the towering Inca Temple of the Sun. You'll fly over the Andes to all the glittering excitement of Buenos Aires. And you'll see Rio from the breathtaking top of Sugar Loaf Mountain. All for only $378.40* plus air fare.

For as little as $123.00 plus air fare, you can spend 8 days discovering Peru. There's even an optional extra trip to an overnight jungle camp by the Amazon.

B.C. Gov't Supports Duncan Indian Bid To Get Land Back

DUNCAN — A Cowichan band proposal to take 350 acres of reserve land out of the city of Duncan jurisdiction would get provincial government approval, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Friday.

Campbell attended a joint meeting of the Cowichan band council and the city council.

The band has formed a corporation to develop a shopping centre on reserve land, with construction due to begin in 1970.

But rather than pay city taxes on the 350-acre parcel in exchange for services, the band would like to take it out of Duncan jurisdiction and purchase services in future.

1957 AGREEMENT

The reserve land first came under city jurisdiction in 1957 when the two councils signed an agreement, giving residents fire protection and other services.

Campbell said the Indians could take back the land because the 1957 agreement carries no legal strength.

Ald. Jim Saunders said the Indians are under the impression the city makes money on the taxes collected from the reserve.

"But if they take over the cost will be the same and they even could end up with higher costs."

Band manager Ross Modeste said 12 years ago taxes were "pretty low", but now the city takes in between $10,000 and $12,000 annually from businesses located on the reserve.

Ald. Saunders replied leases had increased along with taxes.

MEMBERSHIP SNOWBALLING FOR SPEC

CHEMAINUS — The militant Duncan branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control increased its membership by about 40 after a meeting in Chemainus Thursday.

The Duncan SPEC branch, which recently carried out a march on the Legislative Buildings in Victoria to protest the dumping of mining waste into Rupert Inlet, will hold its next meeting Thursday at the Khowhemum elementary school.

Chemainus residents heard Duncan SPEC president Kurt Horn outline the seriousness of the pollution problem.

Swim Pool Fund Drive Still Short by $40,000

DUNCAN — Cash and pledges for Duncan's swimming pool have topped $60,000 but $40,000 is still needed.

"We are asking the community not to stop supporting us in the final stage of the campaign," says Rick Hanson, vice-chairman of Duncan's Operation Recreation Pool Project.

The Op-Rec campaign began on Sept. 15 with a goal of $100,000 for Dec. 1.

"We wanted to show we really wanted a swimming pool and we appealed to all community groups," Hanson said. "They responded nobly but we need an extra effort to put us over the top."

Although the target date has passed, several money-raising functions are planned. They include carol singing by the Polyphonic Singers, Dec. 19; a turkey shoot, sponsored by Duncan Curling Club, Dec. 13, and two children's matinees at the Odeon Theatre, Dec. 22, sponsored by Duncan Chamber of Commerce.

So far some 50 community groups have supported the campaign and donations have been received from Bamberton, Crofton and Youbou.

Numerous events have been held in connection with the drive, including smorgasbords, art shows, concerts and auctions.

A walkathon raised $11,049, a swimathon $2,226 and a sportsman's dinner $876.

"Money is still coming in from the walkathon and swimathon," Hanson said, "and our business and residential canvass is still not complete."

Pat Moore is chairman of the campaign, with Brian Lawrence secretary and Al Grant treasurer.

Biologist Proposes B.C. Resources Board

A suggestion made Friday by Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney that there be a provincial fisheries and wildlife minister received a lukewarm reception from a Victoria biologist.

The mayor, who is also MLA for the Nanaimo riding, said a separate ministry could do much to stop depletion of the province's wildlife resources, especially fish and shellfish.

Mark Bell, University of Victoria biologist, said the mayor was on the right track but his proposal as it stood would do little to improve wildlife management.

"What is needed is a resources ministry or board which would be responsible for examining all the resources of the provinces," he said. "It would make recommendations as to their uses."

NO COMMUNICATION

Bell pointed out at present each department strove to promote its own interest, regardless of other resources involved.

Little or no communication exists between departments, he said.

"For example, it has happened time and again that choice park lands have been leased by the lands department for logging without the knowledge of the parks branch."

Bell also said a separate resource board would help to bring experts of the various departments together.

FOLLOW SWEDEN

"There is no communication between them at present," he said. "They don't understand each others problems. This naturally leads to misunderstanding."

Some biologists argue that B.C. should follow Sweden and force logging companies to restock rivers and lakes with fish.

It was explained in Sweden some logging companies operate their own fish hatcheries.

If a spawning ground is damaged by logging, the Swedish water courts oblige the company to restock it with fry.

Dog Sure Watches

CLEVELAND (AP) — Burglars who took loot worth $655 Thursday from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Esau Coney also took along the watchdog, a six-year-old Weimaraner named Fritz. He was valued at $150.

New Trial Ordered For Carifelle

NANAIMO (CP) — A change of venue has been ordered for a new trial for Anita Louise Carifelle, 24, of Ladysmith, B.C., charged with non-capital murder in the Oct. 3 knife slaying of her estranged husband, John Noel Carifelle.

The change was approved by Mr. Justice Peter Seaton, who ordered that the trial be held in Victoria as soon after Jan. 5 as possible.

An earlier trial ended in a hung jury here Nov. 22 when six men and six women were unable to reach a decision after deliberating for six hours.

Swiss Against War

BERN (Reuters) — Switzerland is asking Australia to withdraw three Swiss-made Pilatus Porter planes from Vietnam, it was announced Friday. The government said it has informed Australia that, unless the planes, which are designed to take off and land easily on rough terrain, are withdrawn, further exports of them would be stopped.

Easy to Get Lost in Channel Islands

By TANGUY KENEC'HDU

"In winter there are almost as many flowers as in summer . . . Orange and lemon trees blossom everywhere . . . fishermen haul their boats up on to the strand to the sound of the flute . . . In summer the men bathe in the buff."

In his eighteen years of exile Victor Hugo had plenty of time to get to know the Channel Islands. The colorful prose which they inspired still remains the best introduction to their contemporary history.

"The Channel Islands are bits of France which have fallen into the sea and have been picked up by England. Hence the complexities of their national identity. The people of Jersey and of Guernsey are English by choice but French by instinct, though they do not realize this, or, if they do, they would like to forget it."

And though the French swarm over England's South Coast in the summer, they seem to have abandoned the islands nowadays despite the fact that they are both close and ideally suited to the holiday-maker.

St. Peter Harbor on Guernsey

In the 19th century at least half the Channel Islands' visitors came from France. Last year less than 10 per cent, and in Guernsey only 3 per cent, were French — 55,000 visitors out of a total of 600,000. Of these 35,000 were day-excursion trippers from St. Malo or Granville who made directly for the duty-free shops in the port with the single idea of getting back the money spent on the fare by buying up whisky, cigarettes and other articles.

Ideally Suited for Holiday

Progress has not made the islands any more accessible from France. The fine ships which used to ply regularly between Brittany and Normandy and the Channel Islands have disappeared, to be replaced by irregular flights or, in the summer, by small steamers.

Recently a Guernsey company chartered two Hovercraft from a Sicilian firm (one of them is manned by Italians and flies the Italian flag, though the stewardesses are French); in summer they run a shuttle service for daytrippers.

Communications with Great Britain are excellent. Two ships with a passenger capacity of 1,500 sail back and forth every day in summer and twice weekly the rest of the year. From Jersey's airport—one of the largest in the British Isles — there are direct flights to thirty-eight cities in Great Britain and Ireland.

For one reason or another, the Channel Islands are back in the news.

Last winter relations between Jersey and Whitehall became strained over a question of local autonomy.

Then there was the sorry story of an immigrant worker, a Portuguese girl, who was very nearly expelled for being pregnant; and, finally, there was that business about the Dame of Sark who suddenly announced, to the dismay of her 550 subjects, that she was renouncing her feudal rights.

But, though the outward signs may differ, it is always the same basic problem, more subtle and more serious than any other which the archipelago has had to face in its tumultuous and stormy history: how to reconcile the islands' independence and traditional ways with the demands and complexities of modern economic organization.

Jersey is roughly ten miles long by six miles wide; at the last ten-year census in 1961 there were 63,500 inhabitants (10 per cent more than at the previous census, and the rate of growth is increasing) of whom 27,000 lived in St. Helier, its main port and capital.

Guernsey, half the size of Jersey, has 47,000 residents of whom 16,000 live in the main town, St. Peter Port.

The islands' coastline is varied, and more reminiscent of the North Brittany coast than of Normandy: headlands whose contours have been chiselled out by strong tides end in a series of sharp ridges, with beaches nestling several hundred feet below heaths crisscrossed by narrow paths.

Elsewhere the coastline slopes gradually down for two or three miles, to fall away into a flat expanse of grey sand sprinkled with scree.

Away from the coast the countryside is hilly, with deep valleys here and there; it is easy enough to imagine oneself back in the heart of the Continent.

Road signs are conspicuously absent. This, according to the authorities, is an additional tourist attraction, and it is easy to get lost in the leafy highbanked lanes as one searches for some hint of one's destination.

At crossroads cars (not to mention the fleets of buses which travel all over the long large islands) courteously yield the right of way.

Urban life is concentrated in the two capitals. These have little in common except their hustle and bustle.

St. Helier sprawls between the winding little streets of the old town and the broad promenades of its modern quarter. St. Peter Port climbs up the sides of its steep hill.

Here and there the facade of an old building or the tombstones in time-ravaged graveyards tell their tale of past history, of heroes, dwarfs and island dragons, of princesses carried off in the foaming brine.

Many streets have two names, one, the more modern, in English, and the other in Norman, often with no ostensible link between them. Rue de Milieu is also Queen Street, Rue es Anes becomes New Cut, and Rue Trousse-Cotillon doubles, with suitable propriety, as Church Street.

Only the farms still offer the rare tourist who can tear himself away from the beaches a glimpse of the generous heritage of the past. Though their interior, carpets and furnishings are very different, the granite dwellings are just like the farmhouses in Brittany, and you can hear the same language spoken as on the nearby Norman coast where the "Rs" become throaty.

Varied Coast, Landscape

Despite the usual overstated claims of the tourist brochures (Gateway to the Continent . . . Atmosphere of Old France), the general impression the towns give is that of any British seaside resort with its uninspiring rows of banks and busy shops.

Farming, which is in the hands of families of old Norman stock, is the backbone of the economy. But farming alone would not suffice to underwrite the future, even if the world were standing still.

Industry is still of minor importance, though light industry, particularly electronics, is being developed, and of course there are the famous knitted Jerseys (or Guernseys, as the rival islanders have baptized them).

At present two factors are responsible for the profound changes in the hitherto argriculturally-oriented' islands: the development of the tour industry and plans for enlarging the Common Market.

Tourists bring Jersey a rapidly increasing source of income, double the agricultural revenue — though in Guernsey farming is still the more important. Millionaires, too, are beginning to make their home here.

Glimpse of Past on Farms

The autonomy of the islands extends — and this is the crucial point — to the system of taxation. They receive no subsidy from the British Treasury and therefore do not contribute to it.

It is easy to see why certain millionaires and indeed many other of Her Majesty's subjects, whose desire is to pay the state as little tribute as possible for the privilege of living (and of dying), have chosen to take up residence in the islands or to register their businesses there. This influx of people and money is an important factor in the islands' changing way of life and mental outlook.

It would be pointless to discuss the independent government of the Channel Islands were it not for the fact that its mediaeval terminology and traditions make it an obvious target for irony, and it is all too easy to forget its basically democratic nature.

Sark is Europe's only existing example of an independent fief. The legal basis for this is a charter granted in the 16th century by Queen Elizabeth I to Helier de Carteret, a Jersey gentleman, descendant of a Norman from a French town of the same name who fought at Hastings.

He settled the island with forty of his relatives and tenant farmers; their heirs and descendants plus a dozen elected members make up the island's governing body, the Court of Chief Pleas.

QUICK GUIDE

How to get there

By sea: To Jersey and Guernsey from Weymouth and other ports in England. From St. Malo, Carteret and Granville in France.

By air: To Jersey (St. Helier) and Guernsey from London, Belfast, Dublin, certain other provincial towns in England. And from Paris, Dinard and Quimper in France.

By Hydrofoil: (April to October) to Jersey, Sark and Guernsey from St. Malo.

Communications between Jersey and the other islands by regular inter-island ferries.

Where to Stay

Jersey: There are over 50 "first class" hotels and over 200 guest houses. Guernsey: There are many hotels of all grades on the island. Alderney and Sark: A few small hotels and guest houses.

What to do

Jersey is the largest and most sophisticated of the islands, with an active nightlife in St. Helier. Luxury goods can be purchased duty free. The coast is lines with good sandy beaches and there is deep-sea fishing.

Guernsey is renowned for its beauty and its tranquillity, its fresh seafood and fruit. It is particularly picturesque with deep bays, tiny villages on the cliffs and an ancient capital, St. Peter Port. The north coast has flat, sandy beaches. The other islands are much smaller and can be reached by boat from Jersey and Guernsey. Sark is the last feudal state in Europe and like Herm, whose principal attraction is a beach famous for its myriad varieties of shells, has no motor traffic. There are historic and prehistoric remains on all of the islands.

The Bard Turned Into a Money-Maker

Stratford-on-Avon Theatre

By IVOR BROWN

LONDON — Shakespeare mentioned "dollars" three times in his plays. That form of the European thaler had reached England before he was born.

Now he is a dollar asset, not from royalties — his writings are free for all to play or print — but because trade, in this case tourism, follows the poet as well as the flag.

The visitation to Shakespeare's home town is vast and grows steadily. From Stratford-Upon-Avon the crowds stream out to the nearby village of Shottery where lived the family of his wife, Anne Hathaway.

Many Currencies

Other currencies than dollars pour in. Every year the statistics of attendance at the Stratford shrines sweep upwards. In 1968 there were three quarters of a million on the Shakespeare trail. Those who signed the visitors' book at the birthplace came from 150 countries.

The United States headed the list with 36,000, but many who go in do not bother to sign or do so for a party. South America was strongly represented. At the other end of the roll-call were single pilgrims from Ascension Island, Gabon, Mozambique and the Windward Isles. The Faeroes and St. Kitts were just ahead with two each.

In popularity the birthplace, being the centre of Stratford, comes easily first. Next comes Shottery, where over 250,000 visitors passed through the Hathaway Cottage. It is in fact a small farmhouse; otherwise they could not have got in and even so the pressure on the old floors is severe.

The chancellor of the exchequer should have a bust of Shakespeare in his office. The myriads pay to enter and have stayed in England to get there, mostly by bus. No thanks to British Railways, whose service to Stratford was always bad and is now worse.

The eagerness to make the trip has not been worked up by sedulous publicity. The thing has curiously happened. Poetry is not generally popular. The number of the world's playgoers is comparatively few, and the incoming myriads could not get into the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, beside the Avon if they wanted to; it is always booked full throughout the summer. Many are deterred from Shakespeare by bad teaching at school, and his appearance on the curriculum with exams to follow.

'A Superstition'

Yet still and increasingly he fascinates.

The town is a mostly genuine "piece of old England." But there are many authentic examples of that.

Not long ago a famous Shakespearian scholar asked one of them about the town's hero. He was told "we don't think nawt of Shakespeare here. He's a middle-class superstition, he is." But the bard is now more than a myth. He is a money-maker and a dollar-earner, an idol who has created an industry.

A special attraction was arranged this year, beginning on Sept. 6, to celebrate the bicentenary of the first Stratford Festival, called a Jubilee, that took place in 1769 — more than a century and a half after Shakespeare's death.

The town had not woken up to its chances until then. The famous actor David Garrick determined to shake it out of its sleep and brought a swarm of Londoners with him, driven over the hundred miles by horse-drawn carriage.

There was no theatre and therefore no acting. Perhaps nobody wanted a play. What they got in and around a specially built rotunda was a series of banquets, dances, processions, concerts, fireworks displays and horse-racing. Garrick recited verses of his own composition. Another poet spouted his tribute to "Avonian Willy, bard divine."

Sad September

Culture was out; cakes and ale were in. "Willy" might not have minded. He knew the English people, who were as eager, and perhaps more eager, for the crude pleasures and bear-baiting of Paris Garden than for his plays in the neighboring Globe Theatre. He might have been fascinated by the feasting and fireworks.

Unfortunately for Garrick, it was a sad September. The rain was continuous. The Avon burst its banks. The racing horses could not perform up to Juliet's line, "Gallop apace ye fiery-footed steeds." They splashed and struggled through a swamp.

The visitors were soaked in both senses of the word. There were bitter complaints about the prices for rooms and refreshments charged by the locals. The jest went around that if anybody was held up by highwaymen on the way home, he need only explain that he had been to the Stratford Jubilee and it would be understood that he had nothing left in his purse.

The appalling weather made the Jubilee a muddle and a flop. But Stratford did not go wholly back to sleep. It learned to sell relics, especially articles carved from Shakespeare's mulberry tree which, though cut down a century earlier, magically provided raw material for myriads of mementoes for many years.

That shabby swindle died long ago. There is now a memento trade in modern stuff, some of it garnish. But the Shakespeare houses and their exhibits are genuine. The birthplace trustees are honorable as well as eminent men.

This year the Garrick revels will be renewed. The rockets will go up, let us hope in a clear sky, and the horses will race. The cakes and ale mentioned in "Twelfth Night" will be there, but so will the play itself.

We do not celebrate only Avonian Willy, "the local boy who made good." We remember the master of words which have lingered ever since across the world in the air of theatres and the minds of men.

Artistic Quebec Carvers Producing Wood Sculpture

By EDWARD COWAN

SAINT JEAN PORT JOLI, Quebec — Wood carving is a skill that French peasants brought to Quebec more than 300 years ago, but it is only since the great depression of the 1930's that French-Canadians have turned it into a profitable trade.

This village of well-painted frame houses on the south bank of the St. Lawrence River — 45 miles northeast of Quebec City — is the centre of Eastern Quebec's carving industry. From shop windows on either side of trans-Canada Highway 2, finely tooled figures of basswood, pine, walnut and butternut peer out at travellers bound to and from the Gaspe Peninsula.

SMILING FARMERS

The subjects are traditional and tell something of the life of the "habitants," or early settlers. For that matter, they also tell a good deal about the present. The most common figures are farmers, stooped and weathered, but not infrequently smiling or chuckling.

Carving as an avocation has been known in this region since Frenchmen settled here in the 17th and 18th centuries, before Britain conquered New France. A prominent carver in Saint Jean Port Joli, Jean Julien Bourgault, explained that his forebears, although farmers by profession had been amateur wood sculptors.

The finely tooled communion railings, pews, pulpits and altars of the region's old Roman Catholic churches testify to the tradition of woodworking. So, too, does the present number of cabinetmakers and carpenters ("menuisier," the signs say).

In the 1930's, an especially desperate time for Eastern Canada, Bourgault and his late brothers, Andre and Medard, put wood carving on a commercial basis. Some of their sons and scores of their neighbors have followed their example.

GOOD MONEY

Jocelyn Caron, whose father's atelier has eight carvers, estimates that a man working full time can earn $100 to $150 a week, "depending on his ability." That is good money in this region, one of the poorest in Canada (but not poverty stricken, to judge from conversation and observation). About 150 persons in this village of 3,800 carve full time or part time.

There are three categories of carvers, according to Bourgault: "Mainhabilles" (literally, able hands), who turn out trinkets: artisans, and artists. Bourgault's son, Gil, who at age 32 has been carving for a living for 14 years, explained the difference between an artisan and an artist.

"Many of our designs," he said, carving knife poised in the air, "are repeated to fill orders. A work of art is unique. I call myself an artisan. An artist doesn't work for orders."

The senior Bourgault, whose pointed beard, blue beret and crisp, rapid French suggests a Parisian, said he was an artist. That does not prevent him from accepting commissions, such as a $400 one from a Montreal doctor for a half-life-size nude, but he retains a good deal of artistic liberty in executing the orders.

Bourgault said he has a four-year backlog of orders on his books, and other carvers also reported that the demand was outpacing the supply.

Most carvings cost far less than $400. Figurines generally are between five and eight inches tall and cost $4 to $8.

The 'Outside Boy' Tells Too Much

By ART STOTT

When the late Dick Freeman, city editor of the Victoria Times in the early 'thirties, sent junior reporter Peter Stursberg to interview the steeplejack recoating the St. Andrew's Cathedral spire he under-estimated the youth's potential for drama.

Peter came back with a personalized story of his own partial ascent of the spire to talk to the workman. Dick edited the copy and offered a cryptic observation: "The boy can climb."

Stursberg gaily dispels some of the comment's ambiguity in the opening chapter of his new book.

Discussing young friends discarded after they had served his purpose, Peter confesses: "In retrospect, I must say that I appear to have been a social climber, a young man on the make. Yet, what is wrong with that? Who isn't a social climber? It's part of the human struggle, of evolution, or the rat race or whatever you want to call it.

"It was just more violent in the 'thirties. We were in a greater hurry then because we had started late and had further to climb, and it was too bad if friends were left behind, but c'est la vie."

Too bad, also that the point of view rejects completely the philosophy of Benny Nicholas and renders incongruous the book's sub-title: "The Days of Benny Nicholas and the Lotus-Eaters."

Stursberg recaptures the rollicking humor and kindliness of Nicholas, the distinguished editor of the Times, his understanding of young people, his affection for them and his unending generosity to them. He expresses gratitude for the interest, help and encouragement given by the large-hearted figure who was the spirit of Victoria in his day.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS by Peter Stursberg. Peter Martin Associates. $6.95.

And he repays his personal debt by including in his book a sordid chapter on the prolonged drunk which preceded Benny's death, superficially justifying the inclusion by saying Ben would have wanted his portrait painted warts and all—a doubtful thesis. Those of us close in the Times family knew the story and considered it best held in confidence. Stursberg evidently felt no such restraint.

That, may be understandable. Ben Nicholas had been hiring Victoria-raised boys and training them. Stursberg came to us a bird of somewhat alien plumage.

He was the Cheng-fu-born son of a British official in the Chinese postal service who moved to Montreal with the family. There the depression forced him out of McGill with his second year incomplete.

Unemployment directed the next move to a place on the West Saanich Road. There, with no money in his pocket, he suffered a dull life, ambition curbed and his spirit grey as the hen run stuff that clung to his boots when he cleaned the family chicken house.

Ben's kindness opened the escape hatch for him. The job at the Times was vital, the door through which he could enter what he considered the high society of the Beaux Arts crowd—a group of young Victorians professing cultural interests, working hard for a good time and public notice. The Times' pay was low for juniors, but there were theatre passes and free dance tickets with other perquisites to make the job more attractive.

Lacking the common background of Benny's boys in the newsroom, Peter could scarcely have felt their kinship ties or loyalties.

His book captures very well the atmosphere of the gay blades in the Beaux Arts crowd and their lively girls at Billy Tickle's Empress Hotel dinner dances and the Yacht Club parties.

In its most sincere expression of sentiment, the author describes his affection, awe and respect for the boy who had joined the staff immediately before him—Lionel Backler, the tall Oak Bay young radical who backed his sympathies for Republican Spain with his life in battle near Saragossa.

But the Times, in this volume, emerges as a stepping stone for the author, a confessed young man on the make. Some of the sequences fall into minor error. Others present a convincing picture of a 56-year-old man's recollections of his impressions in his twenties, and the quotations from Bruce Hutchison are well-chosen.

BENNY NICHOLAS

How broad the volume's appeal may be depends largely on the reader's interest in the author's young manhood and his interpretation of the general scene leading up to the Second World War. The writing is highly readable, though occasionally paragraphs veer off at a tangent and some strain occurs in the effort to recreate the vernacular of "Those Days" from memory.

This is autobiography. It does not profess to be the story of an epoch in the history of the Victoria Daily Times nor its atmosphere in that day. To the generation of Victorians concerned, old names of people important at the time will convey their reminiscent warmth.

A Year in the Life Of Vanishing Whale

By CLIFFORD CARL

Whales have a fascination for everyone because of their large size but they are of special interest to some persons for other reasons. To the seafarer they are welcome companions in a watery world, to the commercially-minded they represent resources in the form of oil, food, fertilizer and pharmaceuticals and to biologists they are remarkable examples of mammals that have become adapted to an utterly different way of life.

But despite our long interest in these mysterious creatures we know very little about them. Masses of data have been collected concerning their anatomy, their migration routes, and rates of growth and studies have been made of behavior and of the intimate details of their family life but we are still very ignorant of matters such as how they can swim with comparatively little effort, how they can stay submerged for lengthy periods, how they can dive to great depths without harm, and how they regulate their body temperatures.

THE YEAR OF THE WHALE by Victor B. Scheffer. Charles Schribner's Sons. $6.95.

We don't even know for sure how old they get, though whale biologists have now evolved methods that should give reliable answers in time.

Of the several dozen species of whales that still exist in the oceans of the world the most easily recognized and perhaps the most renowned is the sperm whale and this is the one which is featured by Dr. Scheffer.

His story is of a baby whale and its mother through the first 12 months of its life and is told in an absorbing fashion and in a chatty but engaging style. Fascinating bits of natural history are revealed — the calf is 16 feet long and weighs a ton, the mother's milk is delivered under pressure, whales do not sleep in the "human" way but must rise at intervals to the surface to breathe.

A unique feature of the text is the periodic insertion in the narrative of bits of scientific knowledge, personal anecdotes and other pertinent items all of which help to explain happenings in the story or which add intriguing sidelights to whale biology. The result is a delightful yet authoritative account of a little-known animal of wide interest.

No better person than Dr. Scheffer could have undertaken this task. Having spent most of his career in the employ of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service working with marine mammals, especially with Alaska fur seals, he is a world authority in this field.

But his interest goes far deeper than studying just the life history of his subjects; he is concerned also with their future and he is far from optimistic over the outcome of man's exploitation of the larger whales of the world.

Whales are disappearing at an alarming rate. Unless common sense soon overrules greed, some species such as the blue whale and possibly also the sperm whale will be exterminated as were the magnificent sea cows of the Bering area 200 years ago.

The Year of The Whale is already considered to be a masterpiece of natural history writing.

THIS 1964 PHOTO of Shanghai shows the curving Bund at left beside the Whang Po with the old British compound in right foreground. Union Jack was still flying over the consulate although the British offices were closed and officials ejected in final break between two countries.

'They Had to Rule or Get Out'

By HUMPHRY DAVY

There are still many of us who remember the days when the great port of Shanghai, founded and largely financed by British commercial enterprise, was as much in the news as New York, London and Paris.

Shanghai had a magic ring to it. It was a door to adventure and many young people with a love for the "open road" found their way to the Asian port during the 1920s. It was a place where people of all races and creeds mixed, worked and played. It was a city of pleasure, sin and pain.

Today its name is seldom mentioned; and to the younger generation it must seem a remote and distant place—a city of the past.

It did indeed become a city of the past when Chinese Communists in the '50s squeezed British, American and European residents from the International Settlement.

And with their departure, its glory faded as quickly as it had risen in the 1840s when the English converted a wretched stretch of muddy foreshore near the mouth of the Yangtse into a flourishing port.

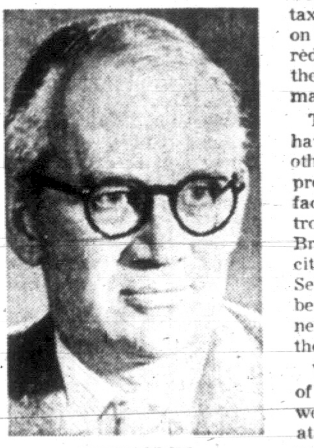
But to sensitive observers in 1960 watching the closing down of the last British factory in Shanghai, the event had a deeper significance than the decline of a great port.

It was symbolic of the passing of British power and supremacy in the Far East—a region which included the Malaya Peninsula, Borneo, Singapore and the Strait Settlements.

It may have a deeper significance for historians in the future—the beginning of a general retreat of Caucasians in the east.

Today we are witnessing the United States and Russia attempting to fill the vacuum left by the British, but both so far meeting with little or no success.

But this fascinating book by George Woodcock of the University of British Columbia doesn't attempt to tell why Britain decided to abandon her Far Eastern empire.



WOODCOCK

The end came quickly following the war which saw all of Britain's Far Eastern possessions fall into Japanese hands.

And as he points out, the British in 1945 returned and were welcomed by the native peoples who found their fellow Asians worse rulers than the European empire builders. But they came back only to liquidate the heritage of the past.

Today Hong Kong is the last stronghold of British Imperial presence in the Far East. And it too is expected to go in 1998 when the lease of the New Territories comes to an end. A hostile China is unlikely to renew it.

Woodcock in his work confines himself to the social history of this empire, its founders, administrators and colonizers. He discusses the fascinating careers of Sir Stamford Raffles, founder of Singapore; James Brooke, the adventurer who became Raja of Sarawak in 1841; and the freebooters, missionaries and others who extended British power deep into China.

As it was a commercial empire, it isn't surprising to find that power was wielded by powerful cliques. The administration was a closed shop to all but those with the proper commercial background, and class distinction was rigid. But regardless of what we may think of these merchants, they seemed to have done a fair job of governing.

The natives as a whole were not unduly dissatisfied with the system. For example, the Chinese of Shanghai, who were as intelligent as their white governors, for years were quite satisfied to pay taxes without representation on council. They preferred the red-haired foreign devils to their corrupt and tyrannical mandarins.

THE BRITISH IN THE FAR EAST by George Woodcock. Ryerson. $13.95.

The Chinese too seemed to have benefited more than any other race from British supremacy in the Far East—a fact which is a source of trouble today. Wherever the British established a new city—in Malaya, the Strait Settlements of Borneo—it soon became predominately Chinese or largely controlled by them.

Woodcock's story of the way of life of the white settlers is well told and fascinating but at times I feel he draws too much on material written by professional writers of the '20s and '30s. For example he mentions social prestige as one of three reasons why the British sent their children back home to school.

I think if he had consulted the mass of letters and diaries collected by British universities in the past few years, he would have come to a different conclusion.

◆

Apart from health, the main reason for sending children to their homeland was a Victorian attitude to work which still persists to this day. To the average Englishman serving in the colonies it was bad for children to be waited on hand and foot by servants during their formative years.

All classes, except the drifters, had servants in the east, regardless of whether they liked it or not.

Children had to be sent back home—to private schools where they would learn to stand on their own feet and to do things themselves.

The separation of members of the family was one reason why so few English settled permanently in the Far East. Cut off from their children, and sometimes their wives, they felt like exiles.

There are other points which Woodcock raises which are debatable. Did the British feel as secure, so sure of themselves in the colonies as the author claims?

This deserves closer analysis. The whites may have acted as if they were the salt of the earth, but when a handful of people are responsible for administrating millions of people, they have no other alternative but to create the impression that they are born rulers.

They couldn't very well go around making it known that they doubted their ability to maintain law and order. They had to rule or get out.

A Stark View Of Rootless Life

By PETER McNELLY

This year's National Book Award in the U.S. went to a terse and stunning novel about sex and politics.

In an all-out attempt to wholly engage its reader, Jerzy Kosinski's Steps abandons plot and time, plunging into a world of semi-conscious reminiscences illuminated by a chilly stainless-steel prose.

Steps is a collection of anecdotes which shift without obvious intention through phases of heightened self-consciousness. The vignettes are alternatingly bizarre, satiric, erotic, bitter, humorous and disgusting.

STEPS by Jerzy Kosinski. Bantam paperback. 95c.

Part of this book's success is its style.

The prose is at first hypnotic and detached, but later as the bizarre tales mount up, welcomely underplayed. Were this book more flashily written it would be too intense. In fact, it is just intense enough.

Rather than permit his words to challenge the events for attention, Kosinski has used style to complement the absent senses of time and plot in order to demand that we concentrate solely on the remarkable strangeness of the events themselves.

Our concentration assured, Kosinski sets out to manipulate ordinary moral awareness. He does this by forcing us to experience unusual political and sexual situations which embody conflicting moral positions. Enjoy one episode and he will surely disgust you with the next.

Kosinski hopes to shock his readers into temporarily accepting a world devoid of familiar values and compassion. This effectively forces us to accept and reject aspects of that world in order to interpret the novel.

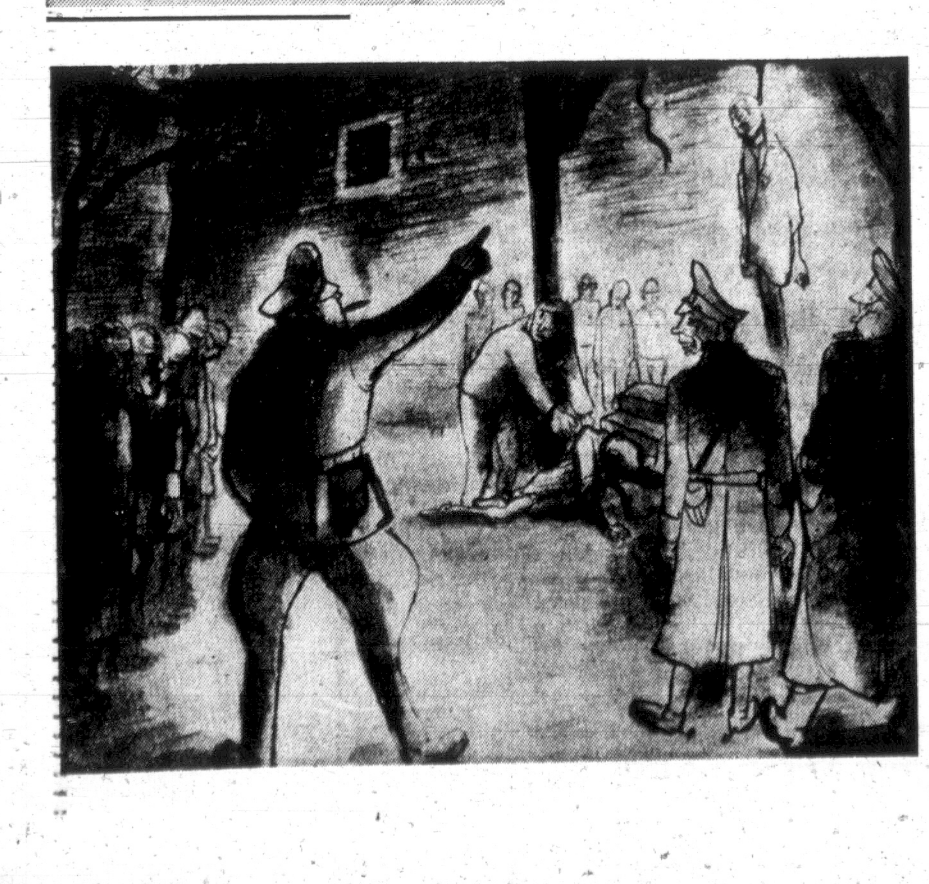
This stimulating technique is Kosinski's substitute for a point of view.

Because Kosinski leaves the reader with the task of giving meaning to the novel according to his own limitations and awareness, Steps is free from the urgent obviousness of message.

For this book is basically an expression of rootless self-consciousness, very much uncommitted and thoroughly contemporary. Steps frequently echoes Sartre's longing to escape the loneliness of absolute freedom.

Kosinski writes: ". . . everything had suddenly become very predictable. All we could do was to exist for each other solely as a reminder of the self."

Steps shows us a world of cold, intense passion. A world where people maim, manipulate and penetrate each other in order to secure and possess existence. Kosinski's freedom is a process of definition through manipulation.



Artists' Testimony Lives On

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

The Artists of Terezin is an interesting book, despite the author. Drawings and water colors by skilled artists, both professional and amateur, tell what it was like to live in Terezin, the "model ghetto" in Czechoslovakia.

Terezin was the camp the Germans used to keep the Red Cross from cutting off aid. With whitewash and a few good meals where they would do the most good, Terezin was passed off as a separate Jewish village; in truth, says Mr. Green, it was "the catchbasin for the final solution."

THE ARTISTS OF TEREZIN by Gerald Green. Prentice-Hall. $11.55.

The artists tell of the squalor behind the whitewashed walls and the transports leaving for "the east."

Almost all died, but their testimony lives on.

A section in the back presents pictures and poems by the children in Terezin. Where their elders drew what they saw — and were often punished for it — the children looked back to when they were happy. But they cannot be completely happy for as a boy named Pavel wrote, "Butterflies don't live in here, in the ghetto."

Mr. Green's job is to provide the historical setting for the pictures. His information, drawn often from those who survived, is undoubtedly accurate and often interesting.

Realizing that the many horror books of statistics have made the public blase about the six million dead, he has chosen only those facts germane to his topic, and the simplicity of his approach gives the statistics he provides new meaning.

His only problem is the Germans. He can't avoid them and he doesn't try. He digresses to delve into their motives and his whole narrative falls apart.

One boggles at his image of Hitler: "ready to shove the revolver into his carious mouth" and the German guards: "grinning louts, these bovine heaps of flesh, these woodenheaded uniformed clods . . . blue eyes rolling and winking, fat thighs slapped."

Green hates, but read between the lines of hatred and he has produced both an interesting and informative book.

Shy Observer Writes Softly About Indians

By JAN GOULD

"The Incredible Journey" and "The Fields of Noon" garnered international readership for writer Sheila Burnford. Now, this new Canadian has written a gentle study of the remote Indian reserves of Northern Ontario.

"Without Reserve" again establishes Sheila Burnford's ability to produce excellent prose. Her style is disciplined. When she writes of Indians beaching canoes, harvesting rice, cleaning tents, tending fish, and decorating a child's grave with Woolworth toys and gaudy religious pictures, she writes with a practised economy of words that portrays each scene intricately.

She and her artist friend, Susan Ross, whose drawings appear in the book, visited communities with names such as Big Trout, Whitefish and Sandy Lake. As well as the Ojibwa and Cree Indians, they met government officials, wardens, teachers and an enterprising university student who made his living by collecting buffalo droppings for parasitic investigation.

The two women took care to avoid becoming a "responsibility, a liability, or an intrusion." In time, they found acceptance. The writer explains that in her book "no drums are beaten, no problems solved."

WITHOUT RESERVE by Sheila Burnford. McClelland and Stewart. $6.95.

In time, they gained acceptance. Mrs. Ross set up easels and went to work. Shy Sheila Burnford sometimes found the need of an ice-breaker and adopted a new role, that of knitter, a knitter extraordinary who worked on a sad sock.

"It was wonderful camouflage, for I could drop my eyes to it and give it my absorbed attention when I did not want people to think I was giving it to them. Or I would prop myself against a woodpile and be sure that sooner or later some small girls would arrive to try their hands at a row or two, which led of course to their teaching me new words."

The travels were made "not to exhort, or teach, heal, snoop, pay or persuade, but in peace alone, in friendly interest, to learn something of their language and life." Consequently, Mrs. Burnford rarely offers personal opinions or editorializes about the way of life she observes.

Welfare day, when babies were "booming as a long-term investment," prompts her comment that "it is not man's inhumanity to man that will bring about disastrous consequences to the generations ahead, but man's humanity."

This writer always produces material that is worth reading. And, underlying all the gentle prose, she makes a strong plea for the preservation of these northern reserves.

When the Ojibwa and the Cree eventually go outside and face conflicts of a new world, she hopes that their reserves will stay as a sanctuary, as a home-coming place where their people can touch a "priceless security."

Union Club Began Over Butcher Shop

By PETER MATTHEWS

A year following the death of a Union Club member a letter arrived for him. It was returned to sender, marked "Dead." A second letter the next year from the same source was returned, marked "Still Dead." A third was returned, marked "Deceased."

For the next fifteen years, the annual letter arrived, addressed to:

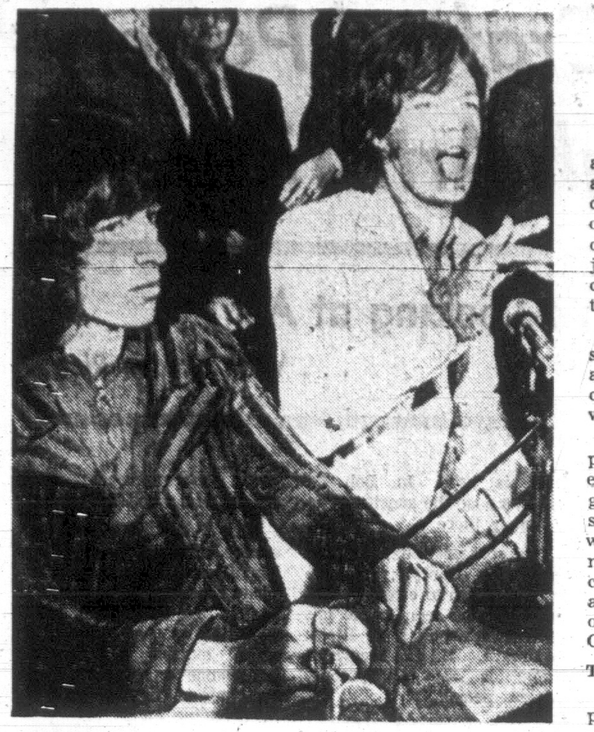
Charles Ezekiel Ellis—Deceased—Union Club, Victoria, B.C.

This is one of a host of reminiscences, legends, historical facts and incredible events chronicled by Paul Bissley, for the past 20 years secretary of the 90-year-old Union Club which began with a meeting of Victoria businessmen in a room over a butcher shop in the early days of the city.

EARLY AND LATE VICTORIANS: A history of the Union Club of British Columbia by Paul L. Bissley. Review Publishing Co. $5.

The book tells of the building of the first premises on Douglas Street at Courtney, the struggle of the members for comfort in rooms devoid of heat, of the famed nocturnal rat hunts in the basement and the eventual move in 1913 to the present Humboldt Street building.

The Rolling Stones: Pop Chorus of the Cold War



GESTURING at Stones' New York news conference kicking off U.S. tour is their charismatic leader, Mick Jagger. Billy Wyman is beside him. Group expects to make $1.5 million from junket.

By WILLIAM C. WOODS

The age of aquarius is an age of large acclaim for small achievement. Such a time dislocates the function of the critic — making his role more one of response than of judgment, the centre of his capacities more involuntary than cognitive.

He cannot afford to be too strict with the arts, sciences and laundry entrusted to his care, because if he is, they will disappear.

These reflections are not promoted by cynicism, or even a dissatisfaction with the given. For if it sometimes seems that all of rock isn't worth two bars of Mozart, it more often appears that all of classical music doesn't weigh as heavily today as the B side of an early Rosie and the Originals record.

TALISMANIC NAME

Be that as it may, these ponderous reflections are prompted by the art of man who would be quick to disown them — Mick Jagger — and by the craft of the men who underwrite his enterprise — The Rolling Stones.

Their very name is talismanic. The Stones are the only group one speaks of in the same breath with the Beatles, Jagger the only pop singer whose desperate sexuality — sprung from who knows what motherlode of motherlove — is the equal of Elvis Presley's commanding squirm.

Jagger and Keith Richards are songwriters in the same league as Lennon and McCartney. "Beggar's Banquet" is perhaps the best pop album of the year, and "Honky Tonk Woman" the top single.

But this list is really superfluous. The Stones are the Stones, and if you do not know who they are, there is a trail of burned-out teenyboppers five years long and two worlds wide to tell you.

Last week at the Baltimore Civic Centre — but you already knew that — the Rolling Stones tore their way through another round of an East Coast concert tour that has been characterized by the venomous press relations they court so assiduously, the adulation of the masses they entertain so effectively and the exposition of a music that remains unique in rock.

DIALOGUE OF ENERGY

Unique not simply for its technical excellence or its cult appeal, but for the light it throws on the cultural phenomenon that is Mick Jagger, who once described his relation with his audience as a "dialogue of energy."

In Baltimore, that energy was not absent, but it was disquietingly choreographed. For much of the concert, Jagger seemed to be functioning like an applause sign held up before a television audience.

When he clapped, the kids clapped, and when he said dance, they danced — but not before; and the apocalypse of "satisfaction" on which the show ended disappeared peacefully and promptly behind a red stage curtain as a green mist of stinkbomb smoke rose into the crowd.

$20 TICKETS

Of course, the concert was priced out of the range of the true believers. With tickets being scalped at up to $20 and beyond, it was no Woodstock crowd.

One saw more cardigans than new mobe field jackets, one looked in vain for a real groupie ready to leave home forever for five minutes alone with the low-down dirty king of British electronic blues.

So the questions remains unanswered: Did the Stones come dangerously close to being mechanical because the audience was too polite to turn them on, or did the hint of happy violence drain off because the group was slow in catching fire?

Which does not mean the show was a disappointment. It opened with a hair-raising "Jumpin' Jack Flash," and tapered gracefully into some acoustic guitar blues in which Jagger sang so well that he made B. B. King (who had appeared earlier in the evening) seem phoney in retrospect. It included a beautifully paced "Midnight Rambler" which Jagger took from softest sorrow to howling frenzy.

And it was highlighted by a classic rendition of what I believe may be the Rolling Stones' finest song, "Sympathy with the Devil." This is one of those rare rock pieces which take a bit out of history and make it more vivid than a newsreel.

The Beatles' "A Day in the Life" is another such, but it is so abstract that the difference between the two songs is like the difference between classroom existentialism and the abyss of despair waiting right outside your door.

There was horror, and something very like catharsis, in hearing Jagger out front of that pounding beat singing:

> Rode a tank,
> Held a general's rank,
> When the blitzkrieg rage
> And the bodies stank.

DESERVE BETTER

The Stones deserve much better — perhaps an atmosphere not unlike a minor riot, with feedbacks of frenzy sending artists and audience into mutual heights of song.

That being absent, the more mundane considerations I began with arise: is this just another case of prepackaged response a familiar product? Is the rock audience simply applauding its representative heroes out of nostalgia for something better?

I think not. The Stones are very, very damned good at what they do; and what they do is insist on a popular music that is cruel, spare and unsentimental.

The Beatles, for all their beauty, are creatures out of A. A. Milne. The Stones are the prime pop chorus of the cold war, the war that has no end. You'll never catch them in an octopus's garden until it comes complete with killer sharks.

The New Religion

By EDWARD FISKE

To Harvard University theologian Harvey Cox, modern rock music is not so much a youthful diversion as the modern equivalent of religions contemplation.

"When music is really loud, so loud that it totally occupies our aural capacities," he says, "we experience something curiously akin to deep and pervasive silence."

His observation, made in his new book, The Feast of Fools (Harvard University Press), is indicative of what may be the most important religious development of the 1970s: a spiritual revival that is taking place with little reference to traditional ecclesiastical institutions.

The evidence of this spiritual revival is widespread; from the well-known fascination with gurus and Eastern mysticism to astrology and the togetherness of the Woodstock rock festival.

★ ★ ★

In some senses this is not new. Crowds always need ritual if they are to act in concert. Society has always had mystics on its fringes. What is happening now, however, is that broadly-based, middle-class movements are beginning to operate in the overtly religious sphere of defining what's ultimately real.

Writing on the rock music, for instance, Jonathan Eisen, a young critic of the youth culture, declared: "What holds rock together . . . is not uniformity of sound or agreed definitions or even a stable constituency. Rather it is a consciousness, an esthetic and a framework of reference—a new reality principle if you will."

★ ★ ★

This principle has its new doctrines—"All you need is love." It uses music, drugs and whatever else is helpful to make contact with the "new reality." Organized religion has reacted to these developments on at least two levels.

Theologians have begun to question the final authority of rational and scientific categories and to ask whether it is possible to speak about objective religious truth at all, apart from religious experience.

At the liturgical level, churches and synagogues are also engaging in a renaissance of experience. The poetic pop art of Sister Corita, who found religious festiveness in the Wonder Bread wrapper and other ordinary objects was an early example. Churches are now turning to happenings, rock masses, dancing, light shows and readings from Eastern mystics.

UN Critical Of Israelis

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — With Canada and the United States standing out as the only Western countries in opposition, the General Assembly's special political committee narrowly passed Friday a vague resolution criticizing Israeli treatment of Palestinians.

The resolution passed with 50 votes for, 22 against and 38—including all the rest of the Western bloc—abstaining. It came only a day before the Big Four ambassadors were to hold the second of their resumed meetings aimed at finding a Middle East settlement.

An Evening at the Opera . . .
. . . is something not often available to Victorians. A fact which most people consider inevitable — but which Laszlo Gati, Music Director of the Victoria Symphony Society, found unacceptable. As a happy result, this Sunday and Monday, Symphony '70 will host two renowned operatic singers, Carol Neblett, soprano from the New York City Opera, and Jan Rubes, basso from the Canadian Opera Company.
The New York Times considers Miss Neblett to be a rising star, since she combines "artistry, ability, and a voice rich in the middle register, with outstanding good looks". The good looks are obvious from her photographs . . the fine voice is obvious from her New York successes . . . the combination promises to be a delight.
Jan Rubes performed often in the Opera House of his native Prague before coming to Canada in 1948. Since then his engagements have included all major North American cities, the Stratford Festival, Havana, Mexico, and no fewer than seven appearances at Carnegie Hall! Last year Victorians enjoyed his talents as Don Basilio in "The Barber of Seville."
The Victoria Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Laszlo Gati, will compliment these outstanding soloists in a program which includes favorite works by Mozart, Verdi, and Cimarosa. Tickets are now available from the Symphony Box Office at Eaton's . . . you can enjoy your Evenings at the Opera for

EYES on the conductor, a section of the 110-voice Victoria Choral ensemble "sing out with heart and voice."

LEADING Victoria musicians Richard Proudman, cellist James Hunter and lead violinist Elfreda Gleam, study the instrumental score for the work.

Top Tenor Talent For Bach Oratorio

Choral music lovers in this city who for many years have had to accept as inevitable weak tenor sections in local mixed choruses, are due for a pleasant surprise, says Victoria Choral Society Director Rodney Webster.

The 110-voice choir will present the major musical celebration of the Christmas season, Dec. 15 at Christ Church Cathedral, with a performance of Bach's Christmas Oratorio.

A strong infusion from the currently demobilized ranks of the Don Kyle Singers has resulted in a quite excellent tenor quality and much improved balance between this and other sections, says Webster.

The Choral Society's presentation brings together in addition, a number of notable Victoria musicians and one from Vancouver to perform the collection of six Christmas cantatas.

* * *

Contralto Elinor Bertram and baritone Stanley Martin are joined by Richard Loney, Vancouver tenor, in the three soloist parts.

From the Victoria Symphony ranks come a number of first-desk players, forming the orchestral portion of the ensemble.

Elfreda Gleam, symphony concert master, will lead the orchestra which as Bach prescribed, consists of strings, flutes, oboes and English horns, three trumpets and tympani.

Supplying the continuo will be Robin Wood on harpsichord, Richard Proudman at the organ and James Hunter, cello.

"This is Bach in a glorying, joyous mood," Webster says. "We are singing the work in English. It is not truly an oratorio but a collection of cantatas, each written by Bach for performance specifically on Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, St. Stephen's Day, New Year's and so on."

Hand-Crafted Pottery On High Artistic Level

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

A selection of the smaller works of several local artists can be seen at the Christmas show of the Print Gallery in Oak Bay. The show consists mostly of drawings and watercolors, with a nice selection of ceramic ware by Jan and Helga Grove, and sculpture pieces by Bob de Castro.

De Castro's wood sculpture is highly polished, nearly always black, sometimes ranging toward greenish black, or sometimes a reddish black. Lately there has been an addition of lighter color to his work, and the combination of an unusual sort of bright red, used most sparingly, gives to one or two of these pieces the look of Japanese lacquer ware.

* * *

However his sculpture pieces do not merely rest there, with the "decorative" qualities, like furniture. They are complete works of art in themselves, enclosed, self-contained studies of form and color, and wood texture.

The form he uses is that of a rectangular shape which tends toward curved, ovoid shapes; lines which are not quite straight, but slightly curved; rounded edges. This type of shape is seen over and over again in Northwest Coast Indian art, and is likewise now very common in abstract and semi-abstract contemporary art.

* * *

This is not a criticism. What matters is how sensitively, with what kind of discrimination, this sort of form is used. In Bob de Castro's case the sensitivity is obviously there.

This sort of thinking about shape, for example, (moving from squarish to circular, and back) can be seen in the ink wash drawings of Ricky Ciccimara. His recurrent theme is the anonymous, faceless people.

Sometimes there will be only one or two figures, but they remain featureless, depending on a careful black-to-white shading, and spacial positioning, to hold one's interest. It would seem that in every drawing a word, something like "alienation", is held fixedly in the mind, and this sets the limits of the work.

In Victoria one sees very little high-quality hand-crafted pottery being produced as a regular occupation. There may be ceramic ware here which attains the quality achieved by the Groves, but it's not ordinarily seen.

* * *

It is fortunate, then, that we have their work. It is smooth, even, and highly professional, hitting that level of artistic quality which we've come to except of Scandinavian craftsmanship. And, their ceramics are not lacking in freshness, and personal touches.

They use a blue which is quite remarkable, a marvellous color, and a range of shades such as silvery charcoals, ochre greens, silver greens, and wood-like browns.

Max Bates is here, with some Indian Ink drawings. His figures and horses are nice; the way he suggests a slouch, or a tilted head, in his very direct and immediate style, evinces a long-time experience in working with the human figure, and his deep feeling for it.

Vicky Husband has some good drawings and a watercolor made in Greece which is very crisp and clear, the way light and fresh air feels.

* * *

There is a fine drawing by Maggie Hilton; we could see more of her work. It is very free, very personal. The drawing is really unusual. Her subject, in part, is air pollution and devastation of natural resources and beauties; but the way she handles it is so poetic and gentle, and works on so many levels (illustration, cartoon, poetry, abstraction), that one is bound to be surprised.

The show also includes good work by Flemming Jorgensen, Paul Bishop, Herbert Siebner, Tony Urquhart, Alistair Bell, Eric Metcalfe, Peter Daglish, P. K. Irwin and Don Harvey. Most of this is either work reviewed in this column in recent months, or work not dissimilar in kind.

It is pleasant show with much variety.

Quebec Offers Awards for Songs

Amateur and professional authors and composers have a chance to win a grand cash prize of $5,000, or seven individual grants of $2,000 for advanced study abroad, through the Golden Key song contest now open.

Closing date for entries is Feb. 1, 1970.

This is a national and bilingual contest subsidized by the Department of Cultural Affairs of Quebec.

Songs must not have been published or performed in public at any time and in any way and only manuscripts, not tapes, are accepted.

A brochure containing all rules may be obtained from The Golden Key Song Contest, care of Les Productions Jacqueline Vezina Inc., Box 700, Station H, Montreal 107.

City Lensman Completes 'Victoria Story' on Film

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

"Let's capture The Victoria Story on film."

This was the headline in the Victoria Times of July 25, 1962—the year the city celebrated its 100th birthday in a blaze of pageantry.

Photographer Jim Ryan did just that. He exposed miles of color film to compile a movie record of the festivities for posterity.

But it took time and money (his own) to fashion the shots into a crisp, coherent travelogue, complete with music and commentary.

Seven years have slipped by since the film was begun and the finished product was seen for the first time Thursday by an invited audience at the National Film Board Theatre on Government Street.

"A really splendid effort," said Mayor Hugh Stephen.

His praise was echoed by two former mayors attending the preview—Dick Wilson who held office during the centennial celebrations and Herbert Anscomb who was mayor from 1929 to 1931.

All congratulated Ryan on his initiative and perseverance.

Anscomb, who was later minister of finance in the B.C. coalition government, said the film brought back memories of a great historical event and he hoped it would be seen by generations of Victorians to come.

Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson and Ald. C. M. Parrott were all for showing it in the schools and urged a special screening at City Hall.

"The film's greatest value lies in the future," Ald. Parrott said.

The 20-minute documentary centres mainly on the full-scale pageant. The Victoria Story, which drew a total audience of more than 25,000 to Royal Athletic Park during that sunny third week of July, 1962.

SLIPPED DISCS

More than 1,000 performers marched the road of time from Victoria's earliest days through the Roaring Twenties and Dirty Thirties to the age of The Bomb and The Twist, which was famous for slipping discs in 1962.

In a lavish finale, the whole cast marched on to the brightly-lit stage to form a wheel of progress with Victoria as its hub.

The pageant was written and directed by Dudley Remus, a U.S. pageant producer, from historical material provided by Victorian historian James K. Nesbitt.

Ryan's fast-moving film covers many other aspects of the centennial celebrations—the Mounties' Musical Ride; the opening of the Centennial fountain behind the Legislative Buildings; the unveiling of a bronze bust of the Queen in Beacon Hill Park and a spectacular firework display.

The film was edited by Frank Gilbert with narration by Richard Lillico and additional photography by Don Ryan, Karl Spreitz and Ian McKain.

VYING with the maestro, Canadian basso Jan Rubes demonstrates his conductor's style for Laszlo Gati at a rehearsal of The Music Master, Cimarosa's capsule comic opera which he will perform with Victoria Symphony Orchestra, Sunday and Monday. In it he appears as a dithery maestro conducting a string orchestra and having an exasperating time with the basses. The operatic program is shared by soprano Carol Neblett.

Jailers Fret Over 'Woman'

ROME (Reuters) — Officials at Rome's Queen of Heaven men's prison are wondering what to do with a prisoner who turned out to be a woman.

The prisoner, born Enrico Lambrushini, told embarrassed officials at a medical examination that she had recently undergone a sex change operation and now is female.

Prison authorities—unable to send her to the Rebibbia women's prison because she is still officially registered as a man—have shut her in an isolation cell until they find a solution.

TEA AND CAROLS

Tea in the castle with candles and carols is Victoria Musical Art Society's salute to Christmas '69.

The traditional Carol Tea which has been held by the Society for so many years at the Empress Hotel, will take on a new glamor by being translated to the unique atmosphere of Craigdarroch Castle.

It will be held there Sunday, Dec. 14 from 2:30 to 6 p.m.

The tea will feature home made goodies and a program of carols and Christmas music sung by the First United Church junior choir.

Tickets will not be sold for the event this year but donations to the Musical Art Society's major scholarship fund are invited, and as there are no expenses in connection with the tea, all monies received will go into the fund.

If Royal Comes Tumbling Down Will We Have a Replacement?

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

All who are concerned over the threatened loss of the Royal Theatre—the city's only acceptable-size concert hall-theatre—should not attempt to comfort themselves with the thought that demolition is still probably some years away.

So is any possible replacement—even if we were a lot closer to taking action than we are.

●

The recent warning that the Royal is due someday to be replaced by its owners, Famous Players, is not altogether news. The end of the 56-year-old landmark has been mooted several times in the past few months.

Since June of this year a committee chaired by architect Graham Argyle has been doing a feasibility study on a possible auditorium for the capital city.

The committee was set up by the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria to break ground for a possible long-term project.

Its investigation now has reached the stage where a detailed report is being prepared for the CAC executive. This will be the basis for a full brochure on the subject for information at government levels.

●

Argyle says the study has clearly indicated the need for an auditorium complex is great, not only for the performing arts generally in this area, but from the point of view of attracting international events.

The report, he says, at this stage is a purely philosophical one, but "it is a huge philosophy."

It deals not only with the need but also with the potential benefit to the capital region and the way in which a projected auditorium would tie in with the regionalism concept.

"Victoria is Canada's most western city," says Argyle. "Yet nothing is made of the fact—we have nothing to show for it."

The auditorium which he visualizes in terms of a multi-performing arts centre (the convention proposal could also fit in here) "could be the opening device, the starter, to place us on the international artistic and political map as the Geneva of the North American continent.

"It could give us the international status we deserve."

He says the report will be laid out under 11 separate headings.

Among these will be analysis of need, effect on regional environment, analysis of site requirements, proximity to downtown area, analysis of building content, anticipated cost and economics of operation; the last an examination of the possible subsidization of the building by its content, such as permanent rentals of specific areas.

●

A member of the committee is Victoria Symphony director-conductor Laszlo Gati, who has given his particular knowledge and practical ability to the economics of operation factor.

He agrees with Argyle in foreseeing the city's only practical future as an international political and cultural centre.

Few Victorians, he feels, would argue that it has an industrial future, and heaven forbid that it should become a city that lives from tourist season to season, constantly seeking new gimmicks and lures until there is nothing but facade and gimcrackery to compliment the scenic attributes.

But while he deplores the fact that Victoria is the only capital city in Canada that lacks a complete civic auditorium, he stresses: "If the Royal could be saved and its facilities improved we would still not be too badly off.

"Not as well off as Charlottetown, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton or Vancouver, but better off than some Canadian cities."

In the likely event that development of a performing arts complex in Victoria is still a long way from realization, it is Gati's opinion that the city should make an attempt, in whatever way is open to it, to have a say in the fate of the Royal Theatre.

In the meantime, "the Victoria Symphony is not likely to fold even if it has to perform for a while in a church basement or school gymnasium."

●

The inference is that at least a nucleus of the orchestra would be kept alive until such time as another concert hall was available.

"At present," says Gati, "we are playing to close to capacity audiences in the 1,500-seat Royal. We have to play two concerts in order to accommodate all who wish to hear the orchestra, thus increasing costs. Our need is for a 2,500 to 3,000-seat concert hall."

But the maestro is concerned with more than an auditorium and in a broader area than the symphony alone.

He would like to see a civic auditorium complex rise in the settling dust of the Royal's bricks (though not necessarily on that site), but he is quick to point out that—"a building by itself doesn't mean anything. It is just an empty box."

The first necessity he sees is to create and maintain an artistic environment.

He deplores the tendency to build multi-million-dollar buildings (the CBC and National Arts Centre) and then cut back on programming and subsidization budgets until the product that emerges is inferior or at least seriously hampered.

●

"Time is running out and there are many things waiting for us to get on with," he says. "Victoria could become the site of a major international festival. Possibly—in fact, preferably—in the off-tourist season.

"This community has to wake up to the fact that it is cheaper to provide artistically active and creative environment than detention homes, institutions and asylums."

HUSBAND AND WIFE teams add a family touch to this year's Ice Capades. Among them are Sandy and Roy Wagelein, now skating their second season with the show.

Local Skaters Tried

While Ice Capades is in Victoria, their scouts and coaches will be looking at local talent to add to their show.

Auditions are at 4 p.m. Dec. 12, and again following that evening's performance.

The coaches say they aren't looking for champions, just skaters of "superior merit." Acceptable applicants will be given training before being assigned to specific spots in the show.

Prospective male skaters must be 17 to 25 and between five feet eight and six feet two tall. Girls must be between 17 and 23 and five feet two to five feet nine.

They will be expected to bring their own skates and costumes to the auditions.

Ice Capades Marks 30th Year

Topflight comedy, specialty acts and gorgeous costumes will add zing to the 30th anniversary show of Ice Capades which opens Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Arena.

An exciting new look will be achieved in this year's show through the use of multi-vision, giving an upbeat flair to the traditional Skater's Waltz opening number.

Many familiar skating stars, as well as several newcomers, will present six production numbers.

FOR CHILDREN

One designed to delight children of all ages, "Once Upon a Time," is arranged around an East Indian story of palaces and kings, and a young thief who finally earns his laurels as a hero.

Secret agents and pretty girls abound in the spoof-off "Mission Improbable" while shadows of Ziegfield are raised in the splashy finale "Fourteen Miles from Montego Bay."

Audience participation will reach a peak in "Sing-Along, Swing-Along" when skaters will get the audience swinging with well-known songs and huge four-seater balloons will soar in the children's ride.

Among the stars returning for a third year are Don Knight of Dundas, Ont. and Janet Runn, whom he married in Los Angeles in June.

Knight earned his spurs as a member of Canadian Olympic and world teams before turning professional: He won the Canadian Junior Men's title at the age of 13, and the senior title three years later. At 19 he captured the North American Championships.

As in former years, Ice Capades will appear for five days in Victoria before heading for engagements in Washington.

NEW YORK 'BALLET CAPITAL'

NEW YORK (AP) — When Toronto-born Melissa Hayden and Jacques d'Amboise joined the new, shaky New York City Ballet 20 years ago, ballet was generally considered something for sissies in the United States, and American ballet was a thing to be sneered at in Europe.

Things have changed a lot since 1949. For instance:

1. When Miss Hayden and d'Amboise are not starring the strongly established New York City Ballet, they are off doing guest appearances with companies in cities that did not have ballet companies 20 years ago or any idea they would ever have one.

2. Under government sponsorship, school children are seeing ballet free in many places — building a solid ballet audience for the future.

3. New York is considered the ballet capital of the world now with its resident New York City Ballet, American Ballet Theatre, Joffrey Company, Harkness Ballet and American Ballet Company, many times with two of them performing at the same time in different theatres.

4. And in Europe, the U.S. is considered to be the place where the ballet excitement is these days and U.S. companies are given warm receptions.

Why has ballet pirouetted across the U.S.?

D'Amboise, husky six-foot-two father of four, and other male dancers who combine athleticism and grace with no embarrassment or affectation, have helped change the sissy image. Miss Hayden says: "Ballet is entertainment to begin with. There's nothing mysterious or remote about it. When children are taken to it, they're being exposed to an art form. But they don't know that. They respond to it and like it."

Miss Hayden and d'Amboise also have seen Europe's attitude change toward American ballet.

Europe now has seen more of George Balanchine's neo-classic style, in which he uses classical steps and positions in non-traditional ways, putting together short, plotless dances in various moods instead of telling one story for a whole evening. The European public and the critics have come to like the new inventiveness.

Dinosaur Skull Found at Pole

WASHINGTON (AP) — Part of a reptile skull from 200,000,000 years ago was reported found near the South Pole Thursday, and a top scientist called it "one of the truly great fossil finds of all time."

Dr. Laurence M. Gould, chief scientist of the 1933 Byrd expedition to the South Pole, reported the find to the U.S. National Science Foundation. He indicated it strongly supports the theory that most of the Southern Hemisphere once was a single land mass that broke up and drifted into sections.

Stark, Murderous Film Infused With Humanity

EXPLOSION
Capitol Theatre
By NORMAN CRIBBENS

This all-Canadian feature film had it's world premiere in Victoria, Vancouver and other Canadian cities Friday.

It sets out to be a chronicle of U.S. draft dodgers hiding in Vancouver, but soon develops into the study of a psychopathic killer at large on the Lower Mainland.

Anyone who seems to represent the authority he fears and hates is ruthlessly struck down, and his dementia is the end result of the war in Vietnam.

It is also born of hatred for his father, a former U.S. naval commander, living in Seattle, who shamed his elder brother into accepting military service in Vietnam.

The elder brother, Peter, was mutilated almost beyond recognition.

The younger brother, Alan, magnificently played by Canadian actor Gordon Thomson, is obsessed day and night by the ghastly death of his closest companion and is terrified of a similar fate.

Like millions of others, he muses: This has happened for centuries past; it is time for civilized man to call a halt.

The young rebel—obviously the product of a nice home in Seattle—drives to Vancouver and joins a hippie-like gang of draft-dodgers from many states of the so-called United States.

He becomes friendly with Richie Kovacs (Don Stroud), another fugitive from the land of the free, and they share a room in a colony of outcasts.

Richie invites strip-teasers Sherry Mitchell and Olga Kaya to spend the night with them. Richie makes love to Sherry but Alan, because of various complexes, is cold and indifferent to Olga.

(It is this scene which prompts our paternal movie censor, R. W. MacDonald, to warn us of "excessive nudity.")

Alan, disgusted by the experience, runs away. Richie follows him to a house in West Vancouver where they steal a super sports car. The boys then drive off into the North Shore mountains.

Next morning, while looking for a place to dump the stolen car, they pull into an unattended gas station. Two police officers appear and Alan, seeing in them the image of his father and the authority he hates, kills both.

Here we have a murderous film, the product of a murderous age, and it is to the credit of Meridian Films of Toronto (operating in Vancouver) that they have managed to infuse so much humanity into a starkly brutal story.

As in all Canadian films, there is hardly any humor. What little there is comes from scenes where Alan and Richie are satirizing the manners of an ultra-English family living in West Vancouver.

More of this lightheartedness might have relieved the doom-like atmosphere of the finished effort.

Safety Body Offers Hints

To make sure that the turkey is the only casualty of the Christmas season, the Canada Safety Council has some recommendations.

Trees should be set in a pail of water to keep them from becoming dry, and be kept away from fireplaces or heaters or where they might block emergency exits.

Last year's lights should be checked for cracks and breaks that might have occurred during the year of storage.

Householders planning fancy outdoor lighting should have the wiring checked by an expert.

And parents should try to keep down traffic in the kitchen when holiday meals are being prepared, in order to avoid a scalded child.

Award Given

A new IODE award for excellence in art history at the University of Victoria has gone to Frederick Netherton, 28, of 845 Reed.

The award was established this year by the Martlet (Saanich) chapter from the proceeds of a growing investment fund. Netherton, a third-year student majoring in art history and English, plans to go on to graduate work in philosophy and intellectual history.

PSYCHOTHERAPY CENTRE UNIQUE

Opting INTO Society Gestalt Institute's Thing

By ED GOULD

LAKE COWICHAN — Strangers who drive past this logging community along the north shore of Cowichan Lake are sometimes mystified by the sign on a former summer resort: Gestalt Institute of Canada.

They are even more mystified to see intense, scholarly-looking men and women flitting among the buildings at all hours of the day and night.

Since many of the men wear beards and some men and women effect hippie-style haircuts and clothing, the assumption is that this is a commune for people who've opted out of straight society in style.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The residents at the Gestalt Institute of Canada have opted into life, some of them getting their first taste of real life.

Organic Function

Students at this psychotherapy centre include psychiatrists, doctors, research scientists, recreation directors, social workers, writers and educators from all branches of learning.

Although some are from across Canada, especially Vancouver, most are from United States. They are here mainly because this is the retreat of world-famous author and psychiatrist Dr. Frederick "Fritz" Perls.

"I have often been called the founder of Gestalt Therapy," Dr. Perls said in an interview. "That's a lot of baloney. Gestalt is as old as the world itself. A gestalt is an organic function, an ultimate experiential unit."

Perls further illustrates the meaning of Gestalt, a German word for which there is no precise English equivalent, this way:

"You know that water consists of two parts hydrogen and one part oxygen. If you disturb the gestalt of water, split it into two Hs and one O, it's not water anymore. It is oxygen and hydrogen.

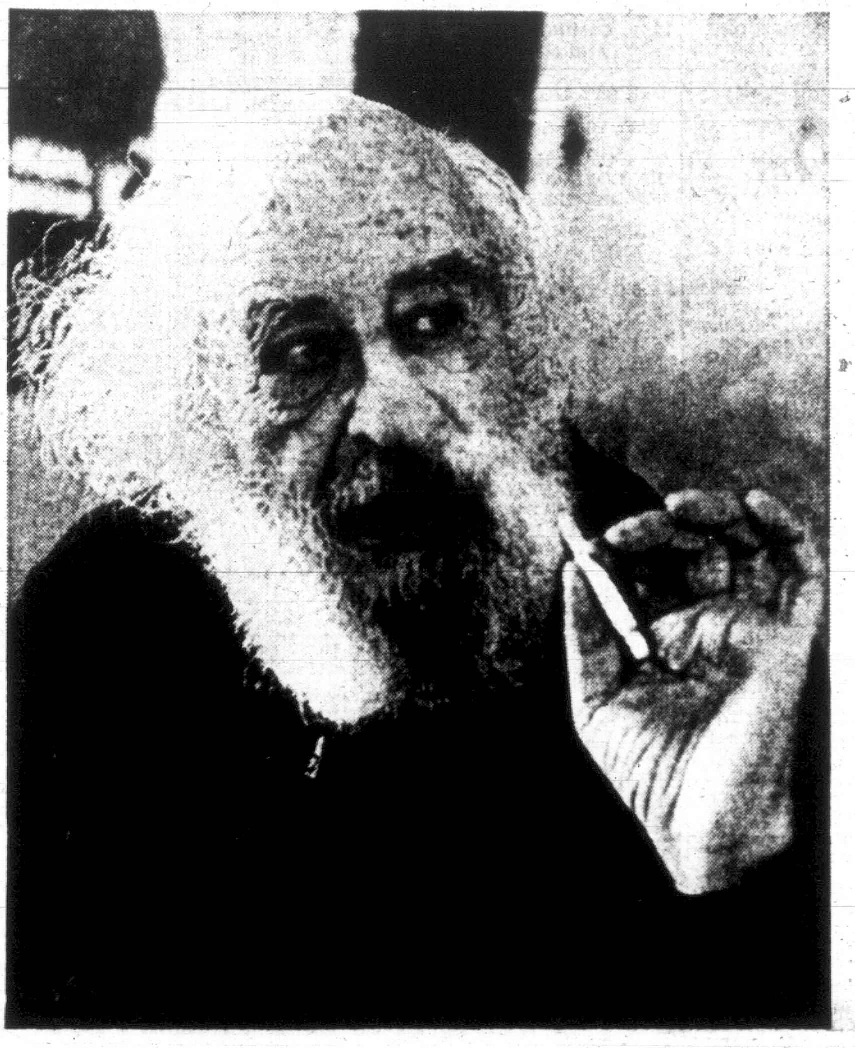
Spontaneous

"And you can breathe as much oxygen and hydrogen as you want but you won't quench your thirst."

Presumably the "students" here learn how to put separated parts together and make whole human beings again. In any event, the therapeutic techniques utilize spontaneous personal encounter and physical contact among groups of people.

Through establishment of Gestalt Institutes in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, San Diego, San Francisco and Los Angeles and books (Gestalt Therapy; Ego, Hunger and Aggression; Gestalt Therapy Verbatim and the new In And Out The Garbage Pail) Dr. Perls has become widely known.

Many "T" groups, encounter groups, awareness and sensitivity centres owe their similar techniques of attempting to reveal "real people" by stripping off their phony outer layers to Dr. Perls.



PERLS . . . founder of retreat

Not a Guru

But anyone who expects him to live up to their conception of a Savior, father figure or guru is apt to be disappointed. The very thought is contrary to the Gestalt Prayer:

I do my thing, you do your thing

I am not in this world to live up to your expectations

And you are not in this world to live up to mine

You are you and I am I

And, if by chance we find each other, it's beautiful

If not, it can't be helped.

The question most asked by visitors, including journalists, is: Why did you pick this location to live in?

"Because it is beautiful and unspoiled. I wanted a retreat and I could afford this place."

Queried further he admits that he is deeply disturbed by what is happening in United States where he lived for 22 years, a country which he describes as "almost fascist now."

More Human

Having fled Hitler's Germany, he feels he is in a position to recognize the symptoms. The difference between Canada and its southern neighbor is most noticeable in the people:

"The people in Canada are more human and living. I don't know how long Canada will be able to hold out against the fascism that is already in the U.S. They are very curious about you now."

Although fatalistic about the future and averse to trying to force changes, he paradoxically described his training of American therapists as "my Trojan Horse."

Meanwhile, the alarm and curiosity that greeted the establishment of the institute here less than a year ago has mainly subsided.

"Even to the police we are good guys now," Dr. Perls said.

When they first arrived there was talk that pot-smoking hippies and LSD parties would take place behind the closed doors and sign that declares "Strictly Private."

Drugs, in fact any artificial stimulants, are strictly taboo. Further evidence of community spirit was revealed when Dr. Perls addressed service clubs and the Chamber of Commerce and therapists have offered their services to the local schools.

Few Vacancies

The response has been so gratifying, a therapy centre or "mental hygiene centre" may be started separate from the institute. The half dozen neat buildings and a self-built crafts centre now contain about 32 people, most of them living in rustic conditions which are bulging at the seams.

Facilities are booked for most of 1970 already, although a six-week course for families in January still has some vacancies.

Ultimately, Dr. Perls would like to establish a college associated with University of Victoria or University of British Columbia with government support.

A kibbutz style with about 150 acres to house many families where people could work, learn, do their own thing and grow their own produce.

Such a site is being sought near Swartz Bay or Nanaimo.

Free Marijuana Part of Study Into Effects

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Foundation plans to give 24 young male volunteers all the free marijuana they want in a long-term study of the effects of marijuana smoking.

The experiment will take about a year to complete and the foundation, which needs final permission from the federal food and drug directorate and the provincial minister of health, hopes to start in January.

Filet of Soybean Product Of Professor's Test Tube

EDMONTON (CP) — Hot dogs will never be the same if a University of Alberta professor can market his process for making a meat substitute of soybeans.

For one thing, they will be inexpensive again—perhaps 30 cens a pound retail. And, though they no longer will be meat, they'll supply a satisfactory amount of protein.

Turning soybeans into artificial lunch meat is the work of Dr. Harold Jackson, associate professor of food science, and David J. Schroder, a graduate student.

Soybean meat by the Jackson-Schroder process is tasteless and can take various forms. If you want it to be a hot dog, mold it to the proper shape and add the proper flavoring.

Dr. Jackson, who is keeping the process a secret for now, says soybean meat likely will be used to alleviate protein shortages in underdeveloped countries. It also could be marketed as a processed meat substitute in North America and Europe.

Canadian Patent and Development Ltd. in Ottawa has refused to patent the process at its own expense because some of its steps have been used in other processes, says Dr. Jackson.

COST IS LOW

"This doesn't mean it's not marketable or commercial. We have two groups interested in it."

Cost of ingredients for one pound of soybean meat is nine cents. Add to this processing, packaging and retailing, says Dr. Jackson, and one pound of artificial meat should sell for 30 to 35 cents.

Dr. Jackson and the food science department intend to continue research into the possibility of making artificial meat from rapeseed, commonly grown in Alberta.

The soybean project was started at the university in 1963 by Y. T. Hang, a graduate student from Taiwan, who wanted to study possible uses for soybeans. Two years ago the project was picked up and carried on by Mr. Schroder working with Dr. Jackson.

Byproducts of the Jackson-Schroder process can be used for production of soybean oil for animal feed.

Weddings

Van Donkersgoed — Cowan

Reverend J. L. W. McLean officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the Victoria St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on November 15, 1969, at 7 p.m. when Lynda Anne Dunlop Cowan, daughter of Mr. Thomas Stoddart Cowan and the late Mrs. Jean Smith Cowan, exchanged wedding vows with Mr. Aart William Van Donkersgoed, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelmus Van Donkersgoed.

The bride wore a floor-length white gown of peau de soie and a matching train trimmed with lace. She carried a crescent bouquet of red rose buds and white carnations. The matron of honor, the bride's sister Mrs. Aileen Trapp, wore a red velvet dress trimmed with white lace and carried a bouquet of red and white carnations. Mr. Wilfred Van Donkersgoed attended as best man.

A stand-up reception of sandwiches and French pastries took place at the Red Lion Motor Inn.

Vallor — Rant

Mr. R. B. Rant, Millstream Road, is pleased to announce the marriage of his youngest daughter, Diane Susan, to Mr. Bruce Charles Vallor, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Vallor, Courtenay, B.C. The wedding took place November 22, 1969, in View Royal All Saints' Church. Reverend Lonsdale officiated.

The bride was attended by her sister, Karrie Rant, as maid of honor, and bridesmaids Carolynn Gudewill and Heather McGregor. Mr. John Sigismund was best man and ushers were Mr. Lyall Vallor, brother of the groom, and Mr. Bob Tyrrell. Toast to the bride was proposed by the bride's uncle, Mr. Dick Orchard. Mr. Bob Brotherston was master of ceremonies.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Vallor are now residing at 1031 Richmond Road.

Geibelhaus — Danes

At the Queen of Peace Church on October 29, 1969, Maureen Frances, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Danes, 749 Byng Street, was united in marriage with Mr. John Henry Geibelhaus, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Burkmar, 1063 Roy Road. The double-ring ceremony was solemnized by Reverend Father J. M. McNamara.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Catherine Danes, as maid of honor, and Miss Janice Rayson as bridesmaid. Mr. Andrew Kator attended as best man and ushers were Messrs. Colin King and Ken Poirier.

A reception was held at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. The couple will make their home in Coquitlam, B.C.

Reed — Carter

Sheralyn Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon H. Carter, 1035 Belmont Avenue, was married to Mr. Gary Francis Reed, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Reed, 4650 Cordova Bay Road, in a double-ring ceremony on Saturday, November 15, 1969, in St. Aidan's United Church. Reverend J. Rae Allan officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the lovely bride wore an elegant Elizabethan-styled wedding gown of Paloma silk with a softly A-line skirt. The empire-styled bodice, high neckline and lilypoint sleeves were adorned with Alencon lace; the train swept back from a bridal bow at the waist. Her full-length silk illusion veil was studded with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and freesia. Matron of honor, Mrs. R. B. Webb, sister of the bride, and bridesmaids Misses Lorna Milne, Jean Douglass and Lorraine Carter, sister of the bride, wore gowns of tangerine silk over taffeta with flowing back panels. Their headpieces were of tangerine net with matching combs. Flower girls Darlene Reed and Tammy Reed, cousins of the groom, were dressed in gowns similar to the bridesmaids. All the attendants carried colonial-style bouquets of white mums and tangerine carnations.

Mr. Douglas Vosper was best man and ushers were Mr. Keith Flintoff, Mr. Ron Webb and Mr. Edward Reed, brother of the groom.

A reception was held at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Mr. Charles Bardsley proposed the toast to the bride.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. Hogaboam, grandparents of the groom, Red Deer, Alta.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Carscadden, Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. Dale Shintaffer, Bellingham; Mr. and Mrs. John Rosso, Vancouver.

Carl — Morrison

On November 7, 1969, in Toronto, the marriage was solemnized between Dawn Mae Morrison, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Morrison, Tabusintac, New Brunswick, and Mr. David L. Carl, elder son of Dr. and Mrs. G. Clifford Carl, Victoria, B.C.

The young couple are residing in Toronto, where they are both on the staff of the National Cash Register Company.

Cowden — Pogson

Mr. and Mrs. H. Daniel are happy to announce the marriage of their daughter, Marlene Yvonne Pogson, to Mr. Daryl Walter Cowden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cowden, Victoria.

The ceremony took place in Belmont United Church, November 28, 1969, Reverend M. Henderson officiating.

8 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to sincerely thank our many friends and neighbours for their kindness, help and sympathy in our recent loss of a beloved husband and father.
Mrs. Margaret Briggs and family.

We wish to thank our friends for their kindness and sympathy during the illness and death of our mother and sister. Special thanks to Dr. G. F. Houston, Staff of Glenwarren Private Hospital and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.
The family of Robina Taylor.

8 CARD OF THANKS

The relatives and friends of the late J. E. McKitrick return their grateful thanks to all who sent flowers, and messages of sympathy. Special thanks to the Pallbearers and the Rev. A. E. King, Soloist and Haywards.

OLIVE WATHERSTON—We wish to thank so many friends for kind expressions of sympathy and for paying their last respects at the Cathedral service on Wednesday. —Hilda Whittaker, Dick and Elizabeth Brodrick.

9 IN MEMORIAM

MABBOTT — In loving memory of my dear husband Lewis Carpenter, who passed away Dec. 7, 1967.

We meet each day in memory's garden.

—Always remembered by Doris.

MABBOTT — In loving memory of Lew, who passed away Dec. 7, 1967.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary trouble and trials are past.
In silence he suffered, in patience he bore,
Till God called him home to suffer no more.

—Doreen and Martin.

WE MANAGE PROPERTY A NEW DEPARTMENT AT ROYAL OAK PROPERTIES
Yes we are trying to set the world on fire! In the last year, we accomplished:
1. New larger premises
2. Doubled the sales staff
3. Tripled insurance sales.

If you have need of conscientious property managers, we'll collect your rent, look after maintenance service—keep the tenants away from you — get you wholesale replacements — etc. etc. We'll be glad to come to see you and discuss your property management problems. Apartments, duplexes, homes.

Service is our motto

BUY NOW, PAY LATER!

Now is the time to buy that home in SOUTH OAK BAY you have always wanted. Unlike most in this highly desirable area, this one is relatively new, professionally designed and custom built. Just the right home for the family with children it offers 1760 sq. ft. of modern living space which includes 4 bedrooms and 1½ bathrooms. The ground level of the two floors is luxuriously carpeted with expensive but carefree broadloom and provides for living room with fireplace, dining room and family room in line which opens to a secluded sheltered patio for summer use. Well equipped kitchen and laundry adjacent. The owner is prepared to sell now and will rent from the purchaser, or will delay closing for six months with a reasonable deposit. Buy now, and avoid higher prices in the spring.

SCHOOL TRAFFIC CAMPAIGN

Safety-Minded Elephant Here

Elmer, the safety elephant, arrived at Langford elementary school Friday.

Elmer is not new to schools — he has been around since 1947 when Toronto parents and educators decided something must be done to combat numerous traffic accidents involving children — but he is new to the Victoria area.

Since his creation over 20 year sago, Elmer has become synonymous with safety programs for school children in grades one to five and is now administered nationally by the Canada Safety Council.

The Langford fire department is sponsoring the elephant's attendance at the Langford school and the program includes coloring sheets, pamphlets and crests, all designed to introduce youngsters to safety training.

Constable Luke Mulder, of the RCMP Colwood detachment and instrumental in bringing Elmer to Langford, said earlier in the week it costs about $100 to start the program at a school.

This is to cover the cost of the charts and crests and the banner with Elmer on it.

"There are 13 schools in the area and hopefully the program will be in all of them by June," Mulder added.

Participatory Democracy Nice But Who Really Believes It?

By JIM HUME

The women may do the talking, but it's the men who do the voting — at least in Victoria.

Hume

Based on averages kept since 1950 the Victoria voters' list works out at 54 per cent male, 46 per cent female. But when it comes to taking the time to trek down to the polling booth and mark an X on a piece of paper, the percentage shifts quite dramatically. Out of the average total voters each year 62 per cent are men, only 38 per cent the fair sex.

Even this late on Dec. 6, 1969, there's still a chance for the ladies to take their heads from under the dryer, break off from kitchen chores, or stop talking about the equality of the sexes and nip down to the nearest polling station to cast a vote.

Either that or accept the fact that it really is a man's world and you want us to run it.

It isn't that the male voting record in the city is that hot, just that it's a heck of a lot better than the female effort.

As a matter of fact, voter interest in civic affairs in Victoria has been pretty shoddy for years. It isn't much better in other municipalities.

There are a hundred theories as to why that is, but one of the most valid is the claim that people just don't feel involved.

The politicians mouth their platitudes about wanting the people involved, but reporters sitting on the sidelines often wonder how legitimate that desire is.

Take the miniature convulsion in Saanich last Monday because, a few days earlier, Times' reporter Roger Stonebanks had the audacity to inform readers of preliminary planning proposals for the McRae Estate.

Inside City Hall

Some Saanich council members didn't think that was cricket at all, although Stonebanks carefully explained that his story was based on draft proposals, not the finished blueprint.

What theose politicians were saying was: "Look, we have plans for the McRae Estate. But we don't want you to know what those plans are until we have them all tidy in a nice packaged deal.

"Then when you ask us questions about the finished product we can tell you that we have already discussed the problem—and would now like you to support us."

But let the public enter preliminary debate? Let the people actually get involved in the early going? Get the people involved with their ideas and suggestions?

A few politicians believe that they are elected to office to carry out the wishes of the majority of the people. At least that's what they say before an election.

Most appear to switch their philosophy once elected. Their creed then becomes "we must give the people what we think best."

This is not to question the right of a municipal council to make decisions. That's what they are there for.

But if they want the people to show greater interest in civic affairs, if they are really desirous of boosting interest at election times, let those decisions be made after the people have been consulted; after the public debate, not before.

Saanich isn't the only municipality in default.

Mayor Archie Galbraith, Central Saanich, would have had an easier ride towards today's vote on sewers had he let a little more daylight into the discussions which led, eventually, to the final recommendations.

Out there in the greenacres they talked for weeks about the project, but always behind closed doors. No information filtered out to the public. Nobody knew who was in favor of one aspect of the program but against another.

Nobody knew what reasoning had led the council to its final conclusions.

Eventually, of course, the property owners were offered the polished apple—and the politicians wondered why they were reluctant to bite.

The answer really is simple: the people were a little anxious about the ingredients making up the apple. That's a little more than two jabs at the typewriter, and probably far too simple a solution for most politicians to understand.

What's the latest phrase—participatory democracy? To bad it isn't really believed in, by politicians or voters.

Victoria Canoeists Hailed For Most Dramatic Spill

By HUMPHRY DAVY

An unusual award was presented Thursday to two members of the Victoria Canoe Club.

John Bradshaw, 4937 West Saanich Road, and Richard Ackrill, 3363 Linwood, received gold medals for achieving the most "dranatic upset" of the year, which is a light way of saying "for cheating death."

The drama took place in October on the swirling waters of the Cowichan, one of the most treacherous rivers on Vancouver Island.

Their canoe tipped as it thundered down the white waters of Marie Canyon and for a moment it was touch and go whether they would come out alive.

NEVER AGAIN

"I will never do it again," said Bradshaw. "Now I know how the river claimed the lives of four people in the past five years."

Bradshaw and his 16-year-old companion decided to run the Cowichan after hearing few people had canoed its course in the past 25 years. It was an exploratory trip to test if for other canoeists.

Indians in the past canoed down the river, but usually only when the water was low. On this day rain had raised its level.

Bradshaw said they had no difficulty in reaching Skutz Falls from Cowichan lake.

They portaged around the falls and launched their canoe in the swift moving waters below. They were soon plunging down rapids, just missing, and sometimes scraping boulders.

"The canoe at one spot plunged right into a hole, but for some reason the bow shot up like an arrow," he said. "Richard at the bow was way above me. Water swirled over me. I don't know how we got out of that one."

"Then we came to a very fast cascade and decided to portage around it," he added. "We launched our canoe again in white water. We moved swiftly down a canyon, struck a rock and cracked two ribs of the canoe. Further down in the centre of the current we hit another rock. Then things happened."

Bradshaw said after the impact the canoe swung towards shore, swamped and tipped.

"I said this is the end," he stated. "Luckily we were both able to hang on to the swamped canoe and when one end swung towards the shore, I was able to make it. Richard swam ashore."

Later, down river, a fisherman and Wilf and Kitsie Harper, also members of the canoe club recovered the canoe.

Their troubles, however, were not over. They climbed a steep cliff and hiked almost three miles before they met the Harpers who looked after their needs.

MINISTER'S VIEW

'Teachers Tarnishing Image'

Withdrawal of voluntary services by Vancouver teachers could tarnish their standing in the community, Education Minister Donald Brothers said Friday.

Brothers returned to Victoria Thursday after a three-week trip to Paris and Toronto.

The teachers began a ban on extra-curricular activities Monday to protest what they called the Vancouver school board's refusal to participate in meaningful negotiations for a 1970 contract. The dispute is now under arbitration.

UNFORTUNATE

"I think it is an unfortunate thing," said Brothers.

"The standing of the teacher in the community is being tarnished by this sort of tactic. Formerly the teacher was held in the highest respect by the community but if teachers want to engage in tactics such as these, this will have to be something that their own organization will have to judge as to whether it is proper.

"But I doubt whether the community as a whole appreciates these methods."

Presidents of the Vancouver elementary and secondary teacher associations said Friday they are prepared to recommend to their members lifting the extra-curricular activities ban.

GROUND RULES

Bob Pyke of the secondary teachers and Allen Garneau of the elementary teachers said in a joint statement a letter has been sent to the board requesting a meeting to lay ground rules for discussions next month.

Brothers indicated Friday more than tight money is involved in the government's partial freeze in school construction.

He said the government is currently involved in two interdepartmental studies aimed at cutting school construction costs.

They include a survey of student population growth trends and the feasibility of modular construction.

The concept of modular or assembly-line production of schools is also under study by a committee of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

Zatopek Bounced From Army Post

VIENNA (AP) — Emil Zatopek, Czechoslovakia's Olympic hero and idol, has been dismissed from the Czech Army, the defence ministry announced Friday.

The statement, according to the official news agency C.T.K., said that investigations showed Zatopek violated "Czechoslovak legal norms to an extent which is incompatible with serving in the Czechoslovak People's Army."

The announcement, heard here, referred to interviews in the Western press in which Zatopek reportedly made "serious revelations" about the Czechoslovak president, the defence minister and the state secretary of the national defence ministry.

TO DISCREDIT OFFICIALS

It singled out Le Figaro, Le Monde and the Neue Zuercher Zeitung and said Zatopek's information was used in these papers "to discredit the mentioned government officials."

"Emil Zatopek did not deny the articles. In the course of investigations he stated that by his position and activity in various organizations he is still constantly getting into conflict with military rules and regulations," the statement said.

It added that in taking the decision defence minister Martin Dzur took Zatopek's merits into account.

The statement did not say whether the dismissal from the pension.

Reports from Prague said Zatopek drew a colonel's pension after being suspended from the army recently. He was said to be employed by a prospecting firm making geological surveys and also receiving royalties from his books.

Late last month he resigned from the presidium of the Czechoslovak National Olympic Committee. Earlier he was expelled from the Communist party.

TURF 'FIRST' FOR ONTARIO

TORONTO (UPI) — A Canadian, and possibly a North American, precedent may be set next October when the Ontario Jockey Club features its first commercially-sponsored race at Woodbine Race Track here.

The $40,000 mile-and-a-half invitational handicap will be for the cream of Canadian-bred three-year-olds. A cigar manufacturer will put up half the purse and the Jockey Club will see to the other half.

Everton Loses First Home Game in a Year

LONDON (CP) — Fullback Emlyn Hughes headed in a centre from Ian Callaghan in the 47th minute today and sparked Liverpool to a 3-0 away victory over English League soccer leader Everton—Everton's first home defeat for a year.

A crowd of nearly 60,000 watched the match.

Everton now has 35 points from 22 games followed by Leeds United with 34 points from 23 games.

Liverpool moved into third place with 30 points from 23 games. Then come Manchester City and Chelsea, each with 28 points from 22 matches.

Teams in the First Division play 42 matches with the winner going into the European Cup of national champions.

Ashe Visit Ruled Out By Pretoria

PRETORIA (Reuters) — South African Sport Minister Frank Waring has ruled out any prospects of a visit by former United States open tennis champion Arthur Ashe.

Commenting on an appeal by South African tennis players to let Ashe, a Negro, play in the South African national championships next year, Waring said: "Mr. Ashe obviously does not intend to come to South Africa to play tennis but to engage in political activity."

Waring was commenting on an appeal to the white-ruled country's Lawn Tennis Union. The players also called on the authorities to consider sympathetically Ashe's visa application.

The minister said Ashe had by previous statements and actions shown an unfriendly and threatening attitude toward South Africa which practises apartheid.

Ashe signed a call for a boycott of the Mexico Olympics last year because of South Africa's proposed participation, Waring said.

SPORTS TEAM WILL VISIT CITY SCHOOLS

Six outstanding Canadian athletes will visit two Victoria high schools in January on the western leg of the Cross-Canada Sports Demonstration.

The demonstration, which started in Toronto Oct. 15, is designed to stimulate interest in athletics by non-participating youngsters.

The six athletes, all with Olympic or international experience, will be at Lansdowne Junior Jan. 7 and at Mount View Senior Jan. 8.

Members of the demonstration team are sprinter Harry Jerome of Vancouver, pole-vaulter Gerry Moro of Trail, decathalon competitor Michael Mason of Simon Fraser University, javelin-thrower Bill Heikkila of Toronto, and gymnasts Marilynn Minaker of Toronto and Diane Shelley of Montreal.

This week the team is in Edmonton.

ENJOYING A LAST RIDE in a 40-year-old pumper fire truck are Chief Andrew P. Lowry of Essondale and Public Works Minister William Chant. The vehicle, which served the government mental health centre on the lower mainland since 1929, was turned over to the Provincial Museum following a short drive on city streets. It will form part of a historic vehicle collection.

Canadians Dominate Wheelchair Dashes

BUENOS AIRES (CP) — Canadian athletes dominated dash events at the second Pan-American Wheelchair Games Friday, winning six gold medals, one silver and two bronze.

Four Canadian men and one woman won first-place honors in wheelchair races and the Canadian men's relay team easily took the 100-metre relay.

The medal harvest boosted Canada's totals to seven golds, 17 silver and 18 bronze.

Canadians winning their events were Ralph Thibideau of Lindsay, Ont., in the 40-metre dash; Gord Paterson of Toronto on class II of the 60-metre dash and Hilda Binns of Hamilton in class III, of the women's 40-metre dash.

The team of Simpson, Paterson, Eric Boys of Dartmouth, N.S., and Gene Reimer of Abbotsford, B.C., won the 100-metre relay.

Boys won a silver in class IV of the 60-metre dash and Joyce Murland of White Rock, B.C., won a bronze in class 1-B of the women's 40-metre dash.

Canadian women also won the bronze medal in the 60-metre relay event.

Rock Gardening Can Offer Variety and Satisfaction

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Natural rock is abundant on many properties on southern Vancouver Island. To some this is objectionable, to others it is a chance to exercise their ingenuity.

A third group of gardeners would like to do something. They expend a lot of labor, but never seem to reach their goal.

In general, the kind of plants commonly referred to as "rock plants" are quite distinct from the ordinary run of garden plants. They have preferences for soil and position, and when these preferences are met they succeed.

●

Two things the gardener must realize. First, true rock plants are high altitude or alpine plants, and the purpose in building a "rockery" is to provide, artificially, conditions under which they may thrive.

Even with a perfectly designed rockery we still have the problem of sea level climate. We lack the snow for a protective covering in winter, and melting snow water for adequate moisture in the late mountain spring.

Secondly, rock plants do not grow on rocks. They have root systems out of all proportion to the amount of top growth, and they need a deep gritty soil in which to forage.

Tips For The Home Gardener

Deep cracks and crevices, filled with decayed plant material and disintegrated rock provide their natural home. Starting as seedlings, they force their way downwards as they increase in size, surviving if the cracks are deep enough or producing seed and giving up the fight if conditions are not satisfactory.

For the garden the plants are purchased, not grown from seed scattered over the rocks. Therefore, a deep soil is necessary for planting, for we cannot set grown plants into cracks.

Where cracks already exist in a natural rock outcrop it is possible to build a suitably deep bed for planting.

This can be done by cementing rocks in place to give the required depth, but the finished job must not look like a bump on a log.

Careful study is first needed to determine the best way of increasing the depth without losing the natural contours.

Next, the existing rock should be studied for texture and strata. Strata in rocks is like grain in wood, and has to be matched for pleasing effect. Unmatched rocks are as confusing to the eye as horizontal and vertical planks at random on a wall.

When layout has been decided and suitable rocks obtained, the next step, and probably one of the most important steps with this kind of work, is to provide drainage from the built-up bed.

This is one thing most gardeners forget. When winter comes with a few days of continuous rain, the beautifully made and carefully planted pockets of soil become tubs of water and mud. The plants fail to survive.

●

With drainage planned, and provided in an unobtrusive manner, the rocks can be cemented into place, the cement being kept to the back, or soil side, never visible from the front.

Soil mixtures to fill such pockets will be determined by the plants to occupy the area. Some, from alpine meadows, will like leafmould and compost; others, from screes and moraines will need much grit added.

Obviously, the real beginning, whether a natural rock outcrop or an artificial rock garden is planned, is to determine what plants are to be grown.

Rock, or alpine, plants have names starting with every letter of the alphabet, from alyssum to zauschneria. The gardener could well spend the winter evenings with library books, making lists of groups that like the same soil and moisture conditions.

While this fills the evenings, the daylight hours will be needed for the outdoor construction work, for it is none too soon to start if planting is to be done at the right time in spring. Weekends will be occupied collecting suitable rocks.

A rock garden on level ground where no natural rock exists allows full play of the imagination.

●

The design should be a mountain scene in miniature, and the plants selected must, when fully grown, be in scale with the whole layout.

Rock strata needs careful consideration and placement, otherwise the best design will result in visual confusion.

One thing to remember is that rocks are not ornaments added to embellish the finished structure. Many gardeners think a rock garden is a mound of soil with rocks on top.

The rocks in a rock garden are like icebergs in Arctic waters, most of their bulk is out of sight. Under the soil they provide conditions for the plants that will grow around the peaks.

So, to build a rock garden, the rocks go in first, then the spaces between are filled with suitable soil mixtures.

For those interested in rock gardening there are many good books in the Victoria Public Library. Spend time studying these and save time later.

Another source of practical information is the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society — maybe the few dollars for a membership could prove to be a gilt-edged investment.

WEEK'S WORK

Dried corms of Anemone coronaria and A. blanda can still be planted where early spring sun will catch the borders and make lovely drifts of long lasting color.

Always a bit of cutting out can be done of old wood or tailend of perennials to clean up.

If the lawn needs another cutting, set the blades higher than for summer before doing the job. Edging done now should last a while.

Make arrangements for fruit tree pruning to be done in February. Sometimes difficult to make contacts at that time.

Turning the heap of composting material now will hasten decomposition. Add water if dry sections are encountered.

'Tis the Season to Be Wary in Choosing Christmas Toys

—Bill Halkett photos.

Christmas shopping with mother can be entertaining if you have the time to try out a few games. Bobby, 4½, discovers the finer points of cue-handling on a regulation size table with the help of his mother, Mrs. W. R. Page, and a hidden, but handy, carton to stand on.

Doll Talk Sounds Like Cocktail Party

By SUSAN RILEY

Toys are getting so talented they may be giving away kids for Christmas next year.

For example there's the new Baby Pattaburp who does just that. She joins legions of dolls in Victoria stores who cry, giggle, dance, drink water and the rest.

Used to be children took baby dolls home to cuddle. But the new breed of doll sits benignly on a store shelf waiting for little girls to take them home and turn them on. Throw a switch and they come alive.

Following in the footsteps of veterans like Walking Wendy comes a new ballet doll, Dancerina. This mechanized marvel "twirls" when batteries are connected, performing arabesques and pirouettes with casual precision.

No less professional, but more frivolous, is Swingy, who performs an up-tempo, rock step with abandon.

There are still traditional baby dolls but even they have taken on a more human look. Drowsy is an amiable little cherub permanently in a state of semi-wakedness.

Talking dolls have become less monosyllabic, more sophisticated.

PJ, one of Barbie's "groovy-talking" friends, bubbles: "College parties sure are fun!"

And Stacey, presumably just over from London, tells Barbie and Ken in a "swinging English accent" about the "fun we had at the cinema."

Beside them stands Julia, modelled after the star of the popular television series, who says something like "Kissing sure is fun!"

In fact, pulling all the strings on all the talking dolls simultaneously would not be unlike standing in the middle of a cocktail party.

Then there's Tike-on-a-Trike. She rides a bike.

While adults are chugging around in hopelessly outdated gas-propelled cars children can drive a quiet, fumeless electric car which sells for $35. It is battery-operated, has a gear shift and comes with a battery recharger.

Recent heavy space traffic and television accounts of real life lunar landings have given rise to a number of complex, plastic, inter-planetary devices for boys.

Space Bubble, Space Discovery, Space Station, Space Crawler, Project Apollo, and a portable Cape Kennedy lend credence to rumors that toy manufacturers are secretly running the show in Houston.

Tucked behind a mountain of space equipment in one Victoria store were a few GI Joes. They aren't selling well any more, say sales clerks.

The movable multi-outfitted soldiers are the victims of the 10-year-old's attention span and adverse publicity given war toys.

A few plastic rifles are tucked away with the cowboys and Indians on a back shelf behind the bold and adventurous—but good-natured—moon-travellers.

Test-driving a new hand-powered car in a local toy department is four-year-old Susie Neudecker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lou Neudecker. The car scoots around in all directions as the driver turns the wheels "just like rowing a boat."

Testing Council Looks for Best

The Canadian Toy Testing Council has released evaluations of toys on the Canadian market in the recent addition of Canadian Consumer.

Seventeen council members chose 104 toys and put them through six weeks of testing, including a play session in a nursery school.

The results: 51 of the 104 toys tested are considered good buys.

Mrs. A. R. B. Lawrence, council president, said toys are chosen for testing on their originality, design, age group, need or improvement from a previous model.

Those toys labelled GB (good buy) have attained high ratings on design, function, play value, durability, price, safety and packaging, she said.

However, toys hazardous in any way or otherwise receiving low evaluations are not listed at all. Therefore, all the toys listed in Canadian Consumer have proved to be good.

Those rated as GB are outstanding, she continued.

The following are excerpts from the Toy Council recommendations published in the November-December issue of Canadian Consumer. Several toys from the GB listings have been selected from each classification. Prices are approximate.

ARTS AND CRAFTS

At every age it is important that the material with which a child works is of good quality. Kits should contain good instructions and adequate material to produce a satisfactory finished product.

Good Buy examples:

—Firm-o-grip paste, No. 801, Canada Crayon, 45 cents, ages 3 and up.

—Modeline Clay, 59 cents, ages 3 and up.

—Frexon crayons No. 401, Harbutts, 59 cents, ages 3 to 6.

CO-ORDINATION AND CONSTRUCTION

The prime consideration with a construction set is that it be geared to the capabilities of the child, neither so difficult as to cause frustration nor so simple that it bores him and prejudices him against further construction efforts.

Good Buy examples:

—Gismo, DMA Industries, $1, ages 3 and up.

—Rattle Push, Playskool, $2.50, ages 1 to 3.

—Design Blocks, Tinker Toy, $4.50, ages 3 to 8.

GAMES

These teach co-operative play and foster patience. Look for attractive graphics and clear instructions. Be careful that a game lies within the capabilities of the child.

Good Buy examples:

—Blind Mice, No. 8305, L'il Beaver, $1, ages 5 to 10.

—Hot Shot Hockey Game, No. 991, Munro, $7, ages 7 to 12.

DOLLS AND DOLL ACCESSORIES

Large, fully washable dolls are best for small girls. Their clothes should be easy to put on and take off. Dolls that look like little girls appeal to the early school-age child and fashion dolls to the over seven-year-old. Doll equipment should be reasonably sturdy and without sharp edges.

Good Buy examples:

—Girl doll in toter, No. 28639, boy doll in toter, No. 28539, Reliable, $6.98, ages 3 to 8.

—Lounge suit, MP6, Doltol Products, $2.25, ages 3 to 10.

INFANT TOYS

These should be in clear, bright colors, washable and able to be mouthed with impunity. Avoid rough edges, insecurely attached eyes, squeakers or bells, long strings and brittle plastic items that may shatter.

Good Buy examples:

—Plush animals, W1, W6, W7, Ganz Bros., $2, ages 6 mos.-3 yrs.

—Sensible Rattle No. 275, Kiddicraft, $1.70, ages from 6 mos.

—Bath Toy, Trendon Ltd., $3, ages 3 mos. to 2 yrs.

PUZZLES

The prime consideration here is that the puzzle challenges a child without frustrating him. Graphics should be clear and bright.

Good Buy examples:

—Soma No. 30, Parker Bros., $2, ages 8 and up.

—Small puzzles depicting train, village, farm, dwarf, Simplex, 59 cents, ages 4 to 8.

TEACHING AIDS

These are best when they not only give a child new information but help stimulate his interest and imagination. It is important that the information be accurate. Avoid dullness of appearance, approach or presentation.

Good Buy examples:

—Map of Canada Jig-Saw Puzzle No. 101, Somerville Industries, 98 cents, ages 6 and up.

WHEEL TOYS

These should be sturdy and well-balanced with well-finished edges. The wheel should roll smoothly and be securely attached.

Good Buy examples:

—Tootsie Toy, DMA Industries, $1, ages 2 to 5.

—Tiny Tonka Car Carrier No. 635, Tonka, $2.50, ages 3 to 8.

Home-Made Blocks More of a Challenge

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

A local nursery school teacher, Dorothy Durrant, was asked what toys she would recommend for younger children.

"I'd suggest parents get some two-by-fours from the lumber yard, saw them up in different lengths, paint them bright colors, and see how many things the child can do with them."

"It doesn't matter whether you have money to buy expensive toys or not. There is more challenge in a nest of home-made blocks than a toy which the child can only wind up and watch."

One good thing to buy, Mrs. Durrant suggested, might be an easel, large sheets of paper, lots of paint and good brushes.

She had a number of other suggestions for do-it-yourself toys that cost practically nothing.

"Some lumber yards will let you go through their piles of odd bits of wood. Choose different shapes—oblongs, triangles, squares—which are quite large, at least 12 inches wide.

"Saw six-inch slits in one side, wide enough for another piece of wood to fit in. Again, paint them in bright colors, and the child can make any number of fascinating designs and constructions."

For a noisier Christmas present, there is the home-made percussion band, with tins, lids, pebbles and sandpaper as the basic materials.

Put pebbles in a can, such as a coffee can with plastic lid, and shake. Pierce two holes in a tin lid, put string through to hold it, and hit it with a piece of wood or metal.

For the drum, use a larger (five-pound) can with two circles of heavy inner tubing for the ends. Have a shoemaker put eyelets around the edge of the tubing so it can be tied on tightly.

For drumsticks, use pieces of dowelling tipped with chamois stuffed with rags and tied tightly over the ends.

To add to the din, two small pieces of wood with sandpaper attached make a nice raucous accompaniment.

For a quieter pastime, Mrs. Durrant suggested one of the simplest but most satisfying toys is a box of odds and ends like bottle tops, old beads, spools and buttons — anything you can think of — to be glued on to pieces of wood.

"Children love gluing the bits and pieces on the wood in patterns, but make sure you get good furniture glue so their masterpieces won't come unstuck."

Mrs. Durrant admitted that a box of bottle tops might not look like much of a present to a child who really wanted the battery-operated spaceman or that doll that talks.

"But expensive toys, with no creative possibilities to keep the child's interest, definitely do not give the most satisfaction. If the child does nothing but watch the toy, he might as well watch it on a television commercial."

Unusual silver holders for candles and tapers

Candles and everything pertaining to them have always fascinated us . . . so when we spied some very unusual silver holders for tapers at Montague Bridgman's . . . nothing would do but what we had to be shown every size and variety in the store! . . . These Danish candle holders are silver plate on brass . . . beautifully shaped with that purity of design the Scandanavians are noted for . . . One is a round, crown-shaped arrangement set low to the table . . . It comes in three different sizes, and each holds five or six slender tapers . . . Another beauty for conventional candles is a gracefully entwined row of five holders . . . Then there are squares and triangular arrangements . . . and a lovely candelbra for tapers which has the mystical look of a menorah . . . Any one of these would make a lovely Christmas gift . . . if, that is, you could bear to part with it yourself! . . . We also saw some smart glass vase holders from Finland . . . with round or square candles made to fit . . . When not holding candles, these can be used for flowers . . . Little candle balls in different colors are just big enough for tapers, and can be grouped to suit your own taste . . . And the Danish teak candleholders complete with fat candle have a nice balanced look we find very attractive . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Anyone who says she hasn't a clue what to give John or Mary or little Joe and Suzy . . . quite obviously hasn't visited Wilson's recently . . . and therefore is missing out on some of the most wonderful gift ideas extant . . . not to mention depriving herself of a very pleasant shopping experience in an unhurried, relaxed setting . . . where the salespeople are eager to wait on you . . . and you never have to champ at the bit waiting for a spot of service! . . . So make a point of going to Wilson's soon! . . . Right now we're all steamed up about a big shipment of entrancing music boxes from Switzerland . . . Some of them are toys . . . others are for grown-ups . . . like the beautiful jewel or cigarette box with double compartments and glassed-in movement which plays Edelweiss when you open it . . . And what would you say to a banana, orange, lemon or pineapple . . . looking real enough to sink your teeth into . . . and giving forth with such tunes as "Yes, We Have No Bananas" (naturally!) . . . the lilting Jamaican "Marianne," or "Ma Pomme," to mention just the ones we took note of? . . . There are revolving ballet dancers . . . Christmas angels, bells and baubles . . . all tuneful and completely fascinating! Be sure to see them when you're shopping in Wilson's . . . a pleasure you should be enjoying right now to put you in the Christmas spirit! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Italian knits with a difference . . .

Lore Dibbern of Florence, Italy, is a label that hasn't been seen around Eaton's since 1967 . . . but it's back again now in the Import Room . . . attached to several quite outstanding knits . . . These are beautifully made, with hand-stitched linings . . . and we should mention that the dresses are silk-lined throughout, even including the sleeves . . . which should be good news for those of you who are allergic to wool next your skin! . . . There's a camel colored knit dress with white horizontal stripe trim, and slightly gathered skirt . . . A green dress has low patch pockets and the new flat-chested look . . . Both these dresses have short sleeves, a decided trend in up-coming fashions . . . There's also a sleeveless yellow knit with white welt seaming detail, raised waistline and low tab pockets at the hipline . . . A stunning white knit coat with curved side fastening and gold buttons comes with matching pants and a wide rigid gold metal belt . . . Also from Lore Dibbern, we admired a couple of lovely hostess gowns . . . one white textured wool, beautifully cut . . . the other a striped wool jersey knit with long scarf that can be worn either around the neck or the waist, as your mood dictates . . . These Lore Dibbern imports are exclusive to . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7141, local 242.

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY MAC LEAN

Long Drawer Cuts Folds

Dear May, How can I keep white crochet articles from turning yellow when stored?

For pick-up work, I crocheted three white bedspreads, using mercerized cotton. I would like to keep these and later on give them to my grandchildren.

At present I've wrapped them in washed factory cotton and placed them in my cedar chest. Is this sufficient protec*tion? I would feel badly if* they were to get discolored after a period of time, and my work was in vain.—Mrs. M.W.H., Pembroke, Ontario.

I think that wrapping the bedspreads in clean factory cotton or clean white discarded sheeting material is ideal, but I don't think that I would personally store them in a cedar chest.

RETOLD FREQUENTLY

I think that I myself would simply store your lovely bedspreads, wrapped in the clean factory cotton, in a long drawer with as few folds as possible. If you intend keeping them for a few years, I suggest that you take them out at least twice a year and refold them before storing again.

For those of you who are interested, you might like to know that I had some very old needlework of cross-stitch samplers. These pieces had become discolored with age, even though one piece had been in a frame.

Before having them reframed, I soaked the pieces of needlework in one of the new stain-removal products that are on the market. I was surprised at the amount of soil that was removed, yet it did not harm the delicate old fabric.

Only two ounces of mohair yarn are needed to make this beret and scarf set.

This week's pattern is one that I saw last winter: Gaily knitted mohair berets and scarves. Both the beret and scarf can be knitted from two ounces of mohair on No. 5 needles.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Mistaken Identity

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We recently moved to this town, bought a nice home in a good neighborhood and settled down to become a part of the community.

Now comes my problem: Last week, while shopping for the usual items one needs after a move, I foolishly laid my purse down on the counter to look at something, and in a matter of seconds, my purse was gone! The person who took it then hurried to another store where she was picked up for shoplifting. She refused to identify herself, so the police looked in the purse she was carrying and found my identification. The next day the newspaper published the police report which stated that I had been arrested for shoplifting!

Abby, I told everyone I know how the mistake was made and thought they would surely believe me. I was wrong. Some of my neighbors are treating me very coldly and when I try to explain the circumstances to others, I get the impression they think I'm lying.

What can I do?—Disappointed in People.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: If your local newspaper has not published a correction of the error, they certainly should. And you have every right to insist upon it. In the meantime, hold your head high, and be aware that people are inclined to believe what they want to believe. And the nice people will give you the benefit of the doubt.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my daughter-in-law. I thought we were close up until a few months ago. (I hope I don't sound catty, but now I suspect Zelda was so sweet to me because she didn't have a washer-dryer then, and also she used to complain a lot about how she hated to cook, and I would invite her and my son for supper nearly every night.)

Well, Zelda had a baby a few months ago and now everything is changed. This is our first grandchild so need I tell you how thrilled we are.

In the first place I practically have to have an appointment to see the baby. I am told what hours I should come, and if I drop in unexpectedly she won't even let me in the baby's room to look at her! Also she even tells me how to hold the baby. (Abby, I've had seven of my own, so I don't think I need any lessons.)

Don't tell me to wait until she brings the baby to me. She brought her only once and she stayed exactly 21 minutes!

Please tell me what to do as I don't want to be a pushy mother-in-law, but I don't want my grandchild to grow up without being able to recognize me.—Hurt in Buffalo.

DEAR HURT: Don't do anything. Be patient. Baby care is still a novelty to Zelda. In time the novelty will wear (and so will Zelda), and I'll bet you will see a good deal more of both of them.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Christmas Pudding Recipe Easy On Both Budget and Time Table

By HILDA BEASTALL

Many of my friends tell me they don't bother making Christmas puddings. Three main reasons crop up—too costly, too rich and too time consuming in preparation.

My favorite recipe wipes out all three, as you will find if you try it this year. The cost, even with today's high food prices, is lower for my ingredients than for any ready made pudding.

We never compute a homemaker's time in dollars and cents, but if it is long hours of preparation you lack, take heart from my timing on this recipe—one hour for putting together, mixing and turning into basins.

If you lack the hour on one day, I have found it much easier to take a half hour for putting all the ingredients into a large bowl, then with a plate over the top, stash it away in the refrigerator. The following day will give me the other half hour to grease, fill and cover the pudding basins and get them into the saucepans to steam.

With the raisins, currants, dates, fruit mix and suet all packaged ready for us to use, much of the time consuming work has been eliminated. Grating the potatoes, carrots and chopping apples takes about 15 minutes.

Here is my budget-saving, time-saving Christmas pudding recipe: it makes a total of 12 to 16 servings in 2 basins:

One cup (packed) grated raw carrots; 1 cup (packed grated raw potatoes; 1 cup (packed) chopped raw apples; ¾ cup chopped beef suet; 1 cup dark raisins; 1 cup currants; 1 cup flour; 1 cup whole wheat flour; 1 tsp. salt; 1 tsp. soda; ½ tsp. mixed spices; 1 scant cup brown sugar.

One cup cut-up dates; ¼ cup fruit-cake mix, (for color); 1 lemon, juice and grated rind; 1 tbsp. molasses; 1 large egg, beaten.

Some homemakers say it isn't worth making Christmas puddings for only two people, but think of the little surprises you would have ready for drop-in visitors by putting up a few in pyrex custard cups.

Be sure to grease the inside of the containers, and leave an inch space at the top for rising; in custard cups, half an inch.

Cover tightly with waxed paper, with foil moulded tightly over that and around the basin lip to seal it. Small basins can be set in pans of hot water and steamed in an oven at 325 deg. for 1½ hours.

Large pudding basins need the same coverings. Never have the boiling water more than three quarters up the basins, or there is risk of it getting into the basins and making the puddings heavy.

Use a close fitting lid, and keep the pan gently boiling for 3 hours without lifting the lid. Three hours is for the amount of this recipe divided into two even quantities. Adjust for smaller.

Pressure cookers take less cooking time. For these, follow instructions which come with the cooker.

Cool the pudding thoroughly, taking off the foil and the waxed paper to allow steam to escape.

To reheat, cover with foil and steam as before, for 1½ hours for the two medium sized puddings.

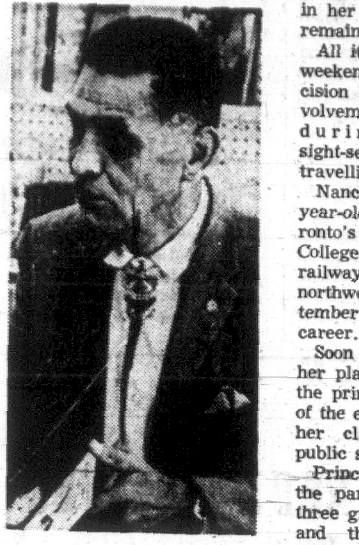
Indian Author Honored Guest

George Clutesi, exponent of the West Coast Indian culture, and his wife Margaret, will be guests of honor when the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society holds a Christmas reception in the Provincial Museum, Tuesday, Dec. 16, at 8:45 p.m.



GEORGE CLUTESI

Mr. Clutesi is author and illustrator of two books, Son of Raven, Son of Deer, and Potlatch. He has recently returned from a publicity tour of Saskatchewan and Ottawa, arranged by the Department of Indian Affairs. He is an honorary life member of the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society.

Guests at the reception will include many members of the Urban Indian Community. Mrs. A. P. Chaplin has donated an Indian tray for exhibit and raffle. The tray was made over 40 years ago by an Indian woman from the New Westminster area.

Tickets for the reception must be obtained before Wednesday. They may be ordered by calling Miss M. R. L. Adamson, 384-2682 in the morning.

Chatty Horse Only Hitch in 1,150-Mile School Outing

By JIM NEAVES

HORNEPAYNE, Ont. (CP) — Teacher Nancy Pallett thinks she has licked any prospective discipline problem in her Grade 4 class for the remainder of the school year.

All it took was a 1,150-mile weekend trip to Toronto, precision planning and total involvement with 13 youngsters during the period—eating, sight-seeing, sleeping and travelling together.

Nancy, an attractive 21-year-old, graduated from Toronto's Lakeshore Teachers' College and arrived in this railway community, 575 miles northwest of Toronto, in September to start her teaching career.

Soon after, she dreamed up her plan and presented it to the principal and the parents of the eight- to 10-year-olds in her class at Hornepayne's public school.

Principal Ed Tymphin and the parents of 10 boys and three girls gave their consent and the planning started. Transportation was made easier in that the children's parents all are employed by Canadian National Railways and the youngsters were entitled to free rail transportation.

Leaving on a Friday afternoon, the group arrived in the Ontario capital the following morning. They were met by one of Nancy's friends with a small truck. Mounds of sleeping bags and other belongings were loaded for the trip to Nancy's parents' home in Cooksville, near Toronto.

Not planned as part of the four-day trip, which included visits to the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, Ontario's new science centre, Toronto city hall and an orchard, the children were able to see the city's annual Santa Claus parade.

Even riding buses, the subway and the GO train was a new experience for most of the children, many of whom were visiting the city for the first time.

"My parents made the trip possible," Nancy said.

Their large home was the headquarters during the weekend and was furnished with "wall-to-wall" sleeping bags on Saturday night.

There was only one hitch during the four-day trip when Patrick Leonard, 9, stopped to "talk to a horse" at the fair and was left behind when the group took the train to Long Branch.

"All the children had their names, addresses and ages in their pockets or purses in addition to telephone numbers in the city—so it wasn't long before the police called us and we rescued Paddy."

Nancy says she intends to plan future trips because the children learned a lot about Toronto.

"It's also helped me to understand them and I've learned how much they can take before they get tired. I don't think discipline will be any problem for the rest of the year."

The children were enthusiastic, although Sherry Kistemaker, 9, said that while she'd like to do it again, "we did a lot of walking and my feet are still sore."

Lorne Hemphill, 9, said he particularly liked the science centre, "especially the laser beam."

Asked what he liked best, young Paddy quickly answered the "insulation" at the fair. Eventually deciphered, that meant candy floss.

Seconds later, he reconsidered.

"Well, actually it was watching hockey on color television.

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I would love to make myself one of the new maxi-coats but can't find many patterns in the pattern books to select from. Do you think this new style will last long enough to go to all this work?—Janet M.

Dear Janet:

I think there are several points that you must think about before you go ahead with your maxi-coat. They are very new and look great on either a young person, or one who has a nice trim figure and likes high-fashion clothes.

There aren't too many patterns for them because patterns are created and processed many, many months before they appear in the catalogues and often a style is so new that it must be proven to be accepted before the cost of a new pattern can be justified.

Most of the maxi-coats I have seen in New York have a notched collar, some are double breasted, but all of them are basically cut with very classic construction lines .After all, if you decide you don't like a long length, the style is such that it would look equally great in the street length and the experiment only costs you the difference in length. You may take almost any classic pattern and add the additional length you need for the maxi.

College Last Bastion of Acadian Character

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

CHURCH POINT, N.S. (CP) — Some informed Acadians say the fate of their people is symbolized today by a struggling college here on Nova Scotia's "French shore"—far from where romantic Evangeline broods in stone at Grand Pre in the Annapolis Valley.

Their conversation is filled with the problems of the future—the key being education—in the context of the Acadian struggle for survival since the Expulsion of 1755.

They note that the College Sainte-Anne is the sole French-language — bilingual, actually—institution of higher education in Nova Scotia, whose French-origin population is put as high as 87,000, including 70,000 Acadians.

"College Sainte-Anne has . . : survived in spite of the fact that statistics would certainly have condemned it ever since its existence began," says Rev. Raymond LeBlanc, 44-year-old rector, native of this village and graduate of Washington's Catholic University.

EXUDES CONFIDENCE

The slender young college president exudes an air of quiet confidence that the survival story will continue. But crucial recommendations now are being pondered by a tribunal of Quebec-Ontario educationists appointed by the Nova Scotia government.

Mr. Justice Vincent J. Pottier, member of the college's board of advisers and also of the board of governors of St. Mary's University, Halifax, stressed the need of a "cultural anchor" for Acadian communities scattered around Nova Scotia.

"Remnants of discrimination" against Acadians are dying in the province but assimilation pressures are great amid a total population of 750,000.

"If the College Sainte-Anne disappears there is a danger that the Acadians are doomed to assimilation in Nova Scotia," said the jurist, first Acadian on the provincial Supreme Court bench and author of a royal commission report on education in the 1950s.

STRUCK IN SUPPORT

Father LeBlance indicated similar fears explain why the administration fought a proposal to move the institution to Yarmouth, away from its present rural Acadian milieu, and reduce it to junior-college status.

"The immediate environment would be English-speaking in Yarmouth," said the rector. "We think if we are to preserve an atmosphere favorable to the French culture and French language, the environment should be of that culture and that language. . . . We think we have a better chance of doing something here."

The college, incidentally, must be one of the few anywhere whose students went on strike—last year—not because of some grievance against the administration but in support of it. The action reflected unrest and uncertainty that began more than four years previously.

Situated roughly midway between Yarmouth and Digby in southwestern Nova Scotia, the college—opened in 1890—receives moral support for its present location from other than French-language sources.

"I've worked hard to keep that college in Church Point because I think we need it," said Edith Wallace, editor of the Digby Courier.

Father LeBlanc said the curriculum, which traditionally followed the lines of Quebec classical education, was "completely renewed" two years ago.

STRUGGLE TO SURVIVE

Quebec students, who formerly accounted for 60 per cent of enrolment, dropped to 30 per cent last year and programs now are more adapted to other institutions in Nova Scotia and the Atlantic provinces generally.

English-speaking students, though still making up only a handful of the enrolment of approximately 175, have been accepted for the last two years.

The college is proud of such noted graduates as Justice Pottier, Dr. Norman Belliveau of Montreal, former president of the Canadian Medical Association, and several high-ranking churchmen.

"The Acadian population has never been wealthy and it is through heavy sacrifice the college has been kept going through the years," said Father LeBlanc.

Events leading up to the present crisis cannot be summarized in a paragraph, and the tribunal—whose members are famed in Canadian educational circles—has broad terms of reference involving "bilingual higher education in Nova Scotia."

Headed by Dr. David Munroe of McGill University, its other members are Msgr. Alphonse Parent of Laval and Rev. Roger Guindon, rector of Ottawa University.

Having held summer hearings, the tribunal is expected to submit its report before the end of the year on bilingual conditions in a province where, authorities say, only 38,000 of 70,000 Acadians still speak French. The majority live in the Yarmouth-Digby area.

EXPENSES MOUNTED

Rector LeBlanc said that traditionally under the religious teaching order, the Eudist Fathers, the college had been able to make its own way, though enrolment was always small. Most professor-priests received no salaries but gradually additional lay teachers were required and other expenses mounted.

"The government became more and more concerned in higher education in the province," said Father LeBlanc. "They wondered if our college was viable and if they could give the grants which were required, especially if the college was going to operate at the desirable high standards."

Msgr. Jacques Garneau of Ottawa, associate director of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, was asked to make a survey by Nova Scotia's University Grants Committee.

Father LeBlanc said the college authorities are in general agreement with the Garneau findings, which came down in January, 1966, except for recommendations of transfer to Yarmouth and reduced status.

FEAR 'DILUTION'

A board of advisers, appointed in line with one of the Garneau recommendations, urged in the spring of 1968 after much study that the college stay where it is. The grants committee, however, opted for Yarmouth.

The government, faced with conflicting recommendations, accepted neither of them but appointed the tribunal to make a judgment and that—as Father LeBlanc put it—"is what we're waiting for now."

This reporter met no one who felt there was any official feeling against the college or indeed against Acadians themselves. Nova Scotia, after all, now has its first Acadian education minister, Gerald Doucet, a Cape Bretoner.

Fears were heard, however, that the tribunal—striving to meet the needs of various Acadian communities—might "dilute" the value of the present institution.

Home Brew Maker Fined

A 44-year-old Colwood man pleaded guilty to possessing illicit spirits and was fined $100 in court Friday.

John Sykora, 3050 Glenmanor Place, admitted owenrship of 300 ounces of homebrew to police during a raid of his home Oct. 25.

Police also seized a still used to manufacture the liquor.

Enrichment Program Needs Instructors

St. Ann's Academy is looking for people with special talents who can share them with girls from grade eight to 12.

Instructors are needed for the high school's enrichment program which runs during after-school hours.

More than 300 girls participated in 22 courses offered in the program when it was introduced in the fall semester, said Sister Margaret O'Donnell.

The school is now looking for teachers for enrichment program courses to run 10 weeks from the end of January to April.

"These are courses where the girls are really at," said Sister Margaret. "It gives them something they can use when they have spare time."

Resource people are particularly sought after in the following areas: guitar, sewing, sketching, painting and native Indian art.

Anyone who is interested in taking part in the program should contact Sister Margaret at the Academy (384-5521) or 477-3822.

Courses during the current term included fencing, creative drama, yoga, basketweaving, photography and film, swimming, modelling and Oriental cooking.

Peking Militia Drive Seen Sparked by War Expectation

Sino-Soviet Tensions Continue Unabated As Red Chinese Strengthen Internal Defence And Prepare Domestic Battle Blueprints

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG (WP) — The Chinese Communist authorities have launched a new drive to reactivate millions of members of the "people's militia," apparently in an attempt to prepare for a possible attack by the Soviet Union.

The appeal for militia mobilization, coupled with a wide variety of other measures designed to reinforce China's defences, indicates that the Peking leadership is becoming increasingly pessimistic about the present Sino-Soviet negotiations yielding positive results.

The negotiations, aimed at resolving the bitter border dispute between China and the Soviet Union, have reportedly made no progress since they opened in the Chinese capital on Oct. 20.

Evidently expecting the talks to fail, Peking is currently accelerating the construction of tunnels and air raid shelters in China's major cities, as well as persuading peasants to build up food reserves for the event of a possible conflict.

In Canton, 80 miles from here, a vast tunnel complex just completed links the centre of the city to a suburban area called "White Cloud Hill" Canton officials have drawn up plans to evacuate children to the countryside should war erupt.

According to a European diplomat in Shanghai last week, Shanghai now features wall posters advising procedures to be followed in the case of nuclear attack.

●

As part of the defence effort, the Peking leadership has also issued an eight-point directive urging an end to the factional fights that have persisted since the cultural revolution, when Mao Tse-tung encouraged the red guards and other agitators to rebel against authority.

Among other things, the directive called for a halt to the stealing of military equipment and the sabotage of communications. Rival political factions found fighting among themselves, it added, would be "forcibly disarmed" by army units.

Besides carrying out such disciplinary operations, Chinese army units are touring the provinces purveying anti-Soviet propaganda.

One line being taken by these propaganda teams is that the Russians are now colluding with the United States to "encircle" China in much the same way that the Kremlin "betrayed" communism when it signed a pact with Nazi Germany in 1939.

●

The drive to strengthen the militia, publicized in official newspaper articles and radio broadcasts within recent weeks, is consistent with Mao's notion that China's best strategy in case of war is defence-in-depth.

At the core of that strategy is Mao's conviction that even though China lacks an arsenal of sophisticated weapons, it can overcome that deficiency by absorbing an invading army in its huge population.

Or, as he originally explained it in his lecture "on protracted war," delivered in May, 1938, "the mobilization of the common people throughout the country will create a vast sea in which to drown the enemy . . ."

●

In a major editorial transmitted here this weekend, the "Liberation Army Daily" emphasized the present need for such a strategy in order to prepare for "aggression by U.S. imperialism and social imperialism."

The term "social imperialism," first used by Lenin to by Peking as a euphemism for the Soviet Union. brand his social democratic adversaries, is now employed

The editorial urged that large numbers of people be armed, trained and indoctrinated so that "everybody is a soldier." Citing a 1958 plea by Mao, it added: "Not only must we have a powerful regular army; we must also organize contingents of the people's militia on a big scale."

Reiterating Mao's thesis that "man is more important than material," the editorial asserted that China's population, ideologically imbued with the proletarian spirit, "will never be cowed by the enemy's atom bombs."

Judging by their statements, the Chinese are aware of the threat of nuclear attack. As a broadcast from Inner Mongolia not long ago put it: "With current developments in science and technology, the surprise element in launching a war has become even more significant."

●

But, apparently striving to bolster Chinese courage in the face of a potential Soviet nuclear strike, Peking propaganda nevertheless insists that "the outcome of war is decided by the people, not by one or two new types of weapon."

Such exhortations are being matched, meanwhile, by propaganda campaigns glorifying heroic militiamen and model militia units. Special attention is being paid to the mobilization of the militia in China's northern border areas.

●

At the same time, however, there are signs that the communist effort to project a mood of imminent danger is not evoking a widespread response.

Several official broadcasts, particularly from the interior of the country, have warned against a "false sense of security" that seems to have overtaken segments of the population who no longer consider Peking's outpourings to be entirely credible.

In addition, official criticism of the "bourgeois military line" in several Peking statements suggests that many professional Chinese army officers may be opposed to the recruitment of a large militia force.

The communists initially established a militia during the Sino-Japanese war. At that time, the militia was an elite self-defence force rather than a mass organization.

●

After the communists took power in China in 1949, the militia was mainly used in social reform campaigns, such as uprooting landlords, and in protecting crops and communications from internal foes of the regime.

In the mid-1950s, as the Chinese army was reorganized and modernized under the aegis of Soviet advisers, the role of the militia was minimized. But in 1958, when Mao unfolded his ambitious "great leap forward," the militia was reactivated under the slogan: Everyone a soldier."

●

By January, 1959, Peking claimed that a total of 220 million men and women between the ages of 15 and 50 were enrolled in the "ordinary" militia and the "hard-core" units.

It has been estimated, however, that only the "hard-core" — about 15 per cent of the total — was systematically drilled and instructed in the use of weapons.

Whether "hard-core" or "ordinary", the militia seems to have been an unwanted burden to many senior Chinese army officers, who apparently lacked the patience to train amateur soldiers.

Officers like General Lo Jui-Ching, the former chief of staff, evidently sought to shunt the militia into productive rather than military tasks. Lo was one of the first figures purged when the cultural revolution gathered momentum in late 1965.

Sporadic attempts were made to mobilize the militia as a revolutionary force on the side of the Maoists during the cultural revolution, but these efforts were largely unsuccessful.

At present, Western military specialists calculate, the effective strength of the militia is probably not more than 7 million. It is believed that most of those irregulars are poorly armed.

●

The specialists speculate, therefore, that while Peking's fears of an eventual Soviet attack are genuine, its drive to transform every Chinese into a soldier may be more rhetorical than real.

Black Meets Saanich on Road Closing

Saanich will send a strong delegation to see Highways Minister Wesley Black next week to protest the proposed closing of Vanalman Avenue and seek a change.

The meeting, at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the minister's office, will be attended by members of council headed by Mayor Hugh Curtis as well as engineer Neville Life and planner Tom Loney.

The proposed freeway-standard Patricia Bay Highway improvements in this area will see Vanalman end at the freeway, which is to be constructed to the west of the present highway, turning the existing highway into a frontage road.

Council has been told by its officials that future residential and commercial traffic will be significant and without access it will have to funnel south on Glanford Avenue and to a lesser extent on Carey Road.

Municipal taxpayers will then have to pay for necessary road improvements for types of traffic council believes should be on a frontage road and not on the local street system.

Italian Bank Strike Puts Strain on Cash

ROME (Reuters) — Many Italians were running short of cash today after a two-day strike by bank tellers.

The strike, which closed down almost all banks Thursday and Friday, also created a big problem for stores and offices which deposit their cash and settle their accounts on Fridays.

The plight of those who forgot to go to the bank Wednesday is going to get worse still—the banks will not open again until Tuesday because Monday, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, is a public holiday in Italy.

MANSON . . . in court

LEADER OF ALLEGED MASSACRE CULT

Self-Styled God No Stranger to Trouble

INDEPENDENCE, Calif. (AP) — Charles M. Manson, accused in mountain-desert area of rustling four-wheel-drive vehicles, has emerged as a key figure in the investigation of the killings of Sharon Tate and seven others in Los Angeles.

The bushy-haired, wild-bearded little man with piercing brown eyes has been tabbed the leader of a hippie-type roving band whose members called him "God" and "Satan"—and now two lawyers say clan members killed the actress and others.

Manson, 35, who with others is accused here of running a stolen car ring from a commune near Death Valley, sat stolidly Wednesday through his preliminary hearing. After witnesses said they saw him driving stolen cars, he was held for trial.

There are no charges against Manson in Los Angeles. But two lawyers there said Wednesday that a woman member of Manson's mostly female "family" told them it was some of his followers who killed Miss Tate and six others.

In Independence, Manson was charged with two counts of receiving stolen property and one of operating a stolen vehicle. After the hearing, he was ordered held for arraignment Dec. 12. Bond was fixed at $25,000.

LIFE OF TROUBLE

Manson is no stranger to trouble. From followers and police came sketches of a life of problems, imprisonments, menial jobs.

A Los Angeles Times account said Manson was born to an unwed 16-year-old girl in Cincinnati, Ohio, lived with his maternal grandmother, then an aunt and uncle. He ran away from a boys' school, landed in a correctional institution and by the time he was 25 had spent 13 years in reformatories and prisons for such offences as auto theft, forgery and transporting women across state lines for prostitution.

Out of prison on parole, he was married and fathered a son—but by the time the boy was born, he was back in jail. His wife divorced him.

Problems, Imprisonment And Menial Jobs Dogged Him

In his free time behind bars he became interested in the occult. Officials termed his intelligence "superior."

He also took up the guitar, discovered he could sing and began writing music.

ACQUIRED FOLLOWING

Then, on parole, he discovered the hippie-style life and a friend said "a whole new world" opened for him. He went to San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district and acquired a following of hippie-type—most of them girls.

He and a 19-year-old girl moved into a hillside pad she described as "a luxurious hobo castle" with Arabian tapestries, goatskin rugs and a yard full of "dancing trees and smiling clover.

They left Haight-Ashbury April 12, 1968, in an old school bus, converted into living quarters for 14 young men and women—most of them women. The bus broke down near Oxnard, Calif., and one rainy afternoon, they ducked into a ranch full of old movie sets. They were still living there when the slayings occurred.

When deputies raided the place last August, shortly after the killings, and made arrests on prostitution and drug allegations, Manson moved his "family" into a canyon area populated by hippie-types near Death Valley.

They set up headquarters in a ranch building in an isolated canyon reachable only by four-wheel-drive vehicles and equipped it with walkie-talkies and observation posts. Visitors said the women often went nude or near nude.

OBEYED HIS ORDERS

With a combination of pronouncements—"Follow my orders or meet a horrible death"—and captivating glances, Manson convinced some of his clan he owned them. "We belong to him, not to ourselves,". Miss Atkins' lawyers quoted her as saying.

"He was magnetic," another follower, Sandra Good Pugh, 26, told interviewers in Independence. "His notions were like magic . . . the first time I heard him sing it was like an angel . . . There was no dope, but sunbathing in the nude was common."

On Oct. 12, a dozen sheriff's deputies and highway patrolmen hunting for a band that was stealing cars and converting them to dune buggies, raided the commune. They escorted seven persons out of Manson's cabin. Patrolman James Purcell, who led the raid, said he returned to search the little building and found Manson.

Drug Facts To Be Aired Next Tuesday

A survey of non-medical drug use by high school students in six B.C. school districts, including Greater Victoria, will be released here Tuesday, a school board official said Friday.

The survey, prepared by the Narcotics Addiction Foundation of B.C., will be studied Monday by school trustees and Tuesday morning by district principals, said Ted Callbeck, co-ordinator of special educational services.

GOOD GUESSES

"The report really doesn't tell us anything that we already didn't know. My guesses have been practically on the nose."

Callbeck appeared before the Nov. 1 hearing of the federal commission on non-medical use of drugs and said he estimated 20 per cent of Victoria high school students have smoked marijuana and its derivatives, while 10 per cent are frequent users.

Over-all figures in the NAF survey show 28.4 per cent of high school students in the six districts have used drugs, including tranquilizers, at least once.

NAF director Bert Hoskins said Thursday tranquilizers have had the highest use, with 27.4 per cent having tried them one or more times.

MARIJUANA NEXT

Marijuana was second at 19.7 per cent, followed by solvents such as glue or nail polish at 12.4 per cent, LSD 6.6, methedrine 3.7, and heroin 1.4.

Names of districts which participated in the survey will be released at the discretion of the various school boards. Surrey released its figures Thursday.

Material for the survey was gathered in April in Victoria when questionnaires were circulated to high school students.

Callbeck said he believes the situation has improved since then, largely due to increased information on the hazards involved in certain drugs.

"I'd like to think the police are doing a whale of a job", he said. and also credited efforts of the Victoria Youth Council and the school board's drug education program.

McGEER HITS DRUG PROBERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Liberal leader Pat McGeer lashed out this week at federal drug probe members he says have suggested an easing of drug laws.

Drug use is spreading like an infectious disease, said Dr. McGeer, and any royal commission report that does not strongly discourage the promiscuous use of drugs will do a great disservice to the nation.

"The reason is that the use of drugs by students in their early teen-age years is increasingly alarming," he fold a meeting of his Vancouver-Point Grey constituency association.

Police 'Hostile' To Beatniks

QUEBEC (CP) — A survey conducted for a Quebec royal commission indicates that police in the province are as hostile toward "beatniks" as toward criminals.

Asked to describe their feelings toward beatniks as friendly, neutral or hostile, 24.6 per cent of the policemen interviewed admitted to hostile feelings.

Asked the same question about criminals, 23.6 per cent described their feelings as hostile.

The most anti-beatnik force was that of Rimouski, where 54 per cent of the policemen interviewed said they were hostile to beatniks. Only 28 per cent of the members of the Rimouski force said they were hostile to criminals.

The survey was commissioned by the Quebec royal commission on the administration of justice. The survey team, headed by Dr. Denis Szabo, University of Montreal criminologist, interviewed 819 policemen in five cities: Montreal, Quebec City, Drummondville, Jacques Cartier and Rimouski.

Parksville Priest Dies, Toll Now 3

Rev. Jan Planeta, 59, of Parksville died in hospital Friday as a result of injuries suffered Nov. 17 in a single-vericle accident which took the lives of two others.

The Roman Catholic priest was the driver of a light van that left the road about 15 miles north of Nanaimo.

Killed in the crash was Planeta's sister, Frances, Parksville, and dying later in hospital was Mrs. Christina Lalonde, 59, Parksville. A fourth passenger, Mrs. Adelle Woods, 36, Parksville, is recovering in hospital from the crash.

Planeta was transferred to Parksville in 1967 after he spent 12 years in charge of Sacred Heart parish at Lake Hill in Saanich. Under his leadership, a new school and convent were built on McKenzie Avenue.

A native of Poland, he was arrested by the Nazi Gestapo for teaching children religion.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Home-Grown Christians

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Moses spoke these words to his people as they approached the Promised Land after their long years of wandering: Hear, O Isreal: The Lord our God is one Lord; and you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your might." (Deuteronomy 6:4,5.)

●

Then he quickly added: "And these words which I command you this day shall be upon your heart; and you shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house."

Moses knew that the people would have great difficulty in adjusting to new circumstances. He gave them those words — words which brought their faith into sharp focus—to guide them through life and to guard their integrity as a community of faith. And these words have been built into the Jewish consciousness, and they represent a force which, despite the bludgeonings of history and the unfaithfulness of many of the people, has sustained the Jewish people through the long centuries.

We Christians have a lesson to learn here from our Jewish brothers. We can learn much from the religious education programs of the synagogues: most of them put most of our churches to shame with their competence, their concern, their comprehensiveness. And we can perhaps learn even more from the religious nurturing given to the children in devout Jewish homes.

Christian parents cannot pass the Christian education buck to the Church and the Sunday School. And religious education in the schools, in places where it is given, has become a very dubious enterprise.

The Sunday School counts for very little without the active co-operation of the home. Many parents today look upon religion as merely one of life's optional little extras—nice to have if you happen to care for that sort of thing, but not really necessary. Some of them do feel, however, that their children are entitled to at least a taste of it—so, come Sunday, they hustle them off to the Sunday School. And later they complain that the Sunday School really didn't do a thing for the children.

●

Although there are many significant instances to the contrary, most Christians in our society are home-grown. And basic here is the atmosphere in which Christian character can be nurtured and in which Christian faith and life can flourish.

I am not here calling primarily for the establishing of rigid patterns of formal devotion and study in the home—although most of us have a long way to go before we can be found guilty of even a little rigidity. Far more important than specific practices and instruction is the general atmosphere of the home. Children readily sense what their parents really believe, what they really try to live by. You cannot, in the long run, fool your children about your religion.

●

A child will learn more about Christian faith and life from the example of Christian parents than from all the formal instruction that can be given to him elsewhere. The atmosphere of your home will determine what the Church and the Sunday School can do for your children. Dr. Elton Trueblood, a wise Quaker philosopher, has put the matter in this way: "The strongest incentives in the development of the characters of children often come, not from direct and specific instruction, but from example and from unargued assumptions." As it said by a character in T. S. Eliot's play, The Family Reunion.

"The things that are taken for granted at home, make a deeper impression upon children than what they are told."

Salvation Army Plans Christmas Functions

Once again this year the Salvation Army will bring Christmas cheer to those in need.

The traditional turkey dinner for transient and homeless men will be served in the Army's social centre at 521 Johnson Street Monday at noon.

On Christmas Day all men staying at the centre will enjoy seasonal fare and receive a gift.

Starting Dec. 18, special services, films and Christmas events will be held at the Army's Harbor Light centre at 516 Yates. These will lead up to the Christmas morning service followed by Christmas dinner for residents and families connected with the centre.

The Army's institutions for elderly citizens, Matson Lodge and Sunset Lodge, will also celebrate.

"Last Christmas the Army gave food hampers to 340 families in the Victoria area," a spokesman said. "It looks as if many more will need help this year."

The Army's League of Mercy volunteers will personally distribute Sunshine Bags, containing candy and fruit, and copies of the Christmas "War Cry" to patients in hospitals and nursing homes.

Gifts will also be presented to men in jail.

All this work is financed by the traditional Christmas kettles which will appear on Victoria streets Wednesday. Donations may also be mailed to the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer Fund, 769 Pandora Avenue.

Davis Wants Line at Shelf

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The way to salvage Canada's sagging fishing industry is to eliminate the harvest of giant fishing fleets from Russia and Japan just outside our 12-mile limit, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Friday.

He told the Greater Kamloops Chamber of Commerce that this can be done by extending Canada's current limit to the continental slope and shelf which, in the Newfoundland area, is 400 miles offshore.

The minister said United Nations approval of the move would permit Canada to fish on a sustained yield basis.

The redrawn boundaries would close Hudson Bay and the Gulf of St. Lawrence and all of British Columbia's northern coastline to foreign fleets which are increasing while Canada's diminish.

Mr. Davis also told the chamber that his department is studying the proposed diversion of the Thompson River to the Okanagan and said nothing would be done if it is proved the scheme would threaten the salmon industry or the Interior's economy.

Church-State Dispute Follows Rights Strife

By ALAN RIDING

ASUNCION (Reuters)—The quiet river republic of Paraguay, lulled into compliance by 15 years of dictcatorship, has been suddenly shaken by a major row betwen the Roman Catholic Church and the government of Gen. Alfredo Stroessner.

The battle between the former allies had been brewing for several months—but few people expected it to develop so quickly into police attacks on priests and nuns, and the church's response of excommunicatin the interior minister and chief of police.

The source of friction was that the church, long the friend of Paraguay's ruling oligarchy, decided to play an active part in promoting and defending the rights of the poor.

With Paraguay's traditional opposition parties weakened by years of repression, the church was quickly isolated in its struggle to organize the students of Asuncion and activate the large peasant population.

The sentiments and aims of Paraguay's young priests are not unlike those of their progressive colleagues in most Latin American countries today, but the difference is that in Paraguay, the bishops support and encourage the pioneering social work of their priests.

Bishops Leading

In many cases, the bishops themselves have been at the forefront of the fight against the government, issuing documents which provide the theological basis for the often near-Marxist work of the priests.

The church has been active on two main fronts among the poor peasant Indians who make up about 70 per cent of the population, and among the students of the national and Catholic universities in Asuncion.

In the countryside, the bishops and priests, living simply and working with little ceremony, are mainly teachers - not only of religion, but also of civil and community relations, agriculture, nutrition, sanitation, domestic matters.

In this teaching, the priests are slowly awakening the people from generations of slumber. "We are teaching people to think, to question," one bishop said. "We are teaching poor people their rights and privileges as Paraguayan citizens."

In Asuncion, the students have been organized by the priests during the last year to the stage where they join priests in protesting alleged violations of human rights.

The priests working closest to the students have been a group of Spanish-born Jesuits —and it was the expulsion of one of them, Rev. Francisco de Paula Oliva, that led to the current crisis in church-state relations. He was accused of incitement and subversion.

Father Oliva, who also taught at the Catholic university, was called for a "conversation" by Police Chief Gen. Francisco Britez Oct. 22, and was then summarily put on a police river boat and deported to the Argentine town of Clorinda.

Protest Organized

Oliva's fellow Jesuits immediately organized a protest march, attended by priests, nuns and students, which was broken up violently by about 60 police armed with clubs and powerful waterhoses. Several priests, including one of 73, were badly hurt, and later the same night another three Jesuits were attacked as they left their church grounds.

Paraguay's 12-member council of bishops the following Sunday cancelled all masses in the country and instead a long document from Archbishop Anibal Mena Porta was read out. It condemned the attack and ordered the excommunication of all those who "ordered the physical attacks on the priests and nuns and the executors of these orders."

Interior Minister Sabino Montanaro, Police Chief Britez and a Major Victor Britez were affected by the excommunication.

The church's weekly newspaper, Comunidad, the only press opponent of the government since total censorship returned here in September, attacked the administration, saying the events had revealed the real face of the country's leaders.

The government immediately closed down Comunidad. Its editor, Spanish-born Jesuit Rev. Gilberto Gimenez, was forced to take refuge in the archbishop's palace.

Gen. Stroessner referred to the dispute during a speech marking his recent 57th birthday. He said:

"We will not tolerate those who, hiding behind holy orders, incite to acts against the law. Being a priest does not permit immunity before the law, above all when three or four foreigners try to convulse the country."

However, the president said there would "be no confrontation with the church because we are apostolic, Catholics and Romans."

A few days later, Archbishop Mena Porta lifted the excommunication of Interior Minister Montanaro after he begged forgiveness.

Christmas Competition Planned

The Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is dreaming of a bright Christmas in Victoria again this year.

The Jaycees are expecting more than 100 entries in the Christmas Lighting contest for homeowners and businessmen.

Deadline for entries is Friday with judging to take place Dec. 16, 17 and 18.

Prizes will be awarded in the residential section for decorated homes, decorated doors or windows, group displays of three or more adjacent homes and for the best first-time decorated home.

Judges for this year's contest are Mrs. Ida Clarkson, Fleming Zuhling and Times columnist Arthur Mayse.

Stone Tablets Revised by Agnew

WASHINGTON (AP) Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew outlined what he called the 10 commandments of protest in a speech to United States governors at a White House conference on drug abuse.

Agnew said here the commandments, which he said were advocated by an "outspoken minority," tell the majority "Thou shalt not:

"Allow thy opponent to speak.

'Set forth a program of thine own.

"Trust anyone over 30.

"Honor thy father or thy mother.

"Heed the lessons of history.

"Write anything longer than a slogan.

"Present a negotiable demand.

"Accept any establishment idea.

"Revere any but totalitarian heroes.

"Ask forgiveness for thy transgressions, rather thou shall demand amnesty for them."

Riel Stamp Plan Opposed

SMITH FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A proposed Canadian stamp honoring Louis Riel has roused the ire of Mayor T. O. Ashwell.

Dr. Ashwell wrote Postmaster-General Eric Kierans objecting to Riel's selection because the 1884 Riel rebellion cost many Canadian lives, and its leader was not even a Canadian. Riel, he says, became a United States citizen a year before the rebellion took place.

Kierans replied that people selected for commemorative stamps had "contributed to the evolution of Canada and we cannot deny their place in the history of our nation."

The mayor feels that Hitler and the Kaiser also had a definite effect on Canada.

In 1970 the Canada Pension Plan will take two important steps forward for your benefit

Retirement Pensions payable at 65

In 1970 the Retirement Pension age will be reduced from 66 to 65. If you are 65... if you've been contributing to the Canada Pension Plan, and if you've retired from regular employment, contact your Canada Pension Plan Office now. If you will be 65 in 1970 get in touch with your Canada Pension Plan Office three months before your birthday. The people there will help you fill out the application form that starts your pension cheques coming. They'll explain how your pension is worked out . . . and when you become eligible. You'll get all the answers to questions about your retirement pension. Payment is not automatic. You must apply. The address of your nearest Canada Pension Plan Office is listed below.

2

Disability Pensions payable for the first time

Disability Pensions for contributors to the Canada Pension Plan will become available in 1970 for those who have contributed for 5 years. Generally, a person is considered to be disabled if he has a physical or mental disability that is so severe and likely to continue so long that he cannot get steady work. Benefits will also be available for a disabled contributor's dependent children.

The Canada Pension Plan also may provide rehabilitation measures where practical. Eligibility for a pension will be based on an assessment of an applicant's medical condition. If you think you might be eligible for a Disability Pension contact your nearest Canada Pension Plan Office. The address is listed below.

Your nearest Canada Pension Plan Office is:

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Grits United Under Mackenzie King

By BOB BOWMAN

Dec. 6, 1921, was an important milestone in the history of the Liberal party in Canada. Under new leader W. L. Mackenzie King it won a general election with 117 seats, while Progressives elected 64 members and Conservatives only 50. Until then the Conservatives had governed Canada for approximately 31 years and the Liberals only 15. Since then the Liberals have governed for 37 years and the Conservatives for only 11.

The Liberal party began to emerge in 1855 when George Brown's Reform party joined with the Clear Grits and it formed the government in 1874 when Sir John A. Macdonald's Conservatives were defeated following the CPR campaign fund scandal. However, the party ran into five years of economic depression and was also divided by factions within itself.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier formed a strong Liberal government in 1896 but it ran into trouble in 1911 over the question of reciprocity with the U.S.A. One of Laurier's strongest cabinet members, Clifford Sifton, led 18 members out of the party and it was defeated by the Conservatives in a general election. There was another Liberal revolt in 1917 when Laurier refused to join Prime Minister Borden's Coalition government during the First World War.

The Liberals were disunited until W. L. Mackenzie King succeeded Laurier as leader in 1919 and won the general election in 1921. Since then the party has been predominant in Parliament most of the time.

Another interesting development in the election of 1921 was that Miss Agnes Macphail became the first woman member of the House of Commons as a member of the new Progressive party led by T. A. Crerar.

W. L. Mackenzie King was prime minister of Canada for a total of 21 years, five months, and five days, a record for the British Commonwealth.

Other events on Dec. 6:

1749 — Fort Rouille was established at site of present-day Toronto. Death of Pierre de la Verendrye at Montreal.

1752 — First book published in Canada was Halifax Gazette, a government pamphlet.

1764 — Soldiers attacked Thomas Walker, Montreal magistrate, and cut off his ears.

1831 — W. L. Mackenzie (grandfather of subject of today's story) was expelled from Upper Canada legislature.

1837 — W. L. Mackenzie seized government mail as leader of Upper Canada rebellion.

1869 — Sir John Young, Governor-General of Canada, offered to pardon leaders of the Red River uprising if they would disperse.

1907 — Thomas Selfridge made first recorded flight in Canada at Baddeck, N.S., in kite designed by Alexander Graham Bell.

1917 — Explosion caused by collision of two ammunition ships in Halifax harbor killed 1,500 people with 25,000 others made homeless.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Just a tip for some of your readers with parrots. In the past I had trouble with my birds getting bored and picking their feathers out. I tried all sorts of things to stop them from doing it but nothing helped much. Then I moved the phonograph in the room and began playing a talking record. This has done wonders. The parrot gets so hopped up over the record he forgets all about picking his feathers. So please pass this along.—E.B.

DEAR E.B.: Consider it passed. The causes of feather plucking range from protein deficiency to parasites. But boredom ranks among the most important causes; so if palaver, parrot or otherwise, is sufficiently distracting and-or soothing, then the record business is, indeed, for the birds.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I'm having trouble squeezing in my old dog for an airline flight home with me for the holidays. What's the secret to getting him aboard, at least as baggage? He could stay behind for Christmas, in good hands, but I know he would feel hurt not to share the tree with me that day. Bo has always been especially fond of trees . . . I know he'd hate to miss one.—D.M.

DEAR D.M.: Probably Bo's better off staying home, or at least with a friend, for the holidays. Air travel is sometimes tough enough on an aging dog and it's certain to be more hectic this time of year. If he has to squeeze in to whatever flight happens along, loused-up schedules and layovers could result in Bo's arriving too beat to enjoy himself anyway. His ecstacy over evergreens is understandable.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It has just been in the last couple of months that my dog, Rover, has finally recovered from his rattlesnake bite. I alway thought a dog lucky enough to live through a poisoned snakebite would learn. But Rover doesn't. This was the third time he has been bitten. Doesn't this prove the story about them learning is just an old wives' tale?—N.D.

DEAR N.B.: It certainly proves Rover's recall, relative to rattlesnakes, isn't doing him a great deal of good. Maybe the first bite, or the second, has caused his faculties to fade a bit, at least those related to his survival instincts. Apparently the best, or perhaps the only way to keep Rover and rattlesnakes at arms' length is to keep them in separate sections of the country. There is one slight note of cheer to be derived from all this: Rover's resistance to rattlesnake venom should be increased considerably by now. Should he stupidly allow himself to be struck again, he could probably survive a bite which would kill an "ordinary" dog.

Merchants Going To Dogs

By ROBERT D. McFADDEN

NEW YORK (NYT) —After being burglarized five times and looking twice down the barrel of a robber's gun, Herbert P. Milanes, the owner of a South Boston dry cleaning shop, went out and bought himself a 210-pound crossed German Shepherd-Great Dane.

"I haven't had any trouble since I got the dog 18 months ago," he said.

Like Milanes, businessmen and homeowners across the country are buying guard dogs in response to burglariers and robberies. Others, conscious of sharply rising crime rates, are not waiting to be victimized.

They are buying dogs in the conviction that they are acquiring legal, economical and effective weapons.

The result has been that the demand for the dogs—mostly German shepherds and Doberman Pinschers—is far outrunning the supply.

Interviews with dealers, trainers and guard dog owners in 15 cities showed:

- The sale and rental of guard dogs and trained attack dogs has jumped 50 to 100 per cent in the last two years and some concerns have doubled their business in the last year.
- Among persons buying watchdogs for personal and home protection, a large proportion of sales—up to 90 per cent in some cases—are being made to Negroes and other residents of high crime, inner-city areas.
- A rapidly increasing number of small businesses and public institutions like churches and museums are renting trained guard dogs to patrol their premises, a practice followed for years by department stores, warehouses and other large concerns.
- Guard and attack dogs have the generally enthusiastic approval of police departments, many of which have their own canine corps.
- Owners report that the presence of guard and attack dogs has virtually eliminated burglaries.

The reports of rising dog use came from New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Francisco, Boston, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Minneapolis Miami, Dallas, Atlanta and New Orleans.

Only St. Louis reported no increase in the demand for guard dogs.

★ ★ ★

In New York, 100 per cent business increases were reported this year by Captain Haggerty's School for Dogs, in the Bronx, and Mr. Lucky's Dog Training School and the Nova Kennels and Training Academy, both in Brooklyn.

All three say their business is determined by the supply of dogs, not the demand.

Thomas P. Nova, owner of the Nova Kennels, said his concern would soon be selling stock to the public.

"We sold 250 dogs in 1967 and 400 last year. If we had the dogs, we could sell 700 or 800 this year with no problem."

Swan Lake Residents Meet Monday

Two hundred residents in the Swan Lake area of Saanich have been invited to a public meeting of the municipal lands and planning committee Monday night.

Committee chairman Ald. Alan Newberry said Friday residents will be told of alternatives for beautification in parkway-walkway style along the Swan Lake Creek tributary of the Colquitz Creek.

Also to be discussed are alternatives to financing of the improvements.

Ald. Newberry said another topic will be the understood, though long-range, plan to swing Patricia Bay Highway west of its present location to enable it to cut in between the municipal hall and Town and Country Shopping Centre and eventually link up with the city's Blanshard Street freeway which terminates behind Mayfair Shopping Centre at the Victoria-Saanich boundary.

Such a move by the provincial highways department, if it should happen in the future, would have an impact in the Swan Lake area, he said.

Improvements to the present highway in its existing location, undertaken this year, would appear to rule out any change to a new location for some time into the future.

The meeting will be held in the municipal hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, starting at 7:30 p.m.

STAMPS

Yuletide Present Ideas

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

If you plan to give stamps and/or accessories for Christmas to a present collector or to a person uninitiated to philately, and if you are low on ideas, these suggtions may be of help.

Many of the questions that a novice can have are answered by guidebook. Two examples of such combined reference books and introductions to the hobby are: The Stamp Collector's Handbook by Samuel Grossman, and Scott's Guidebook to Stamp Collecting by L. N. and M. Williams.

To start with, the beginner should be given a rather small, low-priced and illustrated album. Although he won't find places for a number of his stamps, it will serve as a practice copy until he is well versed, and is ready for a more comprehensive edition.

●

The other essentials for a starting collector are: stamp tongs, a magnifying glass, and peelable hinges for mounting stamps (never use anything else). A stock book and a world catalogue (such as Scott's) are of great value to most collectors, but in the beginning, a relatively easy-to-come-by older world catalogue will suffice. Small, inexpensive catalogues covering only one or two countries are available, and a new one of those would be excellent for a collector of only the area which it covers.

There are many convenient stamp collecting kits out, boxed for gift-giving and containing an assortment of stamps and the necessary supplies.

●

Most advanced enthusiasts require such items as a color chart, watermark fluid, a watermark detector, a perforation gauge, album supplements, and transparent mounts for valuable specimens. A subscription to a philatelic publication makes an excellent present.

If you buy, on paper, a worldwide packet or sets separated by theme or by country to suit the collector's interests, this is how to remove the unwanted paper, clean and dry the stamps: Drench them in cold water until they are loose or come apart easily. The washed stamps can safely be desiccated on blotting paper, and a weight applied such as a book will prevent them from curling while drying. (Newspaper is unsuitable as the ink is likely to come off.)

●

The Seychelles Nov. 3 released 15 interesting definitives spotlighting the colorful history of the islands. The denominations run from 5 cents to 15 rupees.

Gibraltar's Yule set was placed on sale Dec. 1. They feature paintings.

The United Kingdom Nov. 26 released their three Christmas multicolors. They feature: 4d, an angel in flight; 5d, three shepherds and a sheep; and 1s 6d, the three wise men journeying to Bethlehem, and carrying their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. This handsome set was photogravure printed by Harrison and Sons Ltd., and it was designed by Fritz Wegner.

On Nov. 3, Israel issued an adhesive marking the 25th anniversary of the Weizmann Institute of Science. It was founded by Dr. Chaim Weizmann (1874-1952), who was Israel's first president.

●

Four stamps were issued Nov. 1 by the British Caribbean colony of Montserrat. Featured are: 5c, a dolphin; 15c, an Atlantic sailfish; 25,, a blackfin tuna; and 40c, a Spanish mackerel.

Nov. 6 was the date of release of Botswana's Christmas pictorials. One-cent, 2c, 4c and 35c are the values of these lithographed commemoratives. They also came out in souvenir sheet form, with each sheet containing the four stamps.

Italy's 1970 program includes separate adhesives honoring the 450th anniversary of the death of the Renaissance painter Raphael (b. 1483), and the centennial of the birth of Maria Montessori (d. 1952), the famed educator and physician.

● THE UNJUST SOCIETY ●

'They Built Slums To Help Our People'

This is the final article in a three-part condensation of Indian author Harold Cardinal's controversial new book, The Unjust Society.

By HAROLD CARDINAL

The former minister of Indian affairs, Arthur Laing, may well be regarded as the most notoriously artful minister in the history of Canadian confederation for his efficient use of statistics to paper over the inadequacies of his department.

For example, supposedly to meet the housing crisis which for decades had been plaguing Indians in Canada, he dramatically announced a $112 million program over a five-year period.

After suitable fanfare and a well-publicized start, the time span was expanded quietly, without any publicity at all, so that the annual spending scarcely exceeded that of previous years.

The impression carefully given to the Canadian people was that something important was happening to meet the housing needs of the Indians.

The whole program was wasted. The housing needs of the Indians are greater than ever today and even those houses built for $112 million during the Laing program proved virtually useless to the people occupying them.

●

They were never better than marginal slum dwellings and often proved worse — ill-conceived architecturally, unsound engineeringly and located disastrously. Nor was anything further done to meet the rapidly expanding needs for Indian housing.

Mr. Laing's ignorance of the Indians in Canada in the mid-sixties was exceeded only by his arrogance. He had his foot in his mouth so often he surely must have learned to love shoe leather.

His idea of a thoughtful solution was to tell Indians to get out and pull themselves up by their bootstraps. He never bothered to make sure they had bootstraps.

His greatest contribution to the Indian situation came about because his silly doctrinal statements helped bring Indians from one coast to the other closer together.

After the election of Pierre Elliott Trudeau as leader of the Liberal party, then as Prime Minister of Canada, a new program of government-native consultation was drawn up. These plans called for the minister to travel extensively to meet with Indians in every part of the country.

●

Indian leaders shuddered at the thought of a dialogue with Mr. Laing. Fortunately for all the Indians, the new prime minister called a June election, and the consultation meetings were delayed.

Following the Liberal victory at the polls, Mr. Laing was given another portfolio and in his place two young members of Parliament assumed responsibility. Jean Chretien became the minister of Indian affairs and northern development, and Robert Andras, minister without portfolio responsible for the development of new objectives.

Indian leaders, briefly hopeful that Mr. Trudeau's Just Society might include native peoples, were ready to work with the new ministers. In a courageous speech in September 1968 in Toronto, Mr. Andras vowed that political leadership would supersede bureaucratic leadership.

●

Unhappily for the Indians, the Andras promise was never fulfilled. Mr. Andras lost his round with the mandarins in Ottawa, and the Indians lost with him. The much-promised dialogue that was to develop through the so-called consultation program proved to be, in the end, a fiasco that wasted the time of the Indian leaders.

The dialogue meetings began on schedule with the two novice ministers hitting the consultation trail like John Wayne and Gary Cooper to discover which path the Indians wanted to follow. For both Chretien and Andras this was their first real exposure to Indian peoples.

For them, it turned out to be the fork in the trail. Andras, not being tied down to a department, was able to get closer to the Indian people.

Volunteer Army Saves Coho Spawn

By PAT DUFOUR

A conservation catastrophe was averted Friday at Goldstream when a small army of volunteers answered an SOS from the fisheries department.

For weeks chum and coho salmon have been making their usual spawning run up the stream.

Most of them have laid their eggs — and most of them, as expected, have died.

This is natural.

What wasn't natural was that November has been abnormally dry and the stream, usually swollen from rains, was drying out.

Fisheries inspector Lloyd Gudewill explained, "The beds had dried so much that thousands of eggs were exposed. If these weren't protected by water before the frosts came they would be killed."

This was an emergency.

He rushed to get volunteers to build dams that would hold the waters and give the eggs their chance to survive.

The response was overwhelming.

Within two hours the banks of Goldstream were flanked with people, armed with shovels and the will to save a part of their natural heritage.

Among them were members of fish and game groups, the Amalgamated Conservation Society, the Pacific Trollers' Association, housewives and teen-agers who rallied to a radio appeal.

Gudewill then called John Erb, civil defence co-ordinator. "I needed 500 bags and in a hurry."

Before an hour had passed, Erb had supplied the bags, with the help of the provincial department of highways.

By late afternoon Gudewill heaved a sigh of relief. The job was done and thousands of future salmon had been saved.

He emphasized that no blame for the emergency should be laid on the fact that water from the watershed had to be cut off.

"It's an act of God, no one could have prevented it. When we needed help in the summer, Ron Upward (the water commissioner) did everything he could."

One teen-ager, asked why she spent the day filling sandbags and sloshing through water, was slightly hesitant.

"Gee, I'm not too sure. I don't even fish. But it's important to a lot of people. I guess that's what really counts."

Howard English, 6470 Pat Bay Highway, had no doubts.

"When any of our natural resources are threatened it's up to everyone to do something about it if he can."

Surveying his one-day army, Gudewill said:

"They're all wonderful people. I've never seen anything like it. This was the worst situation I've seen in the 23-odd years I've been with the department.

"Without them we'd never have made it."

TEAR GAS REPORTED POTENTIALLY LETHAL

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — A new international scientific report cast doubt Friday on the validity of President Nixon's decision to exempt tear gas from his ban on the use of chemical and biological weapons in warfare.

According to the report by a group of 18 consultants to the World Health Organization, no sharp distinction can be drawn between lethal and incapacitating agents, and prolonged exposure to mere harassing agents could be lethal.

Nixon's Nov. 25 announcement of the general plan, while praised on most counts, was criticized at the United Nations for its failure to include tear gas.

DISTRICT VOTING

Turnout Heavy

If the flow of voters to the polls this morning is any indicator, Victoria area residents are turning out in record numbers today to elect municipal representatives and decide the fate of Sunday sports and movies.

Three hours after the polls opened in Victoria more than twice as many people had coast ballots as during the first three hours of 1968 voting.

With a four-man race for mayor 2,626 people had been to the polls. In 1968 with no mayoralty contest, there were 1,046 voters out in the first three hours.

It's the same story in Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

To 11 a.m. in Oak Bay 1,030 people had cast ballots compared to 501 voters in 1968.

The vote total in Oak Bay is running about 100 ahead of the 1967 total, the last year in which there was a mayoralty campaign.

Up to 10 a.m. in Esquimalt there were 235 votes cast, compared to 164 votes in 1967, the last year in which there was a mayoralty contest.

While Saanich vote totals were not available a deputy returning officer reported indications are that despite the lack of a mayoralty race in that municipality, the turnout at the polls will be high. Polls in all municipalities are open until 8 p.m.

Bennett to Push Guaranteed Income

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett goes to the constitutional conference in Ottawa Monday to prove he means business in his drive for a guaranteed annual income.

In a statement of the province's conference proposals released here Friday, Bennett:

● Called for a national royal commission on a guaranteed income;

● Modfied a demand for a complete return of direct tax fields to the provinces from Ottawa by suggesting Ottawa stay in the field "to the extent necessary to finance a nationally administered guaranteed income plan."

● Suggested a postponement of constitutional discussions on distribution of powers in the fields of income security and social services until a royal commission study is carried out.

He also indicated B.C. should consent to give Ottawa the specific power it needs to contribute to a guaranteed annual income plan if Ottawa would commit itself to implementing such a plan in the event it is found to be feasible by a royal commission.

In other major points, Bennett requested special low-cost capital be made available by Ottawa to B.C. to help meet the needs created by the migration of an unusually large number of people from other provinces to B.C.

OPPOSES OTHERS

And he placed B.C. in opposition to other provinces, including Ontario, which have demanded the "fiscal equivalent" for any federal-provincial programs into which they choose not to enter.

"British Columbia considers 'opting out' with the fiscal equivalent is contrary to the concept of co-operative federalism and if carried to the limit, would ultimately destroy the federal system," Bennett said in the statement which he read to reporters.

Bennett called for a royal commission to undertake a study "with a view to the establishment of a comprehensive program for the rehabilitation and human betterment of needy Canadians by means of a guaranteed annual income to replace equalization payments and present welfare programs presently administered by all levels of government."

He said the money spent and the bureaucracy developed to administer a multiplicity of welfare programs is "staggering to contemplate."

He said "a whole new concept" is needed to assist human betterment, avoid duplication of services and provide uniformity of services across the country.

"Such a program would act as a catalyst to the initiative

Infiltration Rate Rises in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Defence Secretary David Packard said Friday that North Vietnamese infiltration has increased in South Vietnam "rather substantially," but "progress in Vietnamization is such that our withdrawal is going to continue."

He said at the same time that "U.S. commanders are concerned about possible North Vietnamese thrusts into South Vietnam."

Packard, who recently made an on-the-spot check of the Vietnam situation, refused to discuss either numbers or timetables in connection with further U.S. troop withdrawals as South Vietnamese government troops take over more of the fighting.

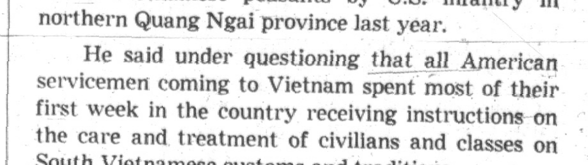
SOLDIERS TOLD TO BE KIND

SAIGON (Reuters) — American officers are re-emphasizing to their men the necessity for proper treatment and care of civilians and other non-combatants in South Vietnam, a United States military spokesman said today.

The spokesman did not specifically link the re-indoctrination of American troops with the recent reports of the alleged My Lai massacre of South Vietnamese peasants by U.S. infantry in northern Quang Ngai province last year.

He said under questioning that all American servicemen coming to Vietnam spent most of their first week in the country receiving instructions on the care and treatment of civilians and classes on South Vietnamese customs and traditions.



Th' pen is mightier than th' sword — but a lead pencil is tops on election day.

Last Liquor Hearing Here After New Year

VANCOUVER (CP) — Royal commissioners investigating British Columbia's liquor laws hope to present their full report and recommendations to the government in time for the Jan. 22 sitting of the provincial legislature, Commissioner Ed Lawson said in an interview Friday. The three commissioners will hold one more public hearing in Victoria on Jan. 5.

Between the archbishop's mar-afternoon at the final Vancouver liquor commission hearings Thursday.

Out of it came some useful intelligence for the drinker. Examples:

Drink your whisky straight — dilution gets you drunk faster.

Fat men can't handle their alcohol any better than thin men.

Don't bother drinking olive oil before going off on a toot. Not only is that coating-the-stomach theory a myth, but it will get you drunk faster.

Drinking milk can help, however.

The kindly hostess who insists you stay an hour after your last drink may be just preparing you to fall into the arms of the police sniff squad.

Carbonated or fruit-based mixers are better than water — if you have to mix at all.

These hints emerged from the testimony of Dr. Clifford Chappel, president of the Bio-Research Laboratories Ltd. His testimony was in the aid of beer — he was appearing at part of the presentation of the Brewers Association of Canada.

The point of Dr. Chappel's testimony, complete with charts, references to learned journals and scientific jargon, was to show that beer is better than other beverages and should continue to be favored by lower taxes.

The three-man commission, which ended its current round of hearings Thursday, was skeptical about some of the claims for beer made by Dr. Chappel. Hearings resume Jan. 5.

Caption Mistook Rhodes for Groos

A picture caption on Page 8 of Friday's Times erroneously identified the speaker at Oak Bay's all-candidates meeting Thursday night as aldermanic candidate Harold Groos.

. . . BENNETT SEEKS GUARANTEED PAY

of low income Canadians . . . to go on to develop their skills and improve their lot and that of their families by their own efforts," he said.

GRANTS FAILED

Equalization payments from the federal government "to certain provincial governments" have largely failed to ensure a minimum level of economic well - being Bennett said.

The brief continues the province's insistence that equalization be distributed in the form of payments to people rather than to governments.

Bennett said the federal government should not entirely vacate the direct fields of income and corporation taxes and succession or estate taxes, as previously demanded. Bennett argues these are historically provincial fields.

Ottawa should stay in the field to the extent necessary to finance a national guaranteed income plan, Bennett said.

He gave no indication what portion of those taxes Ottawa might require to finance a plan.

But he said a substantial part of the federal cost burden would be removed because Ottawa would be giving up payments to persons and governments "such as family and youth allowances, old age security, guaranteed income supplement plans, Canada Assistance Plan, equilization payments to provincial governments and medicare payments.

"In their place would be established a guaranteed annual income for all Canadians.

"The effect would be a substantial decrease in federal government revenue but it would be offset by a substantial decrease in federal government spending responsibilities," he said.

Until Ottawa gets out of direct taxation, Bennett said, it would have the right to continue implementing shared-cost programs in "the national interest, which, strictly speaking, come under exclusive provincial jurisdiction."

NATIONAL CONSENSUS

But there must be "a national consensus" in favor a program before it is implemented; adequate safeguards to ensure that Ottawa doesn't leave the provinces holding the burden once the program is started; and no fiscal equivalent should be paid to provinces who decide to opt out.

Bennett can expect opposition to this view from Ontario, which protested strongly the refusal of Ottawa to let it have the equivalent of federal taxes collected there for the medicare plan while Ontario, was not a member.

Bennett said the proposals to be presented to the conference next week are not intended to reiterate B.C.'s general position set out last year, when he called for the division of Canada into five regions.

He made no reference to his boundary proposals Friday.

The brief reviews the argument that income taxes, corporation and estate taxes belong to the provinces but were occupied by the federal government as a result of the pressures created by the first and second world wars.

In a realistic vein it accepts that so long as Ottawa occupies the fields it should have the constitutional powers to make conditional grants to the provinces for important programs such as medicare and hospitalization.

The brief recognizes that "if we are to have a strong and united country then we must bring those materially less fortunate Canadians up to at least a minimum level of economic well being."

MORE BENEFIT

More people in depressed areas would benefit from a guaranteed income plan than would be the case in prosperous areas, he said, but he stressed that Ottawa depends for much of its revenue on the maintenance of economic activity in the high growth areas such as B.C.

He said B.C. as the highest growth area has "unique problems" caused by the influx of people who create a higher unemployment rate.

"British Columbia requests the federal government make low-cost capital available for job creating projects in housing, water, sewage, pollution, school and hospital facilities."

Bennett said he is going to Ottawa in the spirit of cooperative federalism and in the confidence that Canda's best years lie ahead.

Salt Spring Drive Aids Christmas Fund

Two women, in their 80s, have raised $75 for the Children of Asia Christmas Fund, through their ragpicking efforts on Salt Spring Island.

A class at Gibbins Road Annex Primary School in Duncan has been raising and selling gerbils (Mongolian desert mice) to provide milk and barley for starving children in Korea and India.

A member of the Esquimalt Women's Institute has manufactured a half-ton of soap to be distributed to poverty-stricken families half a world away.

These are only a few examples of ways in which concerned people respond each year to the appeal for funds of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

The USC has conducted the Children of Asia campaign annually in Victoria for the last 17 years.

A small amount goes a long way to alleviate suffering.

Five independent schools in the Shawnigan Lake-Duncan area plan to raise $800 through car washes, dances and concerts.

The money will be used to operate a Calcutta medical dispensary to be taken over by the USC from the Salvation Army.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, USC executive director, explained that the dispensary is designed for the worst malnutrition cases in the city's slums.

Each week a doctor will see 25 of these children, pavement-dwellers who have never known a full stomach or a real home.

Schools involved include Cliffside Preparatory School, Shawnigan Boys' School, Strathcona Lodge School, all of Shawnigan Lake; Brentwood College in Mill Bay, and Queen Margaret School in Duncan.

Dr. Hitschmanova said the very young and the very old are the most concerned Canadians.

"Perhaps they are most sensitive because they stand at the threshold or the very end of life. Perhaps they take more time to imagine how perpetual hunger and illness must hurt."

Whatever the reason, it is the old with a portion of their small pension or the young with their carefully nurtured pennies who make up a great percentage of the USC fund total each year.

This year the USC is attempting to raise $1.3 million in money and gifts for more than 100 projects in eight countries.

While the total now stands at $1 million, Dr. Hitschmanova is not at all certain the goal will be reached.

"The farmers who have always been most generous do not have the liquid cash this year," she said.

Still the gifts of money, clothing and quilts are trickling in.

In Victoria cash contributions to the campaign can be sent to the Times office, 2631 Douglas, or beginning Monday can be deposited with the Yates-Douglas branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Late-Night Sniper Remanded After Entering Guilty Plea

A 22-year-old city man pleaded guilty in court Friday to discharging a firearm in a manner dangerous to other persons and was remanded to Dec. 12 for sentence.

Stephen Curila, 547 Niagara, was arrested early Friday with a companion after an incident involving a shot being fired at a man getting out of his car.

Court was told the accused with his companion had been in a downtown lounge Thursday night when the accused was involved in a fight with a third person.

FOLLOWED CAR

Later, while driving on Douglas, Curila thought he recognized the person he was fighting with in a car ahead of his and followed this car to 385 Burnside West.

Curila intimidated his companion into firing a shot from a .303 Lee Enfield rifle in his car in the direction of the followed driver as he was getting out of his car, court tas told.

The shooting occurred at 1:45 a.m. Friday and the two were apprehended by police shortly after.

When police approached the parked car, the accused threw a rifle from the backseat into the bushes.

A Sooke man was charged with discharging a firearm in a manner endangering other persons and was remanded to Dec. 10 for election of trial.

Jury Urges Training

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury Friday urged British Columbia Hydro to instruct its bus drivers on procedure in the event of an accident following an inquiry into the Nov. 29 death of Samuel Lim, 67, who fell while on a bus.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

It is once again time for stomach ulcers. Those who suffer from duodenal ulcers have probably been having a better time of it during the warm weather months. During the past five or six weeks, however, doctors have once again noted an increase in the number of patients who complain of a pain in the stomach.

Ulcers act up in peculiar ways, especially during the change of seasons. If you were suffering from stomach ulcers last spring it may be that you had complete relief from suffering when summer arrived. And all summer long and well into autumn you may have been moved to hope that you would never suffer from duodenal ulcers again. Then came winter and the pain.

Medical researchers and doctors don't know the reasons why, but they are well aware that change of seasons triggers the suffering. Pretty soon winter will be here in full blast and many ulcers will quiet down until spring, when they will flare up again.

Gently now, Capt. J. A. Fulton eases Provider in.

'This Ship Makes Love Not War'

By PAT DUFOUR

Channel fever hit the Maritime Command Pacific's newest ship, HMCS Provider, Friday night as she steamed toward Esquimalt.

It was worse than scurvy.

LS Harvey Parsons explained the attack when we went aboard the operational supply ship this morning to travel the last few miles into HMC Dockyard.

"I guess the expression comes from the Limeys and describes the restlessness you feel when you're almost home.

"Nobody in the ship wanted to sleep last night, but no one would admit. We'd keep saying we were going to hit the sack then play another and another round of cards."

Parsons is one of the lucky ones in the 180-man ship's company, most of whom were sent from Victoria to Halifax to bring back the newest Esquimalt ship. He didn't go east until August.

Most went last January.

●

But the ship's coxswain, CPO Brian Hunt, has been away since Dec. 27.

Asked how his wife felt about looking after their home and three children for a year-long stretch, the chief said, "She's used to it."

The fever even hit the Provider's skipper, Capt. J. A. Fulton.

As she steamed past Duntze Head and saluted her new commander, Rear-Admiral H. A. Porter, a signalman flashed a message from shore.

The captain smiled as the flags told him his wife and two daughters were waiting on the jetty.

An excited throng of relatives waited impatiently as Provider slid her 550 feet alongside jetty A.

One seaman, scanning the sea of faces for a familiar one, whispered, "They're sure glad to see us," then added. "I wonder what the wives of men in other Esquimalt ships will think."

He was referring to the fact that Provider will be able to keep the Esquimalt ships at sea for a much longer period than before. Fulton estimates she can service all Esquimalt-based ships at sea for as long as 50 days.

●

This is no man-o'-war — Provider has no armament.

As Lieut. George Jackson explained: "We make love — not war!"

He said Provider's crew, especially bosuns, engineers and supply hands, had to be the most efficient in the service.

Jackson described his ship as "a darned efficient work-horse" and cited a recent cruise to Britain and Denmark. Provider refuelled and supplied the aircraft carrier HMCS Bonadventure and eight destroyer-escorts in a non-stop stand that lasted from 8 one morning to 5 the next.

●

None of the ship's company seemed to feel they would rather be in a fighting ship.

One explained: "Serving in a fighting ship in peace time can be a pretty frustrating thing. You become over-trained and never get a chance to do you real thing.

"In our ship we're doing the real job we were built for, and it's a good one. She's modern but because of the small size of our crew and the magnitude of our job we all have to really know our business.

"You do more seamanship here than in any ship I've served in."

Powerline in Park Hit by Recreationists

Spokesmen for local conservation groups indicated today they're strongly opposed to a provincial government decision to chop 7.4 acres off Goldstream Park to provide right-of-way for a B.C. Hydro power line.

"Surely to goodness they could have found an area outside the park," said Howard English, a director on the Victoria Fish and Game Society.

He said parkland near a metropolitan area is many times more valuable than wilderness land in remote parts of the Interior of B.C.

He expressed concern that the government could push through the order-in-council decision despite the fact Goldstream is a Class A park.

"As I understand it Class A means nothing can happen to it, period."

KIERNAN BLAMED

Bob Kennedy, society president, blamed Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

"Under the minister we've got now you've got a mining company dumping mine tailings into Buttle Lake, and that's a Class A park.

"If they can prove they can make a buck at it, they'll go ahead and do it."

The Fish and Game society will hold a general meeting Dec. 15 to discuss the matter, and the meeting will be open to the public.

NO SENSE

"There's no sense in having lots of electricity and lots of industry if there's no recreational area," Kennedy said.

Al Wright, active in the Fish and Game Society and the Amalagamated Conservation Society, criticized the reasoning behind the decision to give B.C. Hydro the land on the south-east corner of the park.

"They said it's not being used by the public, but everybody knows there are parks in the interior that aren't getting used — that doesn't mean we can use them for industrial purposes."

McPherson Best Building

McPherson Playhouse Friday was chosen as best building designed on the Island in the last five years by a panel of Vancouver architects.

An Architecture Institute of British Columbia design excellence award went to Victoria architect Alan Hodgson, 404 Henry.

In the judges' assessment McPherson Playhouse was called "a bold simple statement."

The architect "was uninhibited by the existing structure (the old playhouse) in his design."

Judges for the award, presented for the first time, were: Ray Toby, chairman of the Vancouver Design Panel; Wolfgang Gerson, head of the University of British Columbia school of architecture; and Vancouver architect, Richard Archambault.

Saanich Earmarks $34,000 to Start Colquitz Project

A firm start has been made by Saanich council on improving Colquitz Creek.

Two reports have looked into possible improvements, and volunteers have cleared a small area.

Now, council is setting aside $34,000 to purchase strips of land along the neglected waterway, which runs 6.2 miles from Beaver Lake to Portage Inlet and drains an area of 12,500 acres—almost three times the size of the city of Victoria.

★ ★ ★

Saanich is purchasing the 34-acre Quick Farm, off Wilkinson Road, plus two smaller pieces of property. The money will come from sale of municipal properties under a bylaw expected to receive final approval later this month.

"It's a start in protecting the bank," said municipal comptroller-treasurer John Tribe. He added that the purchases are, to the best of his knowledge, the first along the creek.

The $34,000 to be spent includes a down payment of $23,500 on the Quick Farm which will cost a total of $93,000. The remaining $10,500 is for two smaller pieces of land in the same area.

An economic study by Reid, Crowther and Partners made public last summer recommended expenditure of $689,000 to buy land along the Colquitz for flood control and water conservation.

The study backed up one made earlier by municipal design engineer Frank Neate (Colquitz River: An Appraisal and Plan) which put the cost of land acquisition at $560,000 against $3 million for enclosing the neglected waterway.

The economic study, however, recommended against proceeding with the total Colquitz Open Space Plan, which involved a system of lakes and streams, and which Neate presented to a closed meeting of Saanich council in 1968.

★ ★ ★

Total cost of the open space plan was put at $5.78 million and $6.98 million for an alternate.

A council meeting earlier this year indicated support for the lesser Colquitz plan.

The specific purchase of land in the Quick's Bottom area was recommended by Neate in his 1967 plan.

Uvic Prof Awarded $7,000

University of Victoria classics professor Herbert H. Huxley has received a $7,000 Canada Council fellowship to be applied during sabbatical leave.

Prof. Huxley said today if he obtains leave-of-absence from the university he plans to complete two books which have already been commissioned.

They are an anthology of translated medieval Latin lyric poetry and a translation of Phaedra by the Latin poet Seneca.

Prof. Huxley, now teaching his second year at Uvic, recently edited an anthology of Latin verse entitled Corolla Camenae — Garland of the Muse — which was published by the university and designed and printed by Morriss Printing Co. Ltd. of Victoria.

Leave fellowships totalling $1 million were granted to 135 university teachers in the social sciences and humanities.

CHIEF RAPS BAD PUBLICITY

'Entire Force Is Now Suspect'

Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson Friday termed "unfair" the publicity given three unidentified Saanich policemen, disciplined by the Saanich police commission and himself earlier in the week.

"We have 65 men here who are now all under suspicion by the public," he said.

★ ★ ★

He was referring to exposure given a statement by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis Wednesday stating one policeman had been demoted, another suspended for 10 days and a third reprimanded by Pearson for an incident at a party last month.

Pearson confirmed the disciplinary action but added the publicity it received was a "dirty shame."

He said the matter was an internal problem and the police officers in question had suffered enough "from the rap over the knuckles."

"Any other industrial inquiry would not have been treated the way this has."

The three were never publicly named but referred to as constables A, B, and C.

The commission demoted one of the officers for using a police cruiser while off duty to pick up friends and deliver them to party he was attending.

★ ★ ★

The on-duty policeman who had driven the cruiser to the party was suspended 10 days by the commission.

A third policeman, off duty but at the party, was reprimanded by Pearson for not reporting the actions of the other two.

"People are asking which one are you, constable A, B, or C," the chief said, noting the impact on the department.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHEN GREATER VICTORIA was smaller and her problems fewer, I regarded amalgamation as a dirty word. Each of our four municipalities were separate and distinct in function, and so they should remain.

Victoria was where we went to shop for anything that couldn't be bought at the nearest small store, and were told by too many merchants that they couldn't possibly deliver beyond the five-mile circle.

Saanich, then more rural than suburban and determined to remain so, looked wall-eyed at Victoria. The city wasn't going to creep over her borders, and had better not try!

★

Esquimalt was a small, snug navy preserve, and Oak Bay was Oak Bay.

This sectionalism was all very well until the outside world discovered us, and a population that has brought problems as well as benefits came surging in.

The old distinctions began to blur, the shopping sections mushroomed forth, and traffic multiplied. Along with all this, and as a result of it, division by municipality began to make less sense.

★

Necessity for concerted action on matters that no area could deal with alone was forced upon us. Hence the regional board, manned by representatives of the four urban-suburban municipalities and their neighbors.

But a regional board, though it has performed usefully at times, has never impressed me as anything more than a makeshift where Greater Victoria is concerned.

In a city of no more than medium size, each of four municipalities is free to bring in its own bylaws, and maintain its own set of local services. I think it's time we set about deciding whether it makes sense to ply four separate parish pumps.

I don't think it does any more. Increasingly, in fact, I see our present system of four-way local government as redundant, wasteful of time and tax money, and in terms of efficient operation, more than a little ridiculous.

A LETTER HERE FROM John C. Chapman of 2606 James Island Road, who feels that in a recent column, I not only convicted the United States without trial, but by implication, the U.S. Army officer charged with murder of Vietnamese civilians. This on evidence that could be prejudiced.

The letter continues thus:

★

"Can you really be sure that the United States soldiers in Vietnam would make a host of bitter and disillusioned veterans? Would this host be any larger percentage wise than those at home now who are disillusioned and bitter? You are right in your contention that never before have Americans in such numbers opposed themselves so strenuously to an official position. You fail to add the fact that except on two other occasions Americans have not had the opportunity. If you read history you will know that the opposition to the U.S. Civil War was just as loud and vociferous as present day crowds but there were not as many people. In the Korean conflict there was no war and people did protest but the Civil Rights movement had not reached the full tide of its fury at that time.

"And now with no declaration of war to make them traitors, and swelled with the victories of civil strife great numbers of Americans can openly oppose or pretend to oppose their government.

"And in all sincerity, where else but in a 'functioning democracy achieved at home' could a minority have such rights. Behind the Iron Curtain? In Red China? In Franco's Spain? Never!

"In two great wars, Canada picked up the torch of Liberty before America. Why damn them this time for being first?"

To all this, a brief answer. In the matter of a war she should never have embarked on, the United States stands self-convicted.

And, with all sympathy for a troubled but still-great country, if that was the torch of liberty the United States picked up in Vietnam, her definition of liberty needs changing.

We have added a second item to our Christmas shopping—a box of pulling-crackers bought on impulse—but there we stick and no doubt will until a startled glance at the calendar jolts us into action.

★

However, that fact isn't going to stop me from offering a suggestion to husbands: Get a list of your wife's sizes, plus style and color preferences if you can, and file it in your pocket-book.

Sales ladies offer help to the extent that they're able, but such a list makes gift-hunting a lot easier.
